The Barley Farmer About La Crosse

knows that he tills and cultivates the soil that grows the finest barley grown in the world. He also knows that for fifty-five years the brewers of have bought the cream of every northern barley crop. Peerless Beer is brewed only from the best barley grown in America and the finest hops grown in fragrant gardens of Old Bohemia.

The quality of Peerless thus comes from the juices of the best barley and hops grown on earth, and it is brewed by the Gund Natural Process—"The Old German Method." A better beer than Peerless is impossible. You should order a case for your home today. Telephone and it will be delivered at once. It has that good unforgetable flavor.

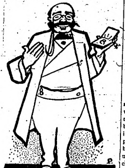
THE TOWN THAT PUSH BUILT

VIII.—The Up to Date Jeweler



THIS is the jeweler who needed
Some boots and shoes and wisely heeded
What he was told by the shoe man's ad.
And went and bought the best he had
And paid with the hardware merchant's bill—
Which came from the furniture dealer's till,
Where it went when the clothing dealer bought
From the dry goods man, which the butcher got
From the grocer who had settlement made
With the money the honest workman paid.

P. S.—The local dealer who's up to snuff
Will always advertise his stuff.

A writer for Hampton's Magazine gives what purports to be an account in detail of the steps by which a water power trust monopoly is getting a foothold in this country. His article is somewhat melodramatic with its references to a king and his cohorts, but if it were a more picture of possibilities it would still have some claim on the attention of the public. For if it is read in the light of the history of other trusts it will be seen that organization, great resources, centralization of management must exert tremendous influence in this case as they have in the others.

Residents of this section of Minnesota who in the past have had business to transact at the U. S. Land Office at Crookston will greatly regret to learn that Frank Montague, for fourteen years one of the efficient clerks in this office, has been transferred to the Cass Lake land office. Mr. Montague was at all times courteous and affable and possessed a knowledge of the land laws that made him a valuable servant for the government. His transfer to Cass Lake is due to the fact that this office is not strictly up to date, and it is quite likely that he will be returned to Crookston again in the near future.

Mr. R. D. V. Carr, the well known Middle River editor, has recently been appointed a game warden. The selection is a good one and Mr. Carr will make an efficient officer. In obligating himself to the kitchen cabinet, however, we are afraid that he will lose some of that independence he prates so much about. But then it has always been our opinion that by independence Mr. Carr means Democratic.

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD

Everything indicates that the price of wheat will be much higher later on, and farmers should be in no great hurry to market their crops. The Red Lake county farmers don't need the cash now nearly as badly as the millers will want the wheat later on.

The Assistant Secretary of Agriculture for the United States says that the farm products of the United States will exceed eight billions of dollars in value, and this will mean the greatest amount of wealth taken by the farmers from the soil, in the history of the country.

Harriman would be all right if he could eat well, sleep soundly and develops trength enough to run a mile every morning before breakfast.

Now Is the Time to Buy.

C. M. Carlson, the genial and wide-awake real estate man of Strandquist, was in town Monday attending to business affairs. He reports that there has been great activity in the land business in his part of the country during the fore part of the summer. Many new settlers have come and there is room for many more. Land is still cheap but is increasing in value. Those from other states are surprised at its fertility. A farmer lately from Indiana, decided last spring to plant everything that is usually raised on the farms in said state, including corn, and he claims that all he has planted has grown as well here as in Indiana. Mr. Carlson believes that now is the opportune time to buy land, it will never be cheaper.—Warren Sheaf.

Chippewa Indians at the Fair.

So great was the attraction the public found in the Indian village of Sisseton Sioux at the last Minnesota State Fair that the board of managers has arranged for a similar feature in connection with the State Fair of Sept. 6 to 11.

This time, however Chippewa Indians will appear where the Sioux were wont to live and move have their being on the State Fair grounds. Hur-ta-wel-onan, a noted Indian scout, has been sent into the woods around about Walker and has secured a goodly band of Chippewa braves, squaws and papooses from the hunting ground where Major Wilkinson and other brave soldiers met their death during the last Indian uprising.

The Indian village will again be pitched upon "Machinery Hill"—this time just north of the Swedish village, which is a new 1909 feature.

Good Story, All Right.

Here's a true potato story. A Minneapolis lad, 15 years old, was in poor health, thought to be affected with tuberculosis, and desiring some out of town work he rented a four acre tract in Hennepin county, where a flock of sheep had been feeding, planted it to potatoes, cultivated and bugged them and a few days ago borrowed a neighbor's potato digger realizing from his crops $500, besides practically regaining his health. Pretty good story, isn't it?—G. S. Pease in Anoka Union.

A Narrow Escape.

Edgar N. Bayliss, a merchant of Robinsonville, Del., wrote: "About two years ago I was thin and sick, and coughed all the time and if I did not have consumption, it was near to it. I commenced using Foley's Honey and Tar, and it stopped my cough, and I am now entirely well, and have gained twenty-eight pounds, all due to the good results from taking Foley's Honey and Tar." A. Bjerkhoel.

Testifies After Four Years.

Carlisle Center, N. Y. G. B. Burhans, writes: "About four years ago I wrote you that I had been entirely cured of kidney trouble by taking two bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy, and after four years I am again pleased to state that I have never had any return of those symptoms, and I am evidently cured." Foley's Kidney Remedy will do the same for you. A. Bjerkhoel.

Health and Beauty Aid.

Cosmetics and lotions will not clear your complexion of pimples and blotches like Foley's Orino Laxative, for indigestion, stomach and liver trouble and habitual constipation. Cleanses the system and is pleasant to take. A. Bjerkhoel.

Threshing Is General.

Threshing out of the shock was commenced in this section last week and all of the machines are now busy. Reports thus far received are very good. In almost every case the yield is larger this year than on the same land one year ago—and a year ago the crop was the best one harvested for many years.

A Big Investment.

"That's right, confound ye!" mused Mr. Meddergrass the first evening after his return from the city, pouring a churn of buttermilk into the trough for his pigs. "That's right! Gobble it up. You will represent an investment of thousands of dollars to me by pig killin' time. I bought a glass o' buttermilk at a sody fountain in the city an' they charged me 10 cents for it."—Chicago Post.

How to Cook Chicken and Macaroni.

Cover a jointed fowl with boiling water and boil for five minutes. Then cook until tender with the water just below the boiling point. Fry a tablespoonful of bits of salt pork, sprinkle the pieces of fowl with a half teaspoonful of salt, dust with a tablespoonful of flour and brown in the hot fat. Arrange the pieces in the center of a fireproof platter. Put around it one-fourth of a pound of macaroni which has been broken into half inch pieces and cooked tender in salted water with an onion and part of a carrot. Pour over a sauce made of one-fourth of a cupful each of flour and butter cooked together and one pint of chicken liquor. Sift over with cheese and set in oven long enough to melt cheese.

How to Dry Clean a Waist.

Here is a recently discovered way to clean a white lace waist that is equal to any dry cleaning process ever tried and one that requires an outlay of only a few cents instead of the dollars usually needed to make a soiled lace waist again presentable. This is nothing more than a simple cake of magnesia. Rub the magnesia thoroughly over the garment in question, paying extra attention to the more soiled places, roll it in a cloth and lay it away for several days, then shake it lightly to dislodge any of the chalky substance that may cling to it, and you will behold a metamorphosed waist that will delight your eyes with its freshness.

How to Clean Ivory Handled Knives.

A housewife often finds that the ivory handles of her knives have become spotted. They look rather hopeless, and yet they can be easily cleaned. A piece of chamois skin moistened in water and then dipped in powdered pumice will take any spot off ivory. Good hard rubbing is required, but after that and a good washing in hot water and soap the ivory will look like new.

How to Clean Silver Quickly.

Place two quarts of potato peelings and one quart of water in an iron frying pan or spider, cover and boil ten minutes. Then drop in as many silver spoons, knives and forks as the water will cover. Continue the boiling and in less than ten minutes they will look like new. Remove the silver, wash in usual manner, rubbing well with dry, soft towel.

Convincing His Chum.

Johnny (in the garden)—Father, father, look out of the window!

Father (putting out his head)—What a nuisance you children are! What do you want now?

Johnny (with a triumphant glance at his playfellow)—Tommy Brooks wouldn't believe you'd got no hair on the top of your head.—London Tit-Bits.

Only Lunch.

"Have luncheon today?"

"Nope."

"Thought I saw you going out."

"You did, but I had lunch, not luncheon. I only had 15 cents to spend."—Exchange.

Let us not talk ill of our enemies. They only never deceive us.—Houssaye.

Another Log Drive.

A log drive containing about 9,000,000 feet of logs for the Thief River Falls Lumber company arrived here the first of the week. This, with what was on hand, will be more than enough to keep the lumber Co. supplied with logs until after it freezes up. There will be about 5,000,000 feet of logs put in the river at the outlet later on this season and these will be allowed to come down with the ice next spring and will keep the mill running until navigation on the lake opens up.

CITY SCHOOLS OPEN MONDAY

Supt. J. H. Hay Gives Some Advice and Makes Suggestions to Parents.

Monday Is a Legal Holiday but It Has Never Been Observed Here.

School opens on Monday, Sept. 6th, at 9 a. m. Though Monday is a legal holiday, it is never formally observed as such in this city, so it was considered advisable to begin work on that date. The day may be made use of as a holiday later in the year, when it will be of more value as such to the students and teachers.

The promotion cards issued last May determine the room, grade and building to which the pupil should report. For the further information of new residents, it might be stated that all children on the east side of the river and below the high school grades attend the Knox school. The dividing line between the High school and the Central districts, as fixed by the board of education one year ago, is Third street from the Soo depot to Main avenue, thence north to Fourth street and west on Fourth. All pupils below the seventh grade on the west side attend either the High School or the Central building, as indicated by this boundary. The seventh and eighth grade pupils in the two districts last named enroll at the Central; all high school students at the High School.

Nonresident pupils who have completed the common branches are requested to present state high school board certificates for admission to the high school, or, in lieu thereof, some form of certification from county superintendent or teacher that the common branches have been completed.

The high school courses available for the ensuing year are the classical, scientific, English, domestic science, commercial and the normal. The first three named are those ordinarily presented in secondary schools. The commercial course includes every study offered in the average business college, but with a difference in the element of time. Commercial subjects in a high school course receive the same attention and time as do other studies, and thus take longer to complete than in a regular business college, where, sometimes as much time as five hours per day are devoted to one subject. The domestic science course in every detail is modeled on the course of instruction offered in the Minneapolis schools in this subject. It includes every feature of household art and cover a range of subjects requiring work in every grade from the third to twelfth. The normal training course, will, as formerly, prepare students for the teachers' profession.

All high school students are compelled by the rulings of the state high school board to take English for the four years of the course. They are requested to choose only those other studies which will be foundational for their life work, and parents, students and teachers, by consultation, should arrive at some intelligent judgement in this matter of choosing a course in high school by the end of the freshman year.

All the high school courses are absolutely free to every student. Free text books prevail in this district, but students are required to furnish their own pens, pencils and exercise paper.

A teachers meeting is called for Saturday afternoon at 2 p. m. and all teachers will be in their respective rooms ready to begin work on Monday at 9 a. m. For obvious reasons it is essential that parents see that their children are enrolled the first day. Pupils registering a month or two late cannot hope to receive promotion at the close of the year, as it takes nine full months to accomplish nine months of work in a school nowadays.

Rural teachers who desire to raise their standings and certificates and to make up conditions will be welcomed at any time of the year to the normal classes and to those in which they may take up the needed subjects.

The new high school teachers are Miss Ruth Stubbings of Northwestern University, Chicago, who will care for domestic science, Miss Gertrude Schwalbe of the Wisconsin University, English, Mr. S. H. Hoes of Ann Arbor University, science and mathematics. The new grade teachers are Miss Kohler, Whal, Connelly, Larson, Haslip and Lomen.

J. H. HAY,
Superintendent.

HEARING TO BE SOON

Engineers Have Fixed Sept. 13, but Congressman Steenerson Wants It Later.

Local People Are Asked to Co-operate With Our Congressman in the Fight.

Mayor Hamre is in receipt of a letter from Congressman Halvor Steenerson to the effect that the corps of engineers at Washington will receive oral arguments and documentary evidence in the matter of the proposed improvements of the Red Lake river from Thief River Falls to the outlet on the 13th of September, and asks that local people take action and secure as much data regarding the matter as possible.

Congressman Steenerson will personally appear in Washington and make the oral arguments in favor of the proposed improvements, but it is not going to be convenient for him to be in Washington on the 13th and he is going to endeavor to have the hearing postponed until some future date.

Mr. Steenerson recently visited St. Paul and there learned of the objections to the improvements made by Mayor Shunk. Mr. Shunk says that river is a good one and that in its present condition it is sufficient for the amount of traffic carried on. He says that the freight hauled by boat each year amounts to only between 500 and 600 tons. This may be true, but if the river was improved it would allow a much larger tonnage as there are numerous periods during the year when navigation cannot be carried on owing to the obstructions in the river. If the channel was deepened and obstructions removed, it would greatly increase navigation.

Prices for Grains.

The American Society of Equity has fixed the following prices for grain and it s said that a very large number of farmers are pleged not to market their grain until these prices are received:

Spring wheat at Minneapolis or Duluth per bushel $1.15.

Durum wheat at Minneapolis or Duluth, per bushel $1.05.

Flax at Minneapolis or Duluth, per bushel, $1.50

Oats at Minneapolis or Duluth, per bushel, 50c.

Barley at Minneapolis or Duluth per bushel 65c.

Rye at Minneapolis or Duluth, per bushel, 75c.

Corn at Minneapolis or Duluth, per bushel, 60c.

Frank Patnode Buried.

Red Lake Falls, Minn. Aug. 30.—The funeral of Frank Patnode, aged 27, of Colraine, was held here Friday. He was a former Red Lake Falls boy, being the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dolf Patnode. He was employed as a switchman and with another man was standing on one track when a train from behind came along, knocked him down and passed over his body. He was dead when picked up. He leaves a wife and one son, father, mother, five brothers and two sisters.

Wanted—Night clerk at Hotel Ogahmah.

Give us one order and you will give us another

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone, anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost.

BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the usual retail prices.

$8.50 HEDGETHORN PUNCTURE-PROOF SELF-HEALING TIRES A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

Masks.

Masks are still in use among savage nations to scare away demons.

The Palolo.

That remarkable worm of the Polynesian islands, known as the palolo, seems to regulate its periodical appearances for the purposes of reproduction by the moon. The natives predict the annual appearance of the palolo by observing the lunar phases.

Rotten Row.

The name of "Rotten row" in Hyde park, London, is derived from "route du roi," or "king's drive."

Magnesium.

When exposed to an open flame, magnesium in its powdered metallic state will instantly combine with the oxygen of the air and form an explosive flash of intense white flame and change into a dense white smoke of oxide of magnesium.

The British Isles.

There are 77,683,084 acres in the British isles.

The Ragman Rolls.

"The Ragman Rolls" were a series of documents recording the progress of Edward I. through Scotland in 1296, with the names of the nobles and others who did homage to him.

The Polka.

The polka was originally a Servian war dance.

Frogs.

Frogs may do some harm to fish in a pond, but German experts have decided that this is outweighed by the good they do in destroying injurious insects.

Prussic Acid.

Prussic acid poisons every living thing, plants as well as animals.

The Sweetest Town.

The sweetest town in the world is Grasse, in the foothills back of Cannes, on the French Riviera. All through the year Grasse is really one big bubbling cauldron, where are distilled gallons, barrels and hogsheads of perfumes.

Imitation Meerschaum.

It is a common notion that genuine meerschaum can be differentiated from the imitation article by the fact that the real thing floats on water, but imitation meerschaum floats also. Imitation meerschaum can be made which will color better than the real, though it does not last so long, and the color is likely to come in streaks. It is difficult for a man who is not in the business to tell the real from the imitation.

Widows and Widowers.

In England there are 114 widows to every 54 widowers. In Italy the relative numbers are 136 and 60; in France, 139 and 73; in Germany, 135 and 50; in Austria, 121 and 44.

River Water.

Raw river water should be stored antecedent to filtration for thirty days, in the opinion of Dr. A. C. Houston, director of water examinations, London. Storage reduces the number of bacteria of all sorts and if sufficiently prolonged devitalizes the microbes of water borne diseases (typhoid bacillus and cholera virus).

European Flowers.

Only 10 per cent of all the different European flowers have any perfume.

Statues in Paris.

Few capitals of the world are so well equipped, not to say overstocked, with statues of public men as Paris. No one has ever attempted to count them, but a conservative estimate places their number at considerably in excess of 1,000.

Asbestus.

Asbestus was known to the ancients, who used it in which to wrap bodies previous to cremation to separate the human ashes from those of the funeral pyre.

The Chinese Almanac.

The Chinese almanac is said to have the largest circulation of any book in the world. Eight million copies of it are edited and distributed for sale in the various provinces, not a single copy being returned to the publishers.

Women in Spain.

The women of the lower classes in Spain do not make calls nor read books and have no "parties" in the American sense of the word. They do their household work and go to church, and that is all there is of life to them. Their husbands are very jealous of them, and they grow old and weary before their time.

Breathing.

For each respiration an adult inhales on an average one pint of air.

The Barber's Basin.

The barber's basin is a fairly common barber sign on the continent of Europe. It is a big basin with a half circle cut out of one side, which the victim used to hold up under his chin while the barber worked.

Bees.

Bees were unknown to the Indians, and they were brought over from England only a few years after the landing of the pilgrim fathers. It was more than two centuries after the first white invasion of New England, however, before modern beekeeping began. The industry of the present day dates from the invention of the movable frame hive by Langstreth in 1852.

A Woman's Opinion.

I envy the woman who stays at home,
For the summer cottage is not all joy.
It's all very well for a man, perhaps,
And just the thing for a growing boy.
But when does the woman have time to rest?
Where is the comfort that she would wish?
There isn't much pleasure for her, I say,
In daily cooking a mess of fish.

She makes the beds, and she sweeps the floors,
And all day long she is busy quite.
There's always something for her to do
From early morn until late at night.
Her husband must catch the sunrise car,
And breakfast for him she has to get.
There are dishes to wash and clothes to mend
And pies to bake and bread to set.

One round of cooking her summer seems,
A season of frying and stewing things,
For only a woman ever knows
The toil and worry each mealtime brings.
Over a hot stove long she stands,
And it seems that her labors are never done.
Man has a splendid time, no doubt,
But where is the woman who counts this fun?

PLOTS OF YOUNG SOCIALISTS

Valuable Information Given the Authorities by Leon Larsson, Who Is Said to Have Become Disgusted with the Tactics of the Leaders of His Party—Alleged Attempt Against the Life of the King of Sweden While He Was Still Crownprince.

SWEDEN.

Leon Larsson, the Stockholm socialist, who has become so disgusted with some of the tactics of the leaders of his party, that he has now finally left it, has recently given much valuable information concerning the plots that had been planned by the young socialists against peaceful citizens. He has been telling one story after another and there is especially one which has been given much publication, the purported attempt against King Gustaf's life while he was still the crownprince. Larsson states that when the present King of Sweden was attending a dedication festival in one of the central cities of Sweden a few years ago, the young socialists had placed a dynamite bomb under the pavilion where the king was to speak. The fuse thread was to have been lighted near the river, which was quite a distance away. At the last moment the young man who had to light the fuse backed out and cut the thread with his knife. Larsson is now relating a whole lot of similar stories to the police, and it is stated that while there are no direct proofs, he has furnished the authorities with much important information which may lead eventually to several arrests.

The big strike is practically at an end. The Stockholm Street Railroad company has scored a complete victory over its employes, who joined the strikers at the beginning of the month. Those who formerly received the maximum wage have been re-employed at the minimum rate, and they have also been compelled to sign a personal contract to furnish bonds guaranteeing their future loyalty to the company. On the other hand, the strike breakers have been rewarded with the best paying positions the company has.

Owing to the present industrial unrest which exists all over Sweden the executive committee of the international peace congress have decided to postpone the meeting of the congress in Stockholm this summer. The Swedish capital has been no suitable place to hold a peace conference, judging from the events which have been crowding fast upon one another in the world of strike and dissension there.

Prince Christoforos of Greece arrived at Stenhammar this month to pay a visit to his sister's daughter, Princess Maria of Sodermanland. The difference in age between the uncle and his niece is hardly two years. The prince is eighteen years younger than Princess Maria's mother, who was the Grand Duchess Alexandra, born a princess of Greece.

Archduke Franz Ferdinand of Austria departs during the early part of September for Germany to participate in the German military maneuvers, from there extending his journey to Sweden, paying, on behalf of Emperor Franz Joseph, a return visit to the King of Sweden, who was a guest of the emperor's at Vienna not long ago.

Vicomte Salvador D'Asseca, a prominent captain in the Portuguese army, has arrived in Stockholm to negotiate for a large number of Swedish telephones from L. M. Ericsson & Co. The phones will be purchased for the use of the Portuguese government and will at first hand be used in the Portuguese army.

Malmo's new public school house has now been completed and is said to be the largest and most modern in all Sweden. It has been erected at a cost of 150,000 crowns. It has a modern heating apparatus and a fine gymnasium in connection.

King Gustaf postponed his outing up at Saro and has since the opening of the strike been in close touch with the situation and has, according to reports been ready to cope with the situation at any time should it take a more serious turn.

Count Axel August Croonhjelm, formerly charge d'affaires in Portugal, celebrated his seventieth birthday the other day in the presence of many men of note in the capital city. The count is still enjoying a vigorous health.

They will get an excellent crop in Tornedalen this year. Although there was a continued drought there during the early part of summer recent rains have helped the oats, barley and rye and the pasturage immensely.

A new theater building is being planned. It will be erected on Birger Jarl street, and it is calculated that it will be completed some time during the fall of 1911.

The agricultural congress, which was to have been held this month in Stockholm, will now be held in October instead.

NORWAY.

To the general relief of the members of the polar expedition, says a dispatch, dated Spitsbergen, Aug. 18, Walter Wellman, the American aeronaut, although considerably shaken by his misfortune, announced that he was more determined than ever not to abandon his plan, but would continue to wrestle with all the difficulties standing in the way of reaching the north pole by means of an airship. Mr. Wellman plans to build a new ship, longer and narrower and of higher speed than that which met with disaster, where improvements will be made, profiting by experience. Workmen already have begun enlarging the airship house and making all ready for another campaign. All the members of the crew of the airship have the utmost confidence in their leader and in the ultimate success of his enterprise. They have asked to go with him on his next voyage. A great many Norwegian papers take a different view of it and regard it as impossible for Wellman to accomplish the feat of reaching the pole by means of an airship. They argue that although a splendid airship may finally be secured the winds that prevail in these regions are so variable that it will be impossible to control an airship and that disaster will stare it in the face every time. Norwegian scientists agree that the only way in which the pole can be reached is by means of a suitably equipped ship, and hence, of course, they pin their faith to their fellow countryman, Roald Amundsen, from whom a great deal is expected, provided that he too will not succumb to the disastrous winds of Spitzbergen and vicinity.

For some reason or other the newspapers in Norway have this year been devoting but little or no space to Emperor William's visit to Norway. In former seasons every move of the emperor was followed most closely, but this year there has been practically nothing said. The cause for this is unknown unless it be that the emperor has requested less publicity himself. He may have thought that there was too much said last year. We have not even been able to ascertain from the Norwegian newspapers whether or not he gave his annual donation of 1,000 crowns to the cathedral at Trondhjem, to which he has been accustomed to give so liberally during all these years.

Bjornstjerne Bjornson is now at his home in Aulestad. He had recovered sufficiently some time ago to take a trip from Larvik to Aulestad by way of Christiania. His face brightened when he saw the old familiar scenes at the capital. Although very much improved he is not able to walk about and it is with difficulty that he can move his feet back and forth. It is hoped that the celebrated author can recover sufficiently to take a trip south this coming fall, which physicians believe will be of immense benefit to him.

The second international congress for the purpose of fighting the dreaded disease of leprosy was opened a week ago last Monday in Bergen, King Haakon presiding. There were 170 delegates present, representing thirty nations, among the delegates being nine from the United States. Dr. G. Armaur Hansen was chosen permanent chairman of the congress.

The National theater has opened up the season with a series of Ibsen plays. Mme. Dybwad appeared as the leading lady in Ibsen's "Vildand," and the play was given to a full house. All of Ibsen's plays are received with greater enthusiasm than ever before.

Professor Gustafson has discovered a grave 4,000 years old near Akerstrand in Omark. He has found some mighty interesting relics and threatens to make a whole lot of people skeptic regarding the proper age of the earth.

A. T. Steen, a Norwegian banker of Paris, who was in the Norwegian capital for a visit when the members of the French parliament were there, has donated a thousand francs to Norway's International Peace society.

The government's custom receipts for the month of July were 5,680,000 crowns, which is less than last year by about 616,000 crowns. No cause is given for this decrease in the country's customs receipts.

Norwegian papers state that while the Swedish strike was in progress that Norwegian workmen contributed not less than 40,000 crowns a week to aid the Swedish workmen to keep up the strike.

There are at present 172,000 horses in Norway. Of this number there are 89,000 found in the villages and cities. The rest are out in the country districts.

Way up in Archangel there have been a series of disastrous fires, which have destroyed 40,000 kegs of turpentine and 100,000 kegs of tar.

DENMARK.

The members of the folkething, who met for the first time Aug. 19, since the formation of the new ministry, were treated to a lively overture by Mlle. Westenholz, a suffragist, whose activity in the cause has brought her into prominence on several previous occasions. Forcing her way past the doorkeepers the woman planted herself in front of the president's chair, and gave the deputies a verbal trouncing. "Here you sit," she cried out, "you Danish men, haggling selfishly in a lust of power over the weal and woe of the country. But the women of Denmark, I tell you, disown you and brand you a lot of hirelings, belonging to no country, who betray the honor of Denmark." The bell of the president and a fire of interruptions from the deputies had no effect on Mlle. Westenholz, who concluded her speech before attendants seized her and removed her from the chamber.

The new ministry of Denmark is received with favor by both the press and the public. Socialist papers, however, criticise it.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

President Taft has instituted a searching investigation of the interior department because of facts that have been brought to his attention in connection with the taking up by private corporations of valuable coal lands in Alaska.

President Taft has ordered that census supervisors who hold political positions, such as secretaryships or chairmanships of county committees, must give up either their political or government position.

Rear Admiral Sperry, who took the Atlantic battleship fleet on its cruise around the world, will be placed on the retired list on Sept. 3. He then will have reached the age of sixty-two years.

Another "peace" fleet is to be sent across the Pacific by Uncle Sam. It will comprise eight of the strongest and fastest cruisers in the naval force and will leave San Francisco on Sept. 5.

President Taft has indicated to callers that in his message to congress next December he will strongly urge the early establishment of a postal savings bank system.

President Taft has ordered a 10 per cent reduction in the enlisted strength of the army. This is expected to save Uncle Sam about $6,000,000 annually.

Announcement is made that Ormsby McHarg of North Dakota, assistant secretary of commerce and labor, will retire from that position on Oct. 1.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

The permanent injunction sought by Western railways against the interstate commerce commission in the famous Missouri river rate case was granted at Chicago by Judges Grosscup, Baker and Kohlsaat of the United States circuit court. The decision, if sustained by the United States supreme court, will, it is said, limit the power of the interstate commerce commission to the settlement of cases of rate discrimination.

"Why in the h—— should I notice Fowler?" asked Speaker Joseph G. Cannon when asked if he had anything to say in reply to the open letter of Representative Charles N. Fowler of New Jersey attacking him for his attitude on currency legislation and the tariff bill.

A jail sentence of thirty days was imposed on James Kenney and Clara Reeves by Judge Alstadt at Omaha because the young people had been caught "spooning" in broad daylight in a little park in the central part of the city.

Two and one-half millions population for Chicago was the estimate made by the compilers of the new city directory. The figures given are 2,457,600, based on the 768,000 names in the directory.

John Panuska, a humble street cleaner of Omaha, has found himself a duke of Russia, member of the czar's nobility and owner of an estate valued at several million dollars.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Angered at the sight of the body of his dead daughter lying dissected on the kitchen table, Frank McGrath, a husky St. Paul teamster, drove three physicians from his home, striking one of the doctors in the face, challenging a second to fight and sending the third rushing pellmell from the house. The girl, who was nine years of age, had died of infantile paralysis and the parents had consented to an autopsy, not knowing that it involved the mutilation of their daughter's body.

Forest fires caused a loss of over $2,000,000 during 1908 in Minnesota, according to the annual report of Forestry Commissioner C. C. Andrews. The Chisholm fire was estimated at $1,500,000 and the remaining $500,000 is made up by all other fires, large and small. A total of 405,748 acres, mostly cut over land, was either wholly or partly burned over during the year.

Four hundred horses participated in the Minneapolis workhorse parade, one of the most unique parades ever witnessed in the Northwest. The affair was given under the auspices of the Minneapolis Humane society. Only delivery and other work horses were allowed to take part for the prizes given for various classes.

John R. Howard, superintendent and dispensing agent, has received instructions from the department of the interior that all saloons doing business within the White Earth reservation be notified to close within thirty days. The order affects saloons at Callaway, Ogema, Waubun and Mahnomen.

The first sale of lots for a new townsite ever conducted by the state was held at Gheen, St. Louis county, and, according to State Auditor S. G. Iverson, who conducted the sale, it was a complete success.

The total valuation of personal property in the state, exclusive of Beltrami county, which has not yet appeared, is $193,405,872. Last year the total for the state was $193,043,319.

Attorney General Simpson says that he may modify his ruling concerning the use of state money for drainage work if it can be shown that public health demands such work.

J. A. Hartigan, state insurance commissioner, was elected president of the National Insurance Commissioners at Colorado Springs, Colo.

After a year of idleness the Chicago Great Western car rebuilding shops at South Park, a St. Paul suburb, have resumed operations.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Sheriff Riley of Itasca county arrested Rev. F. W. Hill, a Methodist minister of Coleraine, on the complaint of some saloonkeepers of Bovey, a nearby town, who charged that he solicited bribes to drop his fight against the saloonmen. The pastor was taken to Grand Rapids, the county seat, and was released on $1,000 bail.

While a multitude of people were watching two acrobats perform on a stage in the street at Hastings Charles J. Raetz, an electrician, descending a pole across the street while working on carnival decorations, came in contact with high power wires, received a shock of 2,600 volts and dropped dead on the pavement.

George Tischer of Duluth, who was injured as a result of a street car colliding with a buggy in which he was riding, is dead. Tischer was a contractor, a former alderman and a commissioner of St. Louis county.

Delbert Slayback, an electrician in the employ of the General Electric company of Minneapolis, was almost instantly killed by touching a live wire.

Mrs. Mary Hagren, a St. Paul washwoman, ended her life at the home of a friend by turning on the gas while she lay on the bed reading the Bible.

Henry Devitt, the seventeen-year-old son of Thomas Devitt of St. Paul, was drowned while swimming near Inver Grove.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Henry W. Fagley, until recently one of the owners of the Boston clothing store at St. Paul, died at Des Moines, Ia., after an illness of four days of typhoid pneumonia. He was fifty-nine years of age.

Frank H. Tibbits, assistant general freight agent of the Chicago Great Western, died suddenly of cerebral hemorrhage at his home in Chicago. He was located in St. Paul from 1899 to 1905.

Thomas Smith, for thirty-five years a well known contractor of St. Paul, is dead at Glendive, Mont., where he had been engaged in business for some years past.

Lieutenant William Budy, one of the most popular members of the St. Paul police force, is dead, aged fifty-seven.

William H. Fredricks, a pioneer photographer of St. Paul, fell dead of heart exhaustion at his home in that city.

Swen Monson, aged sixty-nine, an early settler of Nicollet county, was killed by a train at St. Peter.

C. C. Aurland, eighty years old, one of the pioneer residents of Fergus Falls, is dead.

Thomas Gavin, one of the pioneer residents of Minneapolis, is dead, aged eighty-three.

SERMON AT BASEBALL GAME

Minneapolis Minister Delivers One to a Big Crowd.

Minneapolis experienced its first touch of religious service at a professional baseball game Sunday when Rev. G. L. Morrill delivered a short address before the Minneapolis-Kansas City game at Nicollet park. Fully 7,000 fans were in attendance and that part of the stands which could hear the speaker listened interestedly while Mr. Morrill spoke. He was introduced by Umpire King and quiet reigned throughout the park during the service.

"The West," said Mr. Morrill, "is never content to be behind the East in any progressive movement and will not take a back seat when baseball religious services are considered. For myself I do not usually attend Sunday games because I go every other day in the week, but this is no reason why others than myself should not enjoy the privilege. 'Live and let live' is a pretty good motto and I believe that this crowd is largely made up of men who have but this one weekly chance to see the Minneapolis club fight for the pennant. I believe the only sin of Sunday baseball is for the home team to lose, so I say to the Minneapolis boys 'go in and climb a notch toward the flag.'"

MINISTER PAYS FOR "SOUSE"

Detectives Get Intoxicated Securing Evidence Against "Piggers."

Under orders of Rev. Carl Swain of Minneapolis and his colleagues Jacob P. Brandt and Lewis M. Carson, detectives for the Anti-Saloon league, became intoxicated, according to testimony presented in the Mill City police court against Fred Hawkins, accused of "blind pigging" at Excelsior.

Mr. Swain believes it proper to furnish money for a man to become intoxicated if a violator of the law can be caught by that means. The expenses for the Brandt-Carson "toot" were paid by the minister and his associates.

HEADQUARTERS AT CHICAGO

Great Western Offices to Be Removed From St. Paul.

The general offices of the Chicago Great Western railroad will be removed from St. Paul to Chicago in the next few months. That statement was made by a representative of the J. P. Morgan company in New York. The president's office will be located in Chicago as soon as S. M. Felton, the new president, assumes charge of the road, which will probably be Sept. 1.

Just when the rest of the general offices will be transferred is not definitely settled, but that all will be located there is assured.

QUICKLY CAPTURED BY POSSE

Two Bandits Hold Up Wayzata Bank in Broad Daylight.

About noon two men walked into the State Bank of Wayzata, and, pointing revolvers at Cashier Snure, bade him hand over all the cash in the bank. As they had the drop on him Mr. Snure gave them about $300. The men then ordered him to step into the bank vault and as he did so they turned and fled. A posse, organized by the town marshal of Wayzata, and armed with rifles and revolvers, at once started in pursuit of the robbers and they were captured without the exchange of a shot. All the stolen money was recovered.

GIRL DROPS DEAD OF FRIGHT

Prank of Boys Costs Six-Year-Old Child Her Life.

Theresa, six-year-old daughter of Theodore Oachs, postmaster of Kerkhoven, was frightened to death in that city.

With a group of other girls she was passing a schoolhouse at dusk when some boys in hiding made strange noises to scare them. They ran, Theresa Oachs dropping dead after a short run.

Fail to Secure Any Booty.

Cracksmen entered the postoffice at Mendota, near St. Paul, opened the outside door of the vault, blew off the combination of the second door and tackled the safe inside, but were frightened away by the approach of Town Marshal Thomas Ryan. Two men were later arrested at Savage, who closely answer descriptions of the two robbers.

Babe Falls From Window.

Catherine, the two-year-old daughter of T. H. Spelman of Duluth, accidentally fell from a window and was killed. She was sitting on the edge of a rear window, which was open, but which was protected by a screen. She pressed against the screen and it gave way. The babe fell ten feet, breaking her neck.

Switchman Killed.

Michael Kellner, Jr., of St. Paul, a switchman for the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railway, was cut in two by a switch engine in the Phalen creek yards. Just how the young man met his death is not known.

Child Meets Horrible Death.

Christiana Amos, the two-year-old daughter of Charles Amos of St. Paul, employed by the health commissioner in the garbage department, met a horrible death by falling in a tub of boiling water.

KILLS THREE TOTS

Mother Throws Her Little Ones Into a Deep Well.

FIRES DWELLING AND BARN

Ends Insane Act by Attempting to Commit Suicide.

Mrs. Fred Young, aged twenty-two, wife of a farmer residing near Barnum, Carlton county, while her husband was on his way to town with a load of cream and milk, threw her three children, aged one, three and five years, into a deep well, set fire to the barn, destroying it, also set fire to the house and failing in her efforts to burn the building took a dose of Paris green and then gashed her throat several times with a knife, making ugly wounds, but failing to sever the jugular vein.

Mrs. Young was taken to the sheriff's residence at Carlton and a special meeting of the insanity board was held. The woman was found to be insane and ordered committed to the state insane asylum in case she recovers. In the meantime, she was ordered taken to a hospital at Cloquet. Her condition is serious. The physicians, however, believe that she will recover. Mrs. Young had been in poor health for the past two years and it is said she had threatened several times to kill her children and herself. Her father committed suicide several years ago.

SUPPOSED TO BE DEMENTED

Aged Farmer Kills Two Young Girls and Himself.

William Tibbitts, aged seventy, a farmer who lived near Delhi, killed two young girls, one his own daughter. Then, after making an unsuccessful attempt to burn his farmhouse and cremate their bodies, he hurried to his barn and hanged himself. Tibbitts is supposed to have been demented.

The victims of the supposed maniac were his ten-year-old daughter and Cecile Norton, about eighteen years of age, daughter of his housekeeper, Mrs. Rose Norton. More lives might have been sacrificed but for the fact that Mrs. Norton, who has been employed by Tibbitts since the death of his wife two months ago, was visiting at her former home at St. Paul Park. With her were the two youngest daughters of Tibbitts.

The hapless victims of the farmer were slain with a heavy piece of iron. No one so far as known saw the killing. The girls could have had no chance at all for their lives. Everything indicates that their slayer struck them from behind and crushed their skulls at the first blow. Many blows from the deadly weapon then followed, their heads and upper portions of their bodies being cut and bruised in a horrible manner.

ROBBERS KILL AND ESCAPE

Shoot Minneapolis Man Who Resists Being Held Up.

Two masked robbers entered a Minneapolis saloon and killed a man who was trying to protect the saloon keeper. But one shot was fired. The robbers escaped.

The dead man was Otto A. Larson, an employe of the Minneapolis Steel and Machinery company, who was in Charles Anderson's saloon on Cedar avenue. He was shot through the temple. The robbers got frightened after the shooting and fled precipitately. Anderson, though unarmed, followed out through the rear door, but the men climbed a fence and disappeared. Larson was shot while grappling with one of the robbers. He held the robber so tight he could not move and the other bandit fired the fatal shot.

WILLIAM M. LIGGETT DEAD

Former Dean of Minnesota Agricultural College Passes Away.

William Madison Liggett, former dean of the state agricultural college, man of public affairs and soldier, is dead at St. Paul from tightening of the arteries, caused primarily from nervous trouble. Mr. Liggett was forced to retire from active work two years ago, when he withdrew from the experiment station. Since that time his health has been bad, particularly during the past two months. Mr. Liggett, who was sixty-three years old, is survived by a widow and four children.

Murdered by Unknown Man.

Posses are scouring the country in the vicinity of Anoka in search of an unidentified man who wantonly shot and fatally wounded Jacob Schwab. Schwab is a farmer who lives three and a half miles east of Anoka beside the railroad track. He is a native of Switzerland, a veteran of the Civil war and wealthy.

St. Paul Gets Next Convention.

At Montreal, after the hottest fight the League of American Municipalities has ever seen, St. Paul, Minn., swept the boards and on the second ballot defeated both Kansas City and Atlanta, losing a victory on the first ballot by the failure of the secretary to record the Minneapolis vote.

FARM ORCHARD AND GARDEN

BY F. E. TRIGG
REGISTER, ROCKFORD, IA.
CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED

[This matter must not be reprinted without special permission.]

A SECRET OF THEIR SUCCESS.

The writer returned a short time ago from a trip through a number of western states in which he investigated first hand the conditions under which fruit is grown in the famous Hood river, Rogue river and Yakima valleys. A conviction which was forced upon him was that if fruit growers in some other parts of the country, especially central and eastern states, were as well organized, cared for their orchards as scientifically and painstakingly as growers in the valleys mentioned a long step would be taken toward putting fruit production on a satisfactory and remunerative basis. It is true that soil and climatic condition especially favor the owner of the western fruit ranch, but these are only partial factors in his success, as is demonstrated by the fact that some who live in these favored districts are making little or no profit because their ranches are not being managed as they ought to be, either through lack of inclination or ability, or both. A feature which contributes much toward successful fruit growing in Oregon and Washington and some other western states is the fact that the spraying of fruit trees to keep in check insect and fungous pests is made compulsory by state laws, which empower the state fruit inspector or his assistants to spray or cut down any trees which the owner cannot or will not spray. These regulations mean a reduction of insect and fungous pests to a minimum, the benefit of which to the fruit growing interests being almost incalculable. Another respect in which the western fruit growers have an advantage is in the admirable way in which they are organized in associations whose purpose is to promote the interest of the grower in a general way and in particular to give him helpful suggestion in the growing of his crops and also in the matter of packing his fruit and finding a satisfactory and reliable market for it. In the case of the Hood River association all fruit belonging to members of the association is sold collectively, representatives of houses which would like to handle it being on hand to bid for it. If the prices offered are not deemed reasonable by the executive board the boxed fruit is placed in their own big cold storage warehouses to await a more favorable market. Much of their success is explained when it is said that in these sections fruit raising is the chief and primary business, and quite naturally, having their all at stake, they take sensible precautions to see that they are not defrauded or hoodwinked at any stage of the game. The care they give their trees and the pains they take in packing and marketing their fruit may well be called the premium which they pay on an insurance policy which guarantees them success, and they don't wait until their orchards are broken down and weakened by disease before they take out the policies.

SPRAYING DANDELIONS.

A number of towns in the mountain states—Denver and Colorado Springs have come to our notice particularly—have of late been experiencing a veritable pest of dandelions, this plebeian intruder having trespassed to the point where lawns in private lots and public parks and boulevards have had to be stripped of sod, respaded and reseeded to get rid of them. And this process has to be repeated at intervals, for the most carefully kept grass plots will become fouled with the seed from adjoining lots. An aid in fighting this dandelion pest seems to have been found in spraying affected lawns early in the season, just as the plants are starting, with a solution of iron sulphate, which has been found effective in destroying a number of noxious or troublesome weeds, but does not injure the tender grass. This plan involves some work and expense, but it is simpler than the methods previously mentioned and should be given a thorough trial.

A REMARKABLE FACULTY.

While the reasoning faculty as usually understood seems to be largely lacking in animals, their sense of sight, hearing and smell seems to be even more acute than with human beings, as is also their sense of place and direction. Familiar instances showing this last faculty, which seems to transcend the faculties of both sight and smell, are the migratory flight of wild fowl, the everyday movement of bees from field to hive, the return of the homing pigeon, the ability of the northern seal to find the narrow opening of its home after going miles for food in darkest seas under thick ice, the return of a cat or dog taken miles from home in box or sack and that common case of the ability of the old family horse to find the road home on a pitch dark night when the driver is hopelessly fuddled. These dumb brutes that are entirely subservient to man's will and reason nevertheless outstrip him in this wonderful trait.

It will be well to feed the hogs sparsely of the new corn, as the injudicious feeding of it gets the animals' systems out of order and makes possible a whole lot of inter and more serious ills, usually termed swine plague and hog cholera.

A not altogether reassuring showing of the destruction of our forest resources is given in the reports of the lumber industry for the year 1908. These indicate that during that period 31,231 sawmills in the United States turned out 33,289,367,000 feet of lumber, besides 12,106,483,000 shingles and 2,980,684,000 laths.

It is wages spent for things that are either useless or harmful more largely than the injustice of economic conditions under which men labor that are responsible for the most abject types of poverty to be found in this and other countries. And yet they are factors which the average student of our social and economic ills is wont almost entirely to overlook.

The young calf before it reaches the age of a month may be easily dehorned, prevented from having horns, by rubbing caustic potash on the skin just over the embryo horn. The hair should be removed immediately over the spot and the caustic rubbed on till the skin is pink. Care should be taken not to have the chemical come in contact with the hands, as it will burn the skin.

In central northern states the fern is, because of its beauty and rarity, very highly prized as a native woodland or ornamental plant. In the heavily wooded sections of the Pacific slope in Washington and Oregon it grows in such profusion that it is one of the worst weeds which the tiller of the soil has to contend with for two or three years after he clears up and breaks his land.

There are four states which the first of this year had more than 3,500,000 hogs, Iowa leading with 8,413,000, Illinois ranking next with 4,673,000 and Nebraska and Missouri following in the order named with 4,243,000 and 3,593,000 head, respectively. And this has been a decided prosperity factor, for there has been very little loss by disease, and good prices have prevailed for those that have been marketed.

The owner of a famous tract of virgin hemlock near Laporte, Pa., has placed a reward of $1 each on the pelts or carcasses of porcupines, which are seriously injuring and in some cases killing fine hemlock trees by gnawing and peeling the back from the limbs in search of ants, which constitute one of these queer animals' principal articles of food. The porcupine is usually classed as inoffensive, but this seems to be a blotch on his escutcheon.

A middle state farmer whose fields are becoming fouled with quack grass is this year trying the efficacy of hemp as a means of getting rid of the plague. Hemp grows to a height of six or eight feet and so completely covers and shades the ground that any other plant is smothered in the midst of it. It is thought that putting the land in hemp two years in succession will completely free the land of the grass. An advantage in this method, if it is as effective as is anticipated, would be that the hemp has a considerable commercial value, and the use of the land would not be lost in the process, as is true of some other methods which have been recommended.

It may be merely a truism to state that the fields of corn which have suffered most from drought during the past month in some sections of short rainfall have been those which were cultivated the fewest times and had the most weeds growing between the rows. There was a very good reason for this state of affairs, which was that the soil, not being stirred as frequently as it should, baked and dried out much more rapidly than would have otherwise been the case, while the weeds that were encouraged by this neglect served to still further aggravate the situation and take from the soil the little moisture which it did contain. This matter of the physical condition in the soil resulting from ample cultivation is one that is sadly ignored or completely overlooked by all too many farmers. The importance of the point can hardly be given too great emphasis.

A Nebraska town has inaugurated lately a very practical type of church union or affiliation. An enterprising lady of the Episcopal faith is the primo mover in the good work. A Roman Catholic altar, permitted by special dispensation of the pope, is fenced in at one end of the church; an Episcopal rail is at the other end, with reversible seats between in the body of the church. Besides the faiths mentioned, Congregationalists and Methodists also use the building, with seats arranged to suit the taste and with sermons delivered from the north or south end, as the case may be. This signifies considerable progress along the line of church union, but somehow or other these good people, with those of other denominations, ought to fix it up somehow so they can all face and march in the same direction. It is this facing in different directions which has been the chief weakness of religious organizations for the past 300 years. Perhaps a better time is at hand.

VOL. XXVI. THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1909 NUMBER 37

WILL SOON TAKE NOTICE

Notice Has Been Served on County Commissioners and Other Officials.

Will Have to Return $35,000 in Money Borrowed from Ditch Funds.

Somebody will have to "dig up" a little over $4,000, and it is not going to be any laughing matter before long. Matt Barzen and D. P. O'Neill last week served notice upon the county commissioners, county auditor and county treasurer to return to the ditch fund some $35,000 that was recently placed in the general fund. Over $4,000 of this money has been paid out of the general fund for a court house site, etc., so that there is $31,000 in the general fund now. The following is the notice served upon the gentlemen above named and it explains itself:

"At the meeting of the county Board of said County held at the county seat of said county on the 20th day of July, 1909, a resolution was offered and voted upon, providing for the transfer of the sum of $35,000.00 from the ditch fund in the treasury of said county, to the county revenue fund thereof. Upon being put to a vote three commissioners voted in the affirmative and two in the negative. Under the law of the state no money can be transferred from one fund in the county treasury to another, except by the unanimous vote of the Board, therefore the proceedings above outlined did not authorize the transfer of such funds so attempted. In addition to the provision of law referred to the supreme court has held that money cannot be transferred from the ditch fund to the general fund at all. The money has nevertheless been transferred by the Auditor and Treasurer and a part of it has been paid out upon demands existing against the general revenue fund of said county. In connection with this unlawful transaction I desire to call your attention to the fact that the law covers quite completely official misconduct with reference to the public funds, as will be noted by reference to sections 5029, 4796, 4843, 1866 and 4867 of the Revised laws of said state. Each officer acting affirmatively on the matter is liable personally, and on his official bond, in addition to being subject to the penalties referred to. As a tax payer injuriously effected by the unlawful transaction referred to I HEREBY DEMAND that you and each of you cause said money so wrongfully taken from said ditch fund of said county to be immediately restored thereto, and unless you so immediately restore said money I shall be obliged to take such action as the law justifies in the premises."

Goes to St. Paul.

John C. Sabin, one of the pioneer and most popular traveling salesman who for the past several years has made weekly trips to Thief River Falls in the interest of Griggs, Cooper & Co., of St. Paul, has quit the road in order to accept a more lucrative position as manager of one of the departments in the home office at St. Paul. Mr. Sabin is personally known to nearly every resident of this section of the state, and there is not a more deservedly popular man upon the road. It is with regret that the people of this city learn that his weekly visits are to end, and all hope that his new duties will be pleasant. Bert Riddle is to take Mr. Sabin's place upon the road and he is spoken of very highly.

Operations to Increase.

Prince Albert, Sask., Sept. 1.—D. N. Winton of Minneapolis, president of the Prince Albert Lumber company, is in the city and today announced that operations at the big mill will be greater this season than ever. The company has made arrangements for cutting over 40,000,0000 feet of logs this winter and operations in the lumber woods north of Prince Albert will be the most extensive in the history of the place.

On With the Dance.

To read the article in the News of the 26th:

One would think that it was an echo from the grave of the Maxwell predictions of dire disaster should the farmers of northern Minnesota "Dump all their surplus water into Mississippi river at once," and it is most likely the so called interview originated in the same quarter; that is, in the brain of some wooden-headed reporter, obiter dictum.

We feel safe in saying that Mr. Hoag never gave out such an interview, nor that he would try to undermine a great work in which so many settlers are so deeply involved. On the contrary, he expressed himself while here, as being heart and soul in sympathy with the settlers and in having the work done right.

However, "the tail cannot wag the dog." The settlers will have their ditches made in spite of dire predictions, by engineers or anybody, and if one engineer should fail them, there are others. This great work cannot be plugged up by one man, or set of men. There are too many people with their hearts in it for that.

The report on the geological survey disposed of the calamity matter in this way: "The flood waters coming from this (Mud Lake) drainage system will not reach Red river until the high water of that stream has passed." And further:

"Moreover, once the swamps are drained they will be able to absorb a large percentage of any heavy rains which may come instead of discharging the water at once as in case of a saturated condition."

There, that disposes of "calamity" and we will go on with the frolic.

Very Respectfully,
A. W. CLARK,
Pres. Set. Drainage Assn.

Golden Rule

"MAKING GOOD"

IS AN EXPRESSION THAT IS TYPICALLY AMERICAN.

IT'S on the lips of all America,—"HAVE YOU MADE GOOD?" Any conversation about any man or any business seldom gets beyond a few minutes duration before someone asks, "HAS HE MADE GOOD?" It's the American Standard of success—men and the affairs of men are measured by it—success or failure is determined by it. "Making Good" is merely a question of beginning right—any undertaking whose foundation is well laid need have no fear for the superstructure. And so our "Making Good" has become merely a proof of that theory—WE BEGAN RIGHT. Founded on the policy of the Golden Rule, this store has always been operated on a basis of "fairness". In the vernacular of progressive Americanism, "WE'VE MADE GOOD."

GATHERING MUCH DATA

Members of the State Drainage Board Visit Red Lake County.

It Is Proposed to Lower the Red Lakes About Three Feet.

Frank Day, private secretary to Gov. Johnson, State Auditor Iverson, Secretary of State Schmal and others made a trip around the shores of Red Lake last week. According to the Bemidji Pioneer the trip to the Red Lake was for the purpose of personally visiting the grounds and observing the conditions that prevail there with relation to the needs of drainage and regulating the flow of waters in the lakes and the possibility of creating reservoirs out of the Red Lakes, and deepening and straightening the channel of the Red Lake river. These improvements, if brought about, would result in regulating the flow on the Red Lake river and the Red river of the North.

Government engineers have already made surveys of Red Lake, and two or three reports have been submitted to the departments at Washington, on the feasibility of the project. These reports have been generally favorable. They estimate the cost at something like $150,000 for putting in a substantial dam and locks at the outlet of Red Lake river and improving the river proper.

It is estimated that, by lowering the waters of Red lake some three feet, all of the water forming the water shed of Red Lake could be drained into Red lake; and it would take some six months to bring the lake back to its normal level. This being true, according to George A. Ralph, state drainage engineer, who was a member of the party which has visited the Red Lake section, it would be possible to control the floodwaters of the Red River of the north at comparatively small cost.

A depth of three feet on the surface of Red Lake would mean a volume of between 30,000,000,000 and 40,000,000,000 cubic feet of water, or about the total capacity of the five reservoirs on the headwaters of the Mississippi river.

The department of Geological Survey recently completed a topographical and drainage map of the country tributary to the Upper and Lower Red Lakes.

This drainage map plans a large number of ditches into Red Lake, which, when constructed, would greatly augment the volume of Red Lake during floodtime, hence the necessity of storing the waters, when it can be done at such small cost, thereby lessening the danger form floods to lands in the Red River Valley.

This plan provides for the drainage of all swamp lands tributary to Red Lake. Ditches are generally laid out along section lines, and when constructed, will have highways along their banks, giving direct communication, direct outlets and routes of travel between Spooner and Baudette to southern Beltrami county.

The State Drainage Commission, in connection with the Department of Geological survey at Washington, are making measurements of the water resources of the entire state. These measurements consist of gauging all streams through various stages of high and low water and measurements of the discharge at such stages.

A profile of the surveys is also being made along the entire length of the water courses. These surveys when completed, will show the fall of all streams in the state from point to point along the streams and the available horsepower. The survey also incudes the examination and survey of reservoir sites, for the purpose of storing water for the prevention of floods and increasing the value of waterpowers.

Old Comrades Meet.

The following, taken from the Roseau Times, will be of interest to old settlers, Mr. Sanders having for many years been a resident of this city:

Hon Eli Southworth, of Shakopee, secretary and treasurer of the state board of law examiners, visited with J. H. Sanders this week. Mr. Southworth and Mr. Sanders were members of Company A 4th Minnesota and this is their first meeting in 47 years. These two old comrades certainly had a pleasant talk over incidents of their war exprience. Mr. Southworth enlisted at the age of 17 and Mr. Sanders at 20, both being enrolled the same day and both are hale and hearty. Mr. Southworth made it his special business to make this visit to his friend and comrade of youthful days, remembering that in the days of soldiering, Joe had been instrumental in saving his life.

Auditor's warrants drawn upon the county revenue fund are not being paid now by the county treasurer and will not be paid until tax gathering time next spring. The county had been upon a basis for a number of years, but it has been expensive of late allowing all of the attorneys of Red Lake Falls to get their feet in the trough.

A New Institution.

We wish to call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of the Commercial-Normal school, which appears in this issue of the News. Thief River Falls and Red Lake county are amply able to support an institution of this kind and we are confident that the new school will meet with success. The promotors of the Commercial-Normal are Professors O. A. Naplin and G. T. Almen, both of whom have had years of experience in educational work. A school bringing from fifty to sixty young people into our city every year is going to prove a bonanza to Thief River Falls, and it is with pleasure that we welcome the enterprising gentlemen as citizens of our thrifty little city.

A New Assistant Master Mechanic.

George H. Horton Assistant master mechanic of the Soo line, who has for the past few years made his home in Thief River Falls, tendered his resignation on the first of September and Edward Foster, who has been traveling engineer for the Soo line arrived here last week from Harvey, N. D., and is now attending to the duties formerly performed by Mr. Horton. Mr. Horton goes to Minneapolis and will continue to be in the employe of the Soo line.

Fire Losses Heavy.

Damage from forest fires in Minnesota for the year 1908 is estimated at $2,000,000 by General C. C. Andrews, state forestry commissioner. Of this total $1,500,000 is estimated as the loss from the Chrisholm fire. A total of 405,718 acres, mostly cut-over land was burned over. In his annual report General Andrews urges a campaign for the adoption of the forestry tax amendment submitted to the people for adoption at the next general election. It allows a special levy of one-fifteenth of a mill to create a fund for reforestation work.

HUNTERS ARE NOW BUSY

Chicken and Duck Season Opened on Tuesday and All are Out Hunting.

Weather Conditions Are Ideal and Thousands of Birds Are Being Killed.

The chicken and duck season opened on Tuesday and the weather conditions were ideal for hunters. Most every man in this section who has a gun and a dog were out in the fields, and reports are to the effect that quite a number of birds are being killed. Large numbers from Duluth and the Twin Cities are arriving on every train and it is safe to say that over one-half of the chickens in this section will be killed this week.

Attorney E. M. Stanton, his brother, Dr. D. L. Stanton, of Bemidji, Dr. James Wierick, of St. Paul, and Dr. Henderson, of Bemidji, formed a party that left Monday for the country east of town. The first three of the party have hunted in this section for many years.

Daniel Shaw, H. G. Dobner, D. N. Winton, Morgan, Mart and John Vaughan are hunting out in the Germantown country.

Ed Wilcox, Dr. Bockman, Dr. Booren, and Frank Lawrence formed a party that went out Monday. Later they will be joined by Mr. Belluah, of Minneapolis.

John Mikulecky and M. Bullock, two veteran hunters, have established their camp at Mud Lake and expect to entertain a large number of hunters during the fall. They are going to run a gasoline boat between their camp and this city.

Charles A. Nason, one of the veteran hunters of this section, did not go out the first of the week, but will wait until the 13th of September and go out with W. S. Rosenberry, of Minneapolis. If there is any game left in the country these two can be depended upon to get their share.

George Wernham left for Radium and will hunt with a party of friends from that village.

Matt Barzen, Robert McGinn, Louie Hanson and Fr. Adolph went Monday into the country east of town. The first three have hunted together for the past dozen falls and while they never bring home much game—their excuse being that they cook and eat most of it while in camp—they always have a good time.

Ed Ashley, Ira C. Richardson and son, Glen, Phil Zeh and M. L. Dunning, of Duluth, left Monday for the chicken fields.

Hugo Anderson, Oscar Sponheim, Will Korstad and John Myrland left Sunday by boat up the Red Lake river for the purpose of establishing camp and will hunt in that section for a few days.

O. J. Schei, Dr. Penney and Dr. Heiber left Monday for the country east of the city.

Alderman Forder and Val Yager were out Tuesday.

City Clerk Lars Backe and his son, B. J. Backe, were out Tuesday.

Chas. Hillard and O. A. Westine were out Tuesday morning.

O. H. Nesseth went up to Badger Monday and will hunt in that vicinity.

Judge Bishop and Ed Jarneson were out Tuesday "just to see how the Judge's new bird dog would work."

Dr. Mellby and Fred Daniels left Wednesday for a short hunt east of town.

Mayor Hamre, W. J. LaBree, John F. Brown and Ed Emerson left Monday afternoon for the country east of town.

Judge Morris and a party from Duluth arrived in the city Monday and will hunt north of here in the Rollis country.

Capt. John Durbin and Leonard Paterson went up the river in Mr. Durbin's boat Tuesday morning in search of ducks.

Anton Langseth and Emil Sedlacek went out Tuesday in the latter's automobile.

Fred Nicolal and Conductor Hallowell went out Tuesday to remain for a few days.

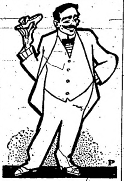
THE TOWN THAT PUSH BUILT

IX.—The Foxy Shoe Dealer



THIS is the shoe man who found
In his hand the bill that went round
'Mong all the people who advertised.
He hired a man whose work he prized
And paid him with the jeweler's bill
From the hardware merchant's till,
Where it went when the clothing dealer bought
From the furniture man, which the clothier got
When to him the dry goods merchant went
With the bill the butcher wisely spent
When his friend the grocer had settlement made
With cash the honest workman paid.

School Notes.

School opened on Monday morning, and a large enrollment of pupils being present.

The Central building is greatly crowded in the lower grades. The primary room is on half-day sessions, some sixty being enrolled the first two days, and the third grade room cannot care for the number present there. An extra teacher must be provided immediately. The Knox is well filled, no room being overcrowded. The grade rooms in the High enroll more children than a year ago on opening but the high school department is badly crowded. The library, laboratory and basement are all utilized as class rooms and every inch of space in the building is in use. When the full attendance enters school, it is very evident that the present capacity of the building cannot house the students.

With some the impression prevails that there is not much necessity of beginning school until the second week. This sentiment is created in part by the pupils who wish to prolong the holidays and so impart misinformation at home. Work began the first day, and regular recitations were heard in nearly all the rooms. When a school is properly organized there is no lost time on opening.

The compulsory school law passed by the last legislature requires the attendance of children during all the time the school is in session. In cities this includes all pupils under 18 and in the rural districts under 16. It also calls for reports of those not present and a list of 88 has been prepared, which will be completed and forwarded next Tuesday. The state bureau of labor has taken steps to co-operate with the law. No child can be employed without a labor permit and but two of these have been issued in this city within the past year. This announcement should be sufficient notice to indifferent parents and employers of child labor to cause them to cease ignoring the present stringent labor and compulsory school law.

The buildings were scrupously clean when opened for the pupils last Monday morning.

From two to eight pupils with strange names appear in every room. This is an indication of the arrival of many new families in the city since school closed in May.

THE NEWS

BY JOHN W. EASTMAN

ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

By right of discovery the North Pole now belongs to the United States and it will be the duty of the government to secure a caretaker. It would be an excellent job for County Commissioner Lindquist, of Bray

If Dr. Cook had made his search for the north pole in a more formal and ceremonious manner there would not be so many "ifs" in the discussions that he has aroused by the report that he has accomplished his purpose.

Railway officials have observed that the farmers of the Northwest are no longer sacrificing their financial interests by dumping the year's crop on the market, but are conserving those interests by stacking the small grain and holding it for delivery as the markets of the country demand. The principle is sound but it is not every farmer who can observe it. The financial condition of some is such that they are compelled to sell at once, to meet pressing obligations; but where they are able to hold their grain and produce for higher prices they not only reap greater returns but establish a more stable market for all products. The practice also helps the transportation companies in furnishing better facilities for moving the grain, and prevents a glut of the market.—Alexandria Post News.

There is no reason on earth why the smaller towns of the country should be content to crawl along at a snail's pace allowing the big cities to take all the business enterprises. What is needed is a tremendous and constant enthusiasm for the town in which they live by the business men that shall be alert to improve every opportunity to promote its growth and encourage new industries whenever possible. There are notable examples thruout the west of great success in this direction by towns that have had the "get there spirit". Take Waterloo, Iowa, for instance, with 20,000 population, it now owns more automobiles than Des Moines. Its bank clearances exceed that of most towns of twice its population. Babies born within three years have never been wheeled over an unpaved street. It takes the facilities of nine strong banks to conduct its business. Prosperity is seen in the face and attire of every man you meet. The secret of it all is—factories. This is the secret of Red Wing's splendid prosperity.—Red Wing Republican.

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD

REVERSES THE HIGH COURT

In Order to Give a Favorable Decision, Judge Watts Reverses the Supreme Court.

Case Will Be Appealed to the State Supreme Court at Once.

The second round in the court house embroglio, took place before Judge William Watts last Saturday, and the principal questions up for consideration were: First, Whether the County Board could legally levy taxes to the amount of nearly 14 mills against the property of the county, and, second, was the four mill tax levy made by the County Board for a "court house fund" made in accordance to the law and was there any authority for such a levy?

In face of the provisions of the laws of the state of Minnesota, which provides that no county can levy over 10 mills for taxes unless specifically authorized by law, the judge held that the board could levy fourteen mills and nothwitstanding the laws of the state which provide that "All taxes shall be levied or voted in specific amount and rates per cent. shall be determined from the amount of property as equalized by the state board of equalization each year", and the decision of the supreme court in the case of in re Cloquet Lumber Co. reported in 61st Minnesota, 233, to the effect that a levy of taxes by a rate per cent is null and void, Judge Watts uphold every act of the board.

To demonstrate to the taxpayers of Red Lake county that the decision of Judge Watts is wrong and absolutely contrary to the decision of the supreme court, we quote from the above cited case: "It is evident that it is the imparative duty of the council (in this case the board) to fix the specific amount of tax to be levied, NOT THE RATE. To sustain this resolution (meaning a levy by per cent.) would be to open the door to the most loose and reckless methods of conducting public business—the language of the statute is imperative and intention plain."

Judge Watts was fully advised of both the language of the law and decision of supreme court, by Attorney Young and Halvorson, both of which, it seems to us, were wholly disregarded.

The order modifying the injunction previously granted, will be appealed from, as well as the other goal that the county board is restrained from doing anything with the court house building until the supreme court has passed upon these matters.

To show the underhanded intentions of the county board it is to be noted that the four mill tax was levied to create a court house fund and not for the erection and completion of a court house, from which it is clear that the board intends to repeat the dose as often as it may suit their purpose.

The end has not yet come, in fact the fight has barely commenced, and all those who participate in unlawful proceedings will receive the reward due them.

Tenants for Vacant Farms.

Minnesota farms lying idle thru lack of tenants to work them for the absentee owners, may just as well be occupied, if there would be tenant farmers from other states can be reached and shown the opportunities that exist. This is the opinion of George Welsh, secretary of the immigration bureau, and he has been collecting a list of farmers in other states who want to come to Minnesota and rent. The list has been made up in the form of a bulletin which has been sent to the commercial clubs of smaller cities in the state, so they can communicate with these would-be settlers and get them to come. "There is no form of immigration more needed than this," said Mr. Welsh. "When farms in Minnesota bring yields of twenty five bushels of No. 1 northern wheat and fifty and sixty bushels of oats, as they are turning out according to the thresher reports, not one of them should lie idle. There are plenty of men who would be glad of the opportunity to rent such farms and we are trying to get in touch with them."

Prominent Banker Here.

L. E. Jones, of the firm of Elsworth & Jones, Iowa Falls, Iowa, is in the city this week. Mr. Jones has made a large number of real estate loans in this section and is here for the purpose of looking the country over. He is greatly pleased at the advancement Thief River Falls has made in the past few years and predicts that this section will be the best in the state in a few years.

He has achieved a large measure of success as a citizen and man who has been thoughtful and considerate in his own home and a kind neighbor.

Just about as much can be expected of boys and girls as from a newly set orchard if both are started and then allowed to shift for themselves. The old Harry in the shape of weeds and ill manners, borers and bad habits is sure to get them. No slipshod or absentee oversight will give satisfactory results.

It pays an owner in dollars to give his buildings a good coat of paint and make the premises shipshape if he is contemplating selling. It will give just as large a return in chunks of solid satisfaction for himself and family if he isn't thinking of selling. Especially is such improvement of the place to be commended from the standpoint of the passerby.

In most states the law as to fences requires a railroad to provide its right of way with a fence of the kind which the farmer has or may want to erect adjacent thereto. To illustrate, if a landowner wishes to fence hog tight a tract of land bordering on the right of way, the railroad would have to erect a fence of this description on the line bordering such tract.

Some ingenious poultryman has lately devised a louse proof henroost, the base of the iron castings at either end of the roost resting in a receptacle containing a strong disinfecting fluid. This would seem to be effective enough in preventing lice and vermin from crawling up the roosts to the hens, but would hardly serve to keep them from crawling from the hens on to the roosts and thus being spread.

During the recent stress of harvest time out in Nebraska many a young woman has followed the binder and helped shock the golden grain, and this was entirely to her credit, just as much so as it was to the discredit of the husky chaps who loafed around town and didn't work because, in addition to generous wages, they weren't taken to and from town every night in a leather cushioned automobile after the day's work was done.

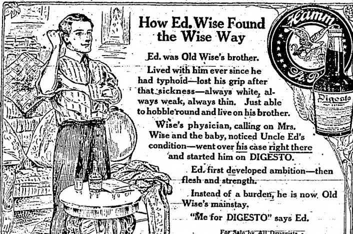
The proper time for cutting the corn crop for fodder or ensilage is when the ear, leaves and stalk contain a maximum of nutritive value. If the corn ripens under normal conditions, this will be when the ear has begun to dent and is quite firm and if picked would make a good feed and seed ear while the upper leaves of the plant are green, with the lower turning yellow. Cut before this time, there is a distinct loss in food value, just as there is a loss if the fodder is not cut before a frost kills the leaves.

If the little heifer has calved earlier than was good for her own development, much can be done to make amends and help her attain a normal growth by giving her a good grain ration for eight or ten months after calving, even if she is on good pasture. If she is the kind of milker she ought to be, she will only appropriate as much of this extra ration as she needs for growth and will put the rest in the pail. Handling her in this way is not coddling her, but simply an evidence of farsighted management.

If there is any one sight more than another that is calculated to arouse the wrath and disgust of a fairly industrious and respectable citizen it is during the seasons of tilling and caring for the great crops of the country, and particularly at harvest time, when labor is at a premium, to see great strapping, hulking boys and men loafing around the depots and streets in most any town, utterly indifferent to the urgency of the situation, cussing Providence and the government for their ill luck, with the chances good that they are eating three square meals a day earned by hardworking mothers and wives over washtub and sewing machine. The law doesn't reach this type of offenders against common decency, and pity 'tis that it does not.

There is probably no variety of trees grown in the warmer and arid or semi-arid portions of the great southwest which is equal to the eucalyptus in point of general usefulness. It possesses a thrifty and vigorous habit of growth, does well without irrigation and on land that is so poor and rough that it will produce almost nothing else. Realizing these good qualities, large areas in California which can never be put under ditch are being set to eucalyptus trees. Results that have already been secured show that if set close together these groves will produce long, straight trunks free from lower limbs, the wood firm and strong and useful for a great many purposes. The tree is a native of Australia, where it is highly prized and where several varieties of it are found.

The grape growers in the Chautauqua belt in York state have suffered serious loss of late as a result of the inroads of insect and fungous pests. Figures which have been published show that there has been a reduction in yield per acre from 800 baskets in 1900 to 300 baskets in 1908. So serious has the situation become that the growers are trying to secure the location of a state experiment substation in the locality with a view to having scientific methods of fighting the pests demonstrated so as to show them a way out of their troubles. Enough would seem to be at stake so that this move might well be made, as the work of the state officials would be of real value to viticulturists in other parts of the state and in other sections of the country.



How Ed. Wise Found the Wise Way

Ed. was Old Wise's brother.

Lived with him ever since he had typhoid—lost his grip after that sickness—always white, always weak, always thin. Just able to hobble 'round and live on his brother.

Wise's physician, calling on Mrs. Wise and the baby, noticed Uncle Ed's condition—went over his case right there and started him on DIGESTO.

Ed. first developed ambition—then flesh and strength.

Instead of a burden, he is now Old Wise's mainstay.

THEIR ESCAPE MIRACULOUS

Family of J. E. McDonah Had a Narrow Escape in Storm Recently.

Building Moved Thirty Feet by the Wind and Was Completely Wrecked.

J. E. McDonah a carpenter employed in Grand Forks and a former resident of Thief River Falls, having been employed as janitor at the Antlers Club while here, passed through the city last week, being enroute back to work after a visit to his home at Gatzke, Marshall county, Minnesota, and has a strange story to tell of the miraculous escape his family had in the recent storm of cyclonic proportions which swept that section. Mrs. Donah with her two children, Clifford and Ida together with two brothers and two sisters were in the house when the storm struck, about seven o'clock on the evening of Aug. 21. The cyclone was on them in an instant, and part of the house was carried thirty feet and torn to pieces.

The building was turned completed over with seven people in it, the roof being on the ground, then above it part of the east wall, and sitting up on the wall was the stove and the wood box. These saved Mrs. McDonah from being caught between the other timbers for the floor and joint were on top of the wreckage. How all five of the occupants of the house escaped without cuts or broken limbs will never be known.

Mrs. McDonah was not rendered unconscious in the overturning of the house, and it was her presence of mind that undoubtedly prevented the death of one of her brothers, who was held under a heavy timber. This she lifted from his body and soon revived him. She then rescued a sister who was caught by a braid of her hair. The other four children crawled out from the mass of broken and twisted remains of the house with only scratches and bruises.

Out of 18 windows in the house there were only four left intact and some of the glass was carried over sixty feet. When the resistance of glass against wind is considered, some idea of the violence of the wind can be imagined. Over forty trees close to the house were broken and torn to pieces by the storm which fortunately lasted only a few minutes. Myrtle, the baby of the family, had just then been put to sleep and luckily was in another part of the house that was left standing by the wind.

GOV. JOHNSON ASKED TO ACT

Taxpayers Petition That Five County Officials Be Removed from Office

Officials Are Guilty of Malfeasance and Should Be Removed.

A petition signed by a number of taxpayers of Red Lake county, was filed with Governor John A. Johnson last Friday, asking that County Auditor A. A. Letandresse, County Treasurer Harry E. Ives and County Commissioners W. O. L. Demann, Joseph Pidgeon and C. A. Lindquist be removed from office. While Mr. Letandresse and Mr. Ives are simply guilty of carrying out the instructions of the county commissioners, Former Attorney General Young, who drew the complaint for the taxpayers says that they are guilty of malfeasance in office and should be removed.

Quite a number of unlawful acts and misappropriations of public funds are specified in the complaint, which is quite lengthy and when the hearing is held additional evidence will be introduced.

The public examiner is first asked to be sent to Red Lake Falls to ascertain whether or not the complaint is correct and then Gov. Johnson will appoint a commission to take testimony and if the charges are found to be true, the above mentioned officials will be removed from office.

It is quite likely that a more serious charge will be made against some of the officials of the county later.

CONTRACT LET TO SIVERSON

Crookston Man Secures Contract for Building New Auditorium and Armory.

Building Will Be One of the Finest in the City and Will Cost Over $50,000.

The contract for constructing the new auditorium and armory in Thief River Falls was awarded to Ole M. Siverson, of Crookston, last Saturday by the city council. Mr. Siverson's bid was $24,050 and was the lowest bid received. F. S. Doege & Co., of this city was the next lowest bidder, being but a few hundred dollars above Mr. Siverson. There were four other bids and all were very close.

Mr. Siverson guarantees to have the building completed by the 1st of February, or he forfeits $10 for each day over. For every day before the 1st of February that he has the work completed he is to receive $10.

The basement of the building is not to be completed at this time, but this work will be done later, and the building when completed will cost over $50,000, and will be one of the best in the city.

E. Dryfoos has the contract for doing the heating and plumbing, his bid being much lower than all competitors.

THE BIGGEST DITCH OF ALL

The Proposed Grygla Ditch to Be Over Four Hundred Miles In Length.

Will Cost Between $300,000 and 400,000 and Will Drain a Big Section.

Prof. Hoag, who is to be the civil engineer in charge of the proposed new Grygla ditch, arrived here last week from Minneapolis, and on the first of the week left with a large crew of surveyors for the Grygla country. Prof. Hoag recently went over the land proposed to be drained and using the map of the U. S. government engineers as a basis has drawn a preliminary map of the proposed ditch which is to drain all of the country in Eastern Marshall county that will not be drained by the Germantown ditch and a good portion of Beltrami county.

The ditch, with all of its laterals, will be over 400 miles in length and will be one of the most perfect and comprehensive ditching projects ever undertaken. On nearly every section line there will be a ditch. While the cost is now estimated to be between $300,000 and $400,000, it is going to be divided over a period of twenty years and a very large number of acres will bear the burden.

It is expected to have the survey all completed so that the contract can be let this winter and work upon the same commenced early next spring.

BIG COLONY IS PLANNED

Bishop James McGolrick of Duluth Offers Farm Lands to City Dwellers.

Large Tract Will Be Thrown Open in the Timber Country for Relief of Masses.

A plan which has for its object the colonization of about 170,000 acres of rich Northern Minnesota farming land by poor people, who are now struggling under the congested conditions of the cities, has been announced by Bishop James McGolrick of the Catholic diocese of Duluth. The land which lies in Becker and Hubbard counties, will be thrown open to desirable citizens, who satisfy the bishop that they desire to make a home for themselves away from the conditions under which they now live.

By alloting twenty-five acres or more to each family Bishop McGolrick believes that he can furnish the nucleus for a fine farm and a happy home to nearly 7,000 families, so that nearly 25,000 people who are now living in the cities, may be given an opportunity to enjoy health and happiness in Northern Minnesota.

Bishop McGolrick is sending out circulars printed in English, German and Polish to New York, Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia, and other large cities telling of his plan and the method by which any man of good character may secure a home for himself and family under the greatest advantages and at a minimum expense. Bishop McGolrick is anxious that many Catholics take advantage of his offer, but he draws no sectarian lines. He proposes to see that Catholic churches and schools are provided in the district, and is consequently anxious to have many of the settlers of his faith, but anyone who proves worthiness will be given consideration at his hands regardless of religious beliefs.

The land is owned by D. S. B. Johnson Land company of St. Paul and has been given into Bishop McGolrick's hands for colonization. No sales will be made by the company and the bishop has absolute control of allotments.

The tract covers fifty miles extending from Akeley on the east to Detroit City on the west, and Bishop McGolrick, who has made a personal examination of the district, says it is as fine farming land as he has ever seen. Clover and thimothy grow in abundance, he says, and the land is fine for grazing.

The terms are as easy as they can be made. The first payment will be at the rate of $3 an acre, and the remainder, from $10 to $15 an acre, may be paid at the option of the settler. The bishop offers to lend $500 worth of lumber for initial buildings to all who take land, and a rebate of $1 an acre will be given to those who, at the end of two years, have six or more cows. The company will clear ten acres for each settler, so that those who enter upon the tract will be given a good start toward developing a fine farm.

Bishop McGolrick is anxious to help the laboring class of the large cities of the United States, and the first opportunity will be given them to enter on the land. The bishop is also considering the sending of a personal representative to Holland and induce colonists to come to this country, as he recognizes the Dutch as the best farmers as a nation and is anxious to have a few Dutch farmers scattered through the district, to show the other settlers how to farm.

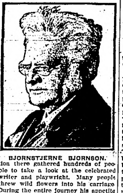
BJORNSON IS AT AULESTAD

He Endured His Recent Trip to Christiana Remarkably Well and Is Now Comfortably Located—Hundreds of People Met the Celebrated Writer at Every Station Along the Route—Physicians Say He Is Slowly Recovering.

NORWAY.

Bjornson endured his recent trip to Christiania remarkably well. He is now comfortably located at his favorite Aulestad and is, according to his physicians, slowly recovering. During his recent journey he was cordially received everywhere and at every station there gathered hundreds of people to take a look at the celebrated writer and playwright. Many people threw wild flowers into his carriage. During the entire journey his appetite was good and he seemed to enjoy every stage of the interesting trip.



BJORNSTJERNE BJORNSON.

King Haakon was very cordially received in Bergen, whither he went some time ago to open a congress convened for the purpose of adopting means and measures whereby to fight the dreaded leprous disease. The king made a very excellent address, in which he promised to lend all the moral and financial aid at his command for the noble cause. The king attended a number of functions that were given in his honor and hundreds of people flocked to Bergen to get a peek at him. King Haakon's popularity is not abating in the least.

Not less than thirty-four members of the storthing have declared emphatically that they will not be candidates for re-election. Most of them are farmers and business men, who have not the time to spare at the nation's capital. The sessions are long and tedious and no man who is actively engaged in a paying business is anxious to have these jobs. There will be plenty of other men, however who will be willing to serve, so any particular trouble in filling the places of the vacating storthing's representatives is not looked for.

Lowzow, minister of war, resigned from his post a week ago last Saturday, because the storthing voted down with an overwhelming majority his army reorganization plan. The storthing has chosen his successor in the person of Major A. G. Sporck, an experienced and popular army officer.

Colonel Ole William Petersen, chief of the naval academy and chief of the royal guards, died at his home in Christiania the other day, aged sixty-eight years. He was made an army officer in the reign of Charles XV., and has been in the service ever since.

The exportation of herring to Sweden has been stopped entirely owing to the strike. Norwegian herring is a welcome tidbit in Sweden, and especially among the poorer classes it will be greatly missed.

Hans Larsen, a prominent book publisher in Christiania, has donated 30,000 crowns, which shall constitute a legacy for caring for neglected boys. Let us hope that there are many more such men in Norway.

True to his never failing custom Emperor William has donated another 1,000 crowns for the restoration of the Trondhjem cathedral. The restoration continues slow but sure.

SWEDEN.

Stockholm has at present as its guest the Swedish consul in Charkov Russia, Adolf Gustaf and wife. Sweden has never before had any consul in this section of Russia and up to this time Sweden has been exporting no goods to southern Russia. Consul Munch declares that if Swedish export merchants would be more aggressive that they would have a splendid field to work on in the great Russian market and that even in southern Russia there would be a splendid opportunity to introduce Swedish goods. Swedish knives and Swedish farm machinery of all kinds would find a ready market all over Russia, and the consul thinks that it is strange that Swedish exporters have not long ago availed themselves of this opportunity. Consul Munch is an aggressive gentleman and he has already succeeded in arousing a great deal of enthusiasm among exporters and will bring back with him a large number of samples of different Swedish export goods which he will place on exhibition in Charkov.

There are now better facilities for receiving fresh fruit in Sweden than formerly. The Sassnitz-Trelleborg steam ferry between Sweden and Germany makes possible the importation of the southern fruits much cheaper than ever before. The fruit is transported in a through car from Marseilles, France, to Stockholm, which is the distribution center for the entire country. A company in France will have charge of this business hereafter and supply the market direct during the winter seasons. Formerly the Swedish fruit was handled through German middlemen and this made prices 40 and 50 per cent higher than will be the case under the new arrangements. Coming from France direct the fruit can also be shipped in good condition to other points when received.

A Stockholm paper describes conditions in Stockholm during the big strike as follows: "Stockholm is notorious all over Europe for her hard cobble stones and for the terrific noise caused by the iron rimmed wheels of her street trucks. Now the city is the quietest among the quiet. Our steps lag on the street as though we were in Trosa or Grenna. We only hear the chimes of the church bells, muffled conversation, and the cries of the loons in the harbor. The factory pipes do not announce the dinner hour, street railway tracks lie empty and shining in the sun, there is no chug, chug from the automobiles, no rolling noises from the wagons, and the peculiar sound of the wheels of the brewery wagons are not heard. Quiet rests the city."

Professor Nordenskiold and company of scientists are making a thorough exploration of Greenland during the present summer, and they are expected to return this fall with some exceedingly interesting data. The party arrived at Holstenborg, on the west coast of Greenland, in June and from there have worked their way up to within a radius of the Arctic circle, investigating the topography as well as the fauna and flora of that country. The Danish authorities of the country have shown their interest in the work by assisting the expedition in a variety of ways. The work will be completed by the end of this month, when the party will return to Sweden and make known to the world the results of their summer's investigations.

Queen Olga of Greece has been invited to come and visit the Swedish queen in the near future. Now that the strike difficulties have been checked it is very possible that the good queen will come. That she will be royally entertained goes without saying.

In spite of the strike the attendance at the Stockholm Industrial exposition has been averaging about 6,000 a day during the season. This is very gratifying indeed when it is taken into consideration that there has been so much trouble brewing.

Fire broke out at Carlscrona the other day and four persons perished in the flames. The fire started through the explosion of a gasoline lamp. Among the buildings that were burned were the Sodra Sveriges and Smaland banks.

The Swedish Engineers' club of New York this year placed a wreath of evergreens and flowers on John Ericsson's grave at Filipstad.

DENMARK.

"The coffee wagons" constitute an entirely new institution in Copenhagen. That, too, is wholly the work of enterprising Copenhagen women, who propose to have these wagons visit different sections of the city where the labor element is densest and serve them coffee and cakes at a nominal price. Bread to the amount of about 500 crowns will also be handled every week. By means of this system not less than 6,000 cups of coffee can be served in one day. The workingmen of the city will certainly appreciate this. This can buy the coffee and a piece of bread for a mere pittance and as this money will be devoted entirely to keep up the good work the workingmen realize that it is something gotten up wholly in their interest.

The women's building, which will be erected by the Women's Reading society of Copenhagen, will be located on the corner of Antonie and Gammelmont, and will be built at an expenditure of 207,000 crowns. This is merely a beginning. When everything has been completed, that is the library, gymnasium and all other accessories, the building will cost something in the neighborhood of 500,000 crowns. The corner stone will be laid next month in the presence of the king and a large number of prominent men and women from all parts of the country.

The tourist traffic reached its climax last month when every hotel and every available room that was for rent in the respectable portions of the city were taken. There were thousands of tourists in Copenhagen last month and it is safe to say that there have never before at one time been so many visitors in the city. The hotel men have been having a regular harvest. Something that contributed to this immense number was the fact that the strike in Sweden made the tourists flee from the Swedish capital and most of them came to Copenhagen.

St. Peter's Inn on St. Peter street has been sold to the Hertz Publishing company for 125,000 crowns. It is an historic place and has been visited by thousands of tourists.

Writes an exchange: The king of Denmark has ratified the prohibition law of Iceland. This means that the lid will be clamped on securely in Ultima Thule.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

A Pennsylvania train was held up by a lone robber in the Allegheny mountains near Lewistown, Pa., and the train crew compelled to carry thousands of dollars in coin and bullion from an express car to a spot in the wilderness. When pursued the bandit took a bag containing 10,000 new Lincoln pennies and staggered away with it, leaving the real gold bullion to be recovered by the railroaders.

Mrs. Fred Young, aged twenty-two, wife of a farmer residing near Barnum, Minn., threw her three children, aged one, three and five years, into a deep well, set fire to the barn, destroying it, also set fire to the house and failing in her efforts to burn the building took a dose of Paris green and then gashed her throat several times with a knife, resulting in injuries that may cause death.

John Hayner, who shot and seriously wounded former Senator George W. Somerville at Sleepy Eye, Minn., hanged himself in the county jail at New Ulm and was found swinging dead from the bars of his cell door. Hayner had carefully torn his blanket into strips, fashioning a rope strong enough to bear his weight, and then swung himself into eternity.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Another sharp increase in the assessed valuation of Minnesota iron properties is contemplated by the state tax commission. Notices will be issued in a few days to certain mining companies in St. Louis and Itasca counties citing them to appear and show why their assessments should not be raised over last year's figures. The present assessment of the mines is about $183,000,000. It is believed that the coming action of the tax commission will bring the total considerably over $200,000,000.

By a decision filed in the United States district court by Judge Page Morris Minneapolis loses possession of Halls island, at the east end of Plymouth avenue bridge, where the Gerber public baths were installed at a cost of about $35,000 or $40,000. Corinna L. Hobart is declared owner in fee simple and entitled to immediate possession.

Shipments of crushed rock from the St. Cloud reformatory under the auspices of the state highway commission continue. The demand has been so large that if the orders now on hand are filled in full the crusher will be kept busy for two years to come.

The district grand jury at Duluth has recommended, in view of the great increase of crime in St. Louis county, that licenses to sell liquor be granted only to American citizens who shall be able to read and write English.

M. G. Norton and William H. Laird, prominent lumbermen of Winona, have agreed to turn over to that city $40,000 to be used to purchase a beautiful drive and park along the banks of the Mississippi.

Divorce proceedings have been instituted at Minneapolis by Charles E. French against his wife, Anne Warner French, the authoress, who is now at the home of her mother in St. Paul.

The proposed demonstration in honor of the Minnesota delegation in congress, to be held at St. Paul, has been abandoned by those in charge of the arrangements for it.

The Chicago Great Western has bought the Wisconsin Central freight depot in Minneapolis and is looking for larger quarters in St. Paul.

T. D. O'Brien of St. Paul, appointed by Governor Johnson to the supreme bench, has taken the oath of office.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

A. D. Crane, one of the old settlers of Blue Earth county, is dead at the residence of his son, a short distance from Mankato, as the result of injuries received in a runaway accident. Mr. Crane, who was eighty years of age, was riding with his grandson at the time of the accident and was thrown from the wagon, striking on his head on the hard road.

William O'Neal, seventeen years old, was drowned while bathing in a pond on the McConnell farm, near Chatfield, where he was employed during the summer. The young man swam across the pond and had returned about half way when he was taken with cramps and went down.

A team of horses belonging to C. W. Eckes of Morton shied at the press car on the St. Paul Dispatch trophy tour near that city, throwing the farmer, his wife and two daughters out, badly injuring Mrs. Eckes in a barb wire fence.

Four men whose backs have been broken within four and one-half months lie at the Minneapolis city hospital, one on a fair way to recovery, the others enduring a living death with scarcely a ray of hope for recovery.

Joy and festivity at an Austrian wedding celebration at Duluth turned to tragedy when Adolph Mattison, one of the guests, was fatally stabbed. Adolph and Victor Matel, brothers, were arrested, but deny they attacked Mattison.

Word has been received in St. Paul of the arrest in Seattle, Wash., of John F. Diethorn, late financial secretary of the St. Paul Aerie No. 33 of the Order of Eagles, wanted on a charge of embezzlement.

H. D. Harter, seventy-one years old, an employe of the St. Paul road at the Minneapolis shops, was run down and fatally injured in the yards. He died shortly after the accident at St. Barnabas hospital.

The young son of L. Dickinson was burned to death one mile north of Sauk Center in a burning haystack, which he set afire with matches. His parents found his body burned to a char.

Tom Jensen, a farmer, is dead at Jasper from internal injuries received when he was knocked down by a broncho, breaking his skull.

John Ek was kicked to death by a broncho on Ole Esterfelt's farm near Argyle.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Thomas Estlick, aged fifty-four, is dead at his farm southwest of Pelham, after a month's illness, which his family claims was brought on by the use of an anti-fat preparation.

John Drew, ninety-two years old, twice mayor of Duluth and one of the oldest residents of that city, died suddenly of old age.

Mrs. Chloe Ross, a well known singer of the Twin Cities, is dead at Minneapolis, aged thirty-seven.

TO COLONIZE LARGE TRACT

Project Started by Bishop McGolrick of Duluth.

For the purpose of colonizing a large farming district in Minnesota with desirable persons and establishing also Catholic churches and schools Bishop James McGolrick of Duluth has closed a deal by which he will control the settlement of 170,000 acres of land in Hubbard and Becker counties, this state. This means that, allotting twenty-five acres to a family, nearly 7,000 families can be furnished with small farms in one of the state's best agricultural districts, providing country homes for at least 25,000 persons now living under congested city conditions.

To Chicago, Milwaukee, New York, Boston and the large manufacturing centers of the East the bishop is sending circulars printed in German, Polish and English, telling the advantage of the plan he has to offer and urging wage earners now struggling for a livelihood in the great East to grasp the opportunity. While it is desired that as many Catholics as possible will seize the opportunity to get close to the soil there will be no discrimination as to religion and no person of desirable character will be refused an opportunity to share in the advantages the colonies will offer. While the land is owned by a St. Paul land company the latter will make no sales except upon the recommendation of Bishop McGolrick. The property covers a district about fifty miles in length, reaching from Akeley on the east to Detroit City on the west. Bishop McGolrick has personally inspected it from border to border and says it is one of the richest farming spots he has ever seen.

BIG CROWD AT STATE FAIR

More Than Eighty Thousand People Attend Minnesota Exhibition.

Ideal weather, a legal holiday and many thousands of dollars' worth of added attractions, together with Dan Patch and Minor Heir, were a combination that, as a drawing card for attendance, came near to shattering all records for fifty years at the Minnesota state fair.

As a matter of fact, with one exception, the opening day's attendance was the largest ever recorded. At noon over 1,000 more people had passed through the gates than during the entire first day and evening in 1908, and at 6 o'clock more than 2,000 more people had entered than at the same hour in 1907, when the total attendance reached 82,049. A conservative estimate places the day's total at 83,256, although the number may exceed this considerably.

Only once in the history of the fair has this figure been beaten. It was on Monday in 1906, which was also Labor day, and the great attraction was Dan Patch, who was to go against the world's pacing record. Just 93,199 people entered the grounds that day, and about two-thirds of them saw Dan Patch set a new world's mark of 1:55.

MANY PASSENGERS IN DANGER

Street Car Runs Wild When Motorman Is Stricken.

Forty state fair visitors were thrown into a panic at St. Paul when a Randolph and Hope street car ran wild for ten blocks while the motorman was unconscious in his cab with syncope.

The passengers were saved from injury by the coolness of the conductor and the courage of Officer David O'Gorman of the Prior avenue police station, who nearly lost his life in causing the conductor to stop the car and warning him of the danger.

The motorman, Peter Carlson, was taken to his home, where he was attended by Dr. Frederick Leavitt, and it is thought that he will recover. None of the panic stricken passengers were hurt.

ROBBERS CARRY OFF SAFE

Transport Heavy Treasure Box Half Mile Before Wrecking It.

When W. D. Dixon, the railroad station agent at Arlington, went to the depot he found the 1,200-pound safe missing. It was located about a half mile from the depot and had been blown open with nitroglycerin. The robbers obtained nothing, as there was no money in the safe. The papers were left scattered about. The safe had been carted away from the depot on a railroad truck.

BANK LOSES ALL ITS CASH

Robbers Blow Safe of Institution at Foxhome.

The First State bank at Foxhome, fifteen miles west of Fergus Falls, was entered by burglars. The robbers blew the safe and got all the money in it, about $2,000. They then escaped on a handcar, which they threw into the river near Breckenridge.

Highwaymen Rob Street Car.

A Payne avenue street car at St. Paul was held up in true Western style at Maryland avenue and Forest street and the conductor, James Carey, was robbed of $12.40, all the money he had, by one of two masked bandits, who were armed with revolvers. The highwaymen made their escape.

Sherman S. Smith Dead.

Sherman S. Smith, former member of the legislature from Minneapolis and prominent in Mill City politics, is dead after a long illness, aged forty-four.

SOMERVILLE SHOT

Well Known Sleepy Eye Attorney Seriously Wounded.

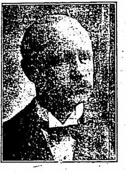
OUTCOME OF A LAND DEAL

Assailant Claims He Was "Done Up" in the Transaction.

Armed with a 38-caliber revolver John F. Hayner of St. Paul went into the private office of former State Senator George W. Somerville at Sleepy Eye and behind closed doors shot Somerville twice, both balls entering the body of the victim.

The shooting took place not more than three minutes after the door was closed. The only statement made by Somerville was that Hayner told him, "I want you to make that right," and began shooting him. Somerville was struck by the first bullet in the left wrist, entering the left lung above the heart, the bullet remaining in the body.

The second bullet entered the body of the victim in the back just below the heart, passing through the body. The bullet was picked up on the floor. After shooting Somerville, Hayner tried to shoot himself, the bullet missing his head and going into the ceiling. Somerville's injuries are of a very serious character, with some chances of a recovery.



GEORGE W. SOMERVILLE.

HANGS HIMSELF IN JAIL

Man Who Shot Senator Somerville Commits Suicide.

John Hayner, who shot and seriously wounded former Senator George W. Somerville at Sleepy Eye, hanged himself in the Brown county jail at New Ulm and was found swinging dead from the bars of his cell door. Hayner had carefully torn his blanket into strips, fashioning a rope strong enough to bear his weight, and then swung himself into eternity.

Prior to taking his life Hayner, in discussing the shooting of Somerville, declared that he was sitting down in a chair in Somerville's office when he fired the shots at the lawyer and did so because Somerville had risen from his chair and advanced in a threatening manner, holding an office ruler in his hands. It was, he said, to repel this attack, that he fired the shots.

Hayner said that the real estate deal with Somerville, in which he thought he had been cheated, was the exchange of 170 acres of land in Dent county, Mo., for property in Sleepy Eye. He said that Somerville assured him that seventy acres were under the plow and 100 acres well timbered and the value of the land was $5,000. These representations, Hayner said, were not true and he tried to engage counsel to bring suit against Somerville, but without success.

DIES TO SAVE PASSENGERS

Engineer Killed in Wreck on Northern Pacific.

Facing certain death Walter D. White, one of the oldest engineers on the Northern Pacific road, gave his life to save 400 passengers on the North Coast limited.

The crack passenger train of the Northern Pacific ran into a dirt train half a mile east of Detroit. Baggage and mail cars turned turtle and three mail clerks, the baggageman and the electrician were dangerously injured. When the mail car went down it was thrown into a swamp which is filled with about nine feet of water. The car was buried and passengers forced the doors and dragged the mail clerks out to safety.

The limited, two hours late, was running at high speed. Passengers declare it was going about fifty miles an hour when it left Detroit. Just before it came to the crossing of the Soo tracks the headlight of a work train appeared. Engineer White threw on the brakes but stuck to his post and his body was buried in the wreckage.

Gas Explosion at Minneapolis.

Arthur Anderson is dead and Conrad Mortenson is in a critical condition as the result of an explosion of an acetylene tank filling plant at Minneapolis. The entire retail portion of the city was shaken by the explosion.

FARM ORCHARD AND GARDEN

BY F. E. TRIGG

REGISTER, ROCKFORD, IA.

CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED

THE POOR MAN PROSCRIBED.

It is very likely superfluous to criticise the method by which Uncle Sam disposes of his public lands, but some phases of land drawings as ordinarily conducted seem to show that a fairer and more considerate policy might be followed. This would be along the line of allowing registration for the drawing without requiring the presence of persons at the place where the registration is to take place, the one desiring to register instead appearing before a notary in his home town. This would be a boon to many poorer people, who feel they can ill afford to bear the expense of a trip hundreds or thousands of miles to the locality where the drawing is to take place when there is not one chance in a hundred that they will be successful. Were such persons allowed to register at home and mail their applications the registration would be increased many fold. Those who did register would thus not be compelled to make a trip unless they were among the fortunate ones, in which event they would feel that there was enough at stake to justify an expenditure of their hard earned money sufficient to inspect the land to be awarded. Such an arrangement would cut down passenger traffic, but inasmuch as land drawings are not held primarily for the profit of transportation companies this would not be a vital consideration. It would, on the other hand, encourage many a poor man to register for land drawings who does not now do so, because the chances of success are so slim as not to warrant the expense involved. If there is any class which ought to benefit in the distribution of public lands it is the class just named.

PROPAGATING CURRANTS.

The currant, one of the highly prized garden fruits, may be propagated by taking hardwood cuttings some ten inches in length early in September. If the leaves have not already fallen they should be removed a week before the job is done. The cuttings should be started in the nursery row at once or tied in bundles and buried upside down with two or three inches of soil over the butts. In case the planting is delayed it may be done just before freezeup, or the bundles of cuttings may be stored in moss or sand and carried through the winter in the cellar or storeroom. In this case the cuttings should be planted in the spring just as soon as the soil is fit. In warmer and drier sections the planting is best done in the fall, which usually marks the beginning of the wet season, if the precipitation amounts to anything at all. Another method of propagation is known as mound layerage, which consists in drawing the soil up around the shoots of an established bush, when in the course of a couple of seasons they take root in this new upper soil and may be then cut away and transplanted, the stubs and roots of the parent bush being left below. Gooseberries may be propagated in the same manner.

ONLY A PATCH.

Nebraska and Colorado have lately passed stringent laws forbidding the importation of dairy cattle of any kind which do not show a clean bill of health in the matter of freedom from tuberculosis. This action may be called radical by those who would suffer from an enforcement of the law, but from the standpoint of a decent regard for the public health it is to be commended. Yet a matter that so vitally concerns the public health should not be left for the individual state to cope with, but should be reached by an effective federal law. Were such a measure enacted and the interstate shipment of tuberculous animals prohibited the ax would be laid at the root of the difficulty, and the individual dairyman of no conscience, being prohibited from selling diseased animals, would quit business or reform. Action by individual states is a step in the right direction, but it is at best a patch where in truth a new garment is needed.

A VOLCANIC WONDER.

[illegible]velers who have visited the Sa[illegible] islands tell of a volcano in active [illegible]ion on the island of Savil, which seems to surpass in magnitude of operation any other volcano of historical times. It broke loose four years ago, and from the beginning there has been a continuous and increasing flow of lava, which now comes from a rent in the mountain side in a stream eight miles wide, the volume being placed at 300,000 tons per minute. Already sixty square miles of land have been submerged by molten lava, hills 600 feet high being covered and valleys as deep being filled to the rim. The glare of the molten stream by night, coupled with the clouds of steam which rise as it plunges into the ocean, is said to be one of the most magnificent and awe inspiring sights imaginable.

Within reasonable limits those chickens will pay the largest percentage of profit which are marketed the soonest, as the most rapid as well as the cheapest gain in weight is made during the first three or four months.

In the recent land drawing which took place at Spokane there were more than 3,000 applications for every piece of land to be disposed of. If one of the lucky ones, it is still a gamble whether a fellow's number is low enough to give him the choice of a piece of land which is worth proving up on.

Butter makers of an inquiring turn of mind have found through careful tests that the water content of a dozen tubs of butter taken from the same churning may vary from one-half to 1 per cent. This would seem to suggest that the fellow who makes a practice of working up close to the 16 per cent limit should see to it that his water is pretty evenly mixed.

A part of the old Lee estate in Virginia has been set aside as a drug garden by the federal department of agriculture—that is, it is being used for the culture of new and valuable plants that may have a commercial value. Where success attends the growing of any varieties they will be recommended for other sections where soil and climatic conditions are right.

Last season Canadian orchardists shipped 5,000 barrels of apples to Cape Town, South Africa. The cost of transportation, storage, etc., was $3.05 per barrel and the price received $9.75, leaving the grower in the neighborhood of $2.25 per bushel net. This instance can be taken as still further proof that American fruit growers don't propose to lie still and lose money when foreign markets are more than glad to get their fine fruit.

Some investigations which the Iowa experiment station has made into a fungous disease of millet which has appeared at several places in the state this year indicate that the disease is millet smut, which is quite common in sections of Europe and which seems to have been brought into this country in seed imported from Germany. The smut in question is much like that which affects oats, and it can be prevented by soaking the seed for two hours in a solution of one pound of formalin to forty-five gallons of water.

The owner of a garden tract of three or four acres near Omaha has laid tile through the tract and is subirrigating it. In this case there is simply a reversal of the use of the ordinary system of draintiling, the water being pumped through the main lines into the laterals and drawn thence to the surface by capillary attraction as rapidly as needed. In sections where a water supply is handy and where periods of short rainfall are likely to occur at critical times such a system would seem to have a very definite and practical value.

James J. Hill, president of the Great Northern, is long headed enough to appreciate the vital relation between intelligent farming and big crops and increase in railroad traffic. In order to encourage a better type of farming he has put up prizes aggregating $2,500, to be awarded at the time of the Omaha corn show in December to exhibitors of small grains and grasses living in territory tributary to the Great Northern road. A plan of this kind is not philanthropy, but just good business policy, and might well be adopted by the officials of other roads.

Could some influence but be brought to bear to cause a partition of all agricultural land in parcels of a quarter section or more into forty or eighty acre tracts and the working of these areas in as intensive a way as is carried out on like areas in the irrigation districts of the western states a transformation would be brought about in crop yields and financial returns that could hardly be estimated. It goes without saying that the western irrigated tract possesses a marvelous and unimpaired fertility, while in many instances land in older sections of the country has been run down, but notwithstanding this handicap results that might be secured by a careful handling of this same old land would, to say the least, be surprising. The material welfare of coming generations is going to depend upon this more than upon any other single factor.

Bulletin No. 82, recently issued from the bureau of entomology of the department of agriculture, contains the results of a series of experiments which have recently been conducted with a view to finding effective methods of fighting the Colorado potato beetle. The information presented is primarily for the truck gardeners living in southeastern Virginia on either side of Chesapeake bay, who annually raise about $4,000,000 worth of early potatoes. Of late serious loss has resulted from the attacks of the mature potato beetles and the grubs or larvae. Heretofore the vines have been dusted in rather slipshod fashion with a mixture of paris green and land plaster, which in many cases, in addition to killing some of the bugs, has materially injured the vines. As a result of its experiments the department suggests that the poison, either in the form of paris green or arsenate of lead, be mixed with a bordeaux solution and applied with a power sprayer, making possible the spraying of large fields several times during the season. While the bulletin referred to is issued to help a particular group of growers, it might well be in the hands of all who are raising potatoes on a commercial scale.

Bumper crops of corn, wheat and oats with lowered prices will be viewed with satisfaction by the poultryman, who has had as much as he could do to keep his head above water with grain prices out of sight and no commensurate advance in the prices received for his poultry products.

We read an account the other day of a Nebraska granger who tried to hold up an express train to secure a lot of the gold which it carried. In view of the crop showing which Nebraska is making this year this attempted holdup is the worst case of effrontery we have run across. Had he lived in Rhode Island it wouldn't have been so bad.

The value of the products of Alaska, a bleak tract bought of Russia in 1867 for $7,200,000, during the period from 1880 to 1908 were: Gold, $140,000,000; other minerals, $6,000,000; fish, $100,000,000; furs, $50,000,000. The present annual production includes minerals, $20,000,000; fish, $10,000,000; furs, $500,000. When it comes to conducting a pretty profitable real estate business Uncle Sam should be included with the rest.

The scarcity of farm help in the great wheat belt during the season just closed, coupled with the unsatisfactory character of much that was available, is going to direct renewed attention to the feasibility of the gasoline tractor as a substitute for men and horses. This machine can be used not only to operate headers, but also in plowing, harrowing and seeding the land. The joint ownership of such a machine by the proprietors of small individual tracts of land has much to commend it.

A trip through the orange groves and vineyards of southern California, the prune, peach and apricot ranches of the central and northern part of the state and the apple growing sections of Oregon and Washington forces the conclusion that in all of these places, where the conditions are exceptionally favorable, the most important factor of success, after all, is not soil or climate, but the individual landowner and operator, whose energy, intelligence and skill determine whether he reaps a generous reward or no, for in all these sections are found ranches that are ill kept and therefore unprofitable.

It is not only the general appearance of the neighborhood in which one thinks of settling, but the appearance of individual farms here and there, as shown by clean fields and good crops growing, that often influences the prospective buyer. If so, it follows that the unkempt fields and slovenly premises of a shiftless or lazy person will tend to cast discredit on all his neighbors and the agricultural standing of the district and by so doing are likely to result in a depreciation of land values. This aspect of or reason for good farming is one that is not often referred to, but it is worth taking into account now and then.

In spite of the fame which the Hood river valley has achieved as a producer of high grade apples the business is but in its infancy. But little more than a fourth of the land in the valley suitable for orchard purposes has been utilized, and but a small per cent of the trees now set are in bearing. The prices which the grower receives for his crop run from $2 to $3.50 per bushel box, which is considerably more than growers in Missouri, Michigan and New York receive for three times as much. It is not surprising therefore that the fellows who work in sight of Mount Hood, snowcapped the year around, are a contented and prosperous lot.

The Missouri experiment station has secured valuable data from some recent hog feeding experiments. Six lots of six fifty-pound Poland-Chinas were fed different rations for a period of 102 days. In the windup it was found that the most economical ration was corn and skimmilk, the average daily gain per head being 1.61 pounds, while the cost per 100 pounds of gain (figuring corn at 40 cents and the milk at 15 cents per hundredweight) was $2.83. The next best showing was made by the bunch fed corn and alfalfa, the average daily gain in this case being .83 pound and the cost per 100 pounds of gain with corn and fresh alfalfa at $3 per ton, $3. Corn and clover gave .77 pound and $3.25 in these two respects and green rape and corn .58 pound gain and $3.34 as the cost per 100 pounds gain.

Estimates which have been made by careful students of crop conditions for the present season place the yield of wheat at the highest figure save one in the history of the country and the corn and oats crops as the largest which the country has ever produced. This has a tremendous significance in the minds of all who appreciate the connection between bumper crops and good times. Never before have these three great staples reached so high a figure in the same season. The result is in part due to exceptionally favorable weather conditions, including abundant moisture and freedom from blight, but also to a more intelligent and careful type of agriculture, about which much is being said these later days. This latter factor is one of the most hopeful signs of the present, as the possibilities of the American ranch and farm wisely handled are only just beginning to be realized.

HAD HIS SUSPICIONS.

That Was the Reason the Rabbits Did Not Surprise Him.

Si Perkins had never been surprised in all his life. When it snowed in the latter part of April he allowed he'd sorter felt it in the air for some time, when Jedge Abbott's barn burned Si thought it was about time, and when the town hall was struck by lightning he merely shrugged his shoulders and said he'd told 'em that them lightnin' rods wasn't any account when they were first talkin' of puttin' 'em up. Mrs. Perkins had just about given up all hope of ever exciting her husband's wonder when a friend told her of a marvelous conjurer who was showing at a variety theater in Boston. She took Si.

When the conjurer called for a volunteer from the audience Mrs. Perkins urged her husband to go up on the stage. He did. She watched expectantly as the "professor" extracted a five dollar gold piece from Si's ear, passed a watch through his back and extracted yards and yards of ticker tape from his shoes. Si looked bored. Finally the conjurer began to coax at Si's beard, and, to the amazement of the spectators, out hopped three little white rabbits.

"Waal," said Mrs. Perkins triumphantly when Si resumed his seat, "I guess that surprised ye some, didn't it?"

Si seemed almost surprised that she should think so. "Why, no," he finally drawled. "I didn't like to say nothin' about it, but I've been sorter suspectin' that them rabbits was thar for some time."—Everybody's Magazine.

The Operator's Amendment.

A young man who comes from a small town up New York state got a letter awhile ago from a young woman he knew up there asking him to let her know a good hotel at which to stay overnight in the city, as she was going to sail for Europe.

The letter came so close to the day of sailing that the young man decided it would be better to wire than to write a letter. He decided, too, that it would be best if the young woman put up at the Astor House, convenient to a morning sailing on the American line.

So he sent her this dispatch:

"You had better stop at Astor House."

When the operator up in the small country town got through with transcribing the message it conveyed to the young woman the following illuminating advice:

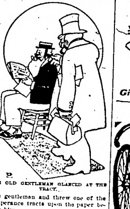
"You had better stop at a storehouse."—New York Sun.

Men Are Four.

Men are four. He who knows, and knows he knows—he is wise; follow him. He who knows, and knows not he knows—he is asleep; wake him. He who knows not, and knows not he knows not—he is a fool; shun him. He who knows not, and knows he knows not—he is a child; teach him.—Arabian Proverb.

A Simple Question.

One Sunday morning Mr. Moody, the revivalist, entered a Chicago drug store, distributing tracts. At the back of the store sat an elderly and distinguished citizen reading a morning newspaper. Mr. Moody approached this gentleman and threw one of the temperance tracts upon the paper before him.



THE OLD GENTLEMAN GLANCED AT THE TRACT.

The old gentleman glanced at the tract and then, looking up benignantly at Moody, asked:

"Are you a reformed drunkard?"

"No, sir; I am not!" cried Moody, drawing back indignantly.

"Then why in h— don't you reform?" quietly asked the old gentleman.

Illustrating a Word.

Myra Kelly, whose stories of child life on the east side of New York are well known to magazine readers, tells many amusing stories of her experiences in teaching the young idea of foreign extraction how to shoot in English. On one occasion she was attempting to demonstrate to a class of youthful pupils the exact meaning of various words, using the plan of taking a word, carefully explaining its meaning and then asking one of the class to construct a sentence containing that word. Among other words she selected was "disarrange," and after having attempted to make its meaning absolutely clear she called upon a little Italian boy for an oral demonstration. After an interval of deep thought he gave utterance to this:

"My papa he get-a up early in de morning for a light-a de fire in-a de kitchen. De fire he go out, and my papa say, 'Damn-a dis-a range!'"

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above, or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

King Haakon was very cordially received in Bergen, whither he went some time ago to open a congress convened for the purpose of adopting means and measures whereby to fight the dreaded leprous disease. The king made a very excellent address, in which he promised to lend all the moral and financial aid at his command for the noble cause. The king attended a number of functions that were given in his honor and hundreds of people flocked to Bergen to get a peek at him. King Haakon's popularity is not abating in the least.

Not less than thirty-four members of the storthing have declared emphatically that they will not be candidates for re-election. Most of them are farmers and business men, who have not the time to spare at the nation's capital. The sessions are long and tedious and no man who is actively engaged in a paying business is anxious to have these jobs. There will be plenty of other men, however, who will be willing to serve, so any particular trouble in filling the places of the vacating storthing's representatives is not looked for.

Lowzow, minister of war, resigned from his post a week ago last Saturday, because the storthing voted down with an overwhelming majority his army reorganization plan. The storthing has chosen his successor in the person of Major A. G. Sporck, an experienced and popular army officer.

Colonel Olaf William Petersen, chief of the naval academy and chief of the royal guards, died at his home in Christiania the other day, aged sixty-eight years. He was made an army officer in the reign of Charles XV., and has been in the service ever since.

The exportation of herring to Sweden has been stopped entirely owing to the strike. Norwegian herring is a welcome tidbit in Sweden, and especially among the poorer classes it will be greatly missed.

Hans Larsen, a prominent book publisher in Christiania, has donated 30,000 crowns, which shall constitute a legacy for caring for neglected boys. Let us hope that there are many more such men in Norway.

True to his never failing custom Emperor William has donated another 1,000 crowns for the restoration of the Trondhjem cathedral. The restoration continues slow but sure.

SWEDEN.

Stockholm has at present as its guest the Swedish consul in Charkov, Russia, Adolf Gustaf and wife. Sweden has never before had any consul in this section of Russia and up to this time Sweden has been exporting no goods to southern Russia. Consul Munch declares that if Swedish export merchants would be more aggressive that they would have a splendid field to work on in the great Russian market and that even in southern Russia there would be a splendid opportunity to introduce Swedish goods. Swedish knives and Swedish farm machinery of all kinds would find a ready market all over Russia, and the consul thinks that it is strange that Swedish exporters have not long ago availed themselves of this opportunity. Consul Munch is an aggressive gentleman and he has already succeeded in arousing a great deal of enthusiasm among exporters and will bring back with him a large number of samples of different Swedish export goods, which he will place on exhibition in Charkov.

There are now better facilities for receiving fresh fruit in Sweden than formerly. The Sassnitz-Trelleborg steam ferry between Sweden and Germany makes possible the importation of the southern fruits much cheaper than ever before. The fruit is transported in a through car from Marseilles, France, to Stockholm, which is the distribution center for the entire country. A company in France will have charge of this business hereafter and supply the market direct during the winter seasons. Formerly the Swedish fruit was handled through German middlemen and this made prices 40 and 50 per cent higher than will be the case under the new arrangements. Coming from France direct the fruit can also be shipped in good condition to other points when received.

A Stockholm paper describes conditions in Stockholm during the big strike as follows: "Stockholm is notorious all over Europe for her hard cobble stones and for the terrific noise caused by the iron rimmed wheels of her street trucks. Now the city is the quietest among the quiet. Our steps ing on the street as though we were in Trosa or Grenna. We only hear the chimes of the church bells, muffled conversation, and the cries of the loons in the harbor. The factory pipes do not announce the dinner hour, street railway tracks lie empty and shining in the sun, there is no chug, chug from the automobiles, no rolling noises from the wagons, and the peculiar sound of the wheels of the brewery wagons are not heard. Quiet rests the city."

Professor Nordenskiold and company of scientists are making a thorough exploration of Greenland during the present summer, and they are expected to return this fall with some exceedingly interesting data. The party arrived at Holstenborg, on the west coast of Greenland, in June and from there have worked their way up to within a radius of the Arctic circle, investigating the topography as well as the fauna and flora of that country. The Danish authorities of the country have shown their interest in the work by assisting the expedition in a variety of ways. The work will be completed by the end of this month, when the party will return to Sweden and make known to the world the results of their summer's investigations.

Queen Olga of Greece has been invited to come and visit the Swedish queen in the near future. Now that the strike difficulties have been checked it is very possible that the good queen will come. That she will be royally entertained goes without saying.

In spite of the strike the attendance at the Stockholm Industrial exposition has been averaging about 6,000 a day during the season. This is very gratifying indeed when it is taken into consideration that there has been so much trouble brewing.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

A Pennsylvania train was held up by a lone robber in the Allegheny mountains near Lewistown, Pa., and the train crew compelled to carry thousands of dollars in coin and bullion from an express car to a spot in the wilderness. When pursued the bandit took a bag containing 10,000 new Lincoln pennies and staggered away with it, leaving the real gold bullion to be recovered by the railroaders.

Mrs. Fred Young, aged twenty-two, wife of a farmer residing near Barnum, Minn., threw her three children, aged one, three and five years, into a deep well, set fire to the barn, destroying it, also set fire to the house and failing in her efforts to burn the building took a dose of Paris green and then gashed her throat several times with a knife, resulting in injuries that may cause death.

John Hayner, who shot and seriously wounded former Senator George W. STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Another sharp increase in the assessed valuation of Minnesota iron properties is contemplated by the state tax commission. Notices will be issued in a few days to certain mining companies in St. Louis and Itasca counties citing them to appear and show why their assessments should not be raised over last year's figures. The present assessment of the mines is about $183,000,000. It is believed that the coming action of the tax commission will bring the total considerably over $300,000,000.

By a decision filed in the United States district court by Judge Page Morris Minneapolis loses possession of Halls island, at the east end of Plymouth avenue bridge, where the Gerber public baths were installed at a cost of about $35,000 or $40,000. Corinna L. Hobart is declared owner in fee simple and entitled to immediate possession.

Shipments of crushed rock from the St. Cloud reformatory under the auspices of the state highway commission continue. The demand has been so large that if the orders now on hand are filled in full the crusher will be kept busy for two years to come.

The district grand jury at Duluth has recommended, in view of the great increase of crime in St. Louis county, that licenses to sell liquor be granted only to American citizens who shall be able to read and write English.

M. G. Norton and William H. Laird, prominent lumbermen of Winona, have agreed to turn over to that city $40,000 to be used to purchase a beautiful drive and park along the banks of the Mississippi.

Divorce proceedings have been instituted at Minneapolis by Charles E. French against his wife, Anne Warner French, the authoress, who is now at the home of her mother in St. Paul.

The proposed demonstration in honor of the Minnesota delegation in congress, to be held at St. Paul, has been abandoned by those in charge of the arrangements for it.

The Chicago Great Western has bought the Wisconsin Central freight depot in Minneapolis and is looking for larger quarters in St. Paul.

T. D. O'Brien of St. Paul, appointed by Governor Johnson to the supreme bench, has taken the oath of office.

TO COLONIZE LARGE TRACT

Project Started by Bishop McGolrick of Duluth.

For the purpose of colonizing a large farming district in Minnesota with desirable persons and establishing also Catholic churches and schools Bishop James McGolrick of Duluth has closed a deal by which he will control the settlement of 170,000 acres of land in Hubbard and Becker counties, this state. This means that, allotting twenty-five acres to a family, nearly 7,000 families can be furnished with small farms in one of the state's best agricultural districts, providing country homes for at least 25,000 persons now living under congested city conditions.

To Chicago, Milwaukee, New York, Boston and the large manufacturing centers of the East the bishop is sending circulars printed in German, Polish and English, telling the advantage of the plan he has to offer and urging wage earners now struggling for a livelihood in the great East to grasp the opportunity. While it is desired that as many Catholics as possible will seize the opportunity to get close to the soil there will be no discrimination as to religion and no person of desirable character will be refused an opportunity to share in the advantages the colonies will offer. While the land is owned by a St. Paul land company the latter will make no sales except upon the recommendation of Bishop McGolrick. The property covers a district about fifty miles in length, reaching from Akeley on the east to Detroit City on the west. Bishop McGolrick has personally inspected it from border to border and says it is one of the richest farming spots he has ever seen.

BIG CROWD AT STATE FAIR

More Than Eighty Thousand People Attend Minnesota Exhibition.

Ideal weather, a legal holiday and many thousands of dollars' worth of added attractions, together with Dan Patch and Minor Heir, were a combination that, as a drawing card for attendance, came near to shattering all records for fifty years at the Minnesota state fair.

As a matter of fact, with one exception, the opening day's attendance was the largest ever recorded. At noon over 1,000 more people had passed through the gates than during the entire first day and evening in 1908, and at 6 o'clock more than 2,000 more people had entered than at the same hour in 1907, when the total attendance reached 82,049. A conservative estimate places the day's total at 83,256, although the number may exceed this considerably.

Only once in the history of the fair has this figure been beaten. It was on Monday in 1906, which was also Labor day, and the great attraction was Dan Patch, who was to go against the world's pacing record. Just 93,193 people entered the grounds that day, and about two-thirds of them saw Dan Patch set a new world's mark of 1:56.

Well Known Sleepy Eye Attorney Seriously Wounded.

Assailant Claims He Was "Done Up" in the Transaction.

Armed with a 38-caliber revolver John F. Hayner of St. Paul went into the private office of former State Senator George W. Somerville at Sleepy Eye and behind closed doors shot Somerville twice, both balls entering the body of the victim.

The shooting took place not more than three minutes after the door was closed. The only statement made by Somerville was that Hayner told him, "I want you to make that right," and began shooting him. Somerville was struck by the first bullet in the left wrist, entering the left lung above the heart, the bullet remaining in the body.

The second bullet entered the body of the victim in the back just below the heart, passing through the body. The bullet was picked up on the floor. After shooting Somerville, Hayner tried to shoot himself, the bullet missing his head and going into the ceiling. Somerville's injuries are of a very serious character, with some chances of a recovery.

THE POOR MAN PROSCRIBED.

It is very likely superfluous to criticise the method by which Uncle Sam disposes of his public lands, but some phases of land drawings as ordinarily conducted seem to show that a fairer and more considerate policy might be followed. This would be along the line of allowing registration for the drawing without requiring the presence of persons at the place where the registration is to take place, the one desiring to register instead appearing before a notary in his home town. This would be a boon to many poorer people, who feel they can ill afford to bear the expense of a trip hundreds or thousands of miles to the locality where the drawing is to take place when there is not one chance in a hundred that they will be successful. Were such persons allowed to register at home and mail their applications the registration would be increased many fold. Those who did register would thus not be compelled to make a trip unless they were among the fortunate ones, in which event they would feel that there was enough at stake to justify an expenditure of their hard earned money sufficient to inspect the land to be awarded. Such an arrangement would cut down passenger traffic, but inasmuch as land drawings are not held primarily for the profit of transportation companies this would not be a vital consideration. It would, on the other hand, encourage many a poor man to register for land drawings who does not now do so, because the chances of success are so slim as not to warrant the expense involved. If there is any class which ought to benefit in the distribution of public lands it is the class just named.

PROPAGATING CURRANTS.

The currant, one of the highly prized garden fruits, may be propagated by taking hardwood cuttings some ten inches in length early in September. If the leaves have not already fallen they should be removed a week before the job is done. The cuttings should be started in the nursery row at once or tied in bundles and buried upside down with two or three inches of soil over the butts. In case the planting is delayed it may be done just before freezeup, or the bundles of cuttings may be stored in moss or sand and carried through the winter in the cellar or storeroom. In this case the cuttings should be planted in the spring just as soon as the soil is fit. In warmer and drier sections the planting is best done in the fall, which usually marks the beginning of the wet season; if the precipitation amounts to anything at all. Another method of propagation is known as mound layerage, which consists in drawing the soil up around the shoots of an established bush, when in the course of a couple of seasons they take root in this new upper soil and may be then cut away and transplanted, the stubs and roots of the parent bush being left below. Gooseberries may be propagated in the same manner.

ONLY A PATCH.

Nebraska and Colorado have lately passed stringent laws forbidding the importation of dairy cattle of any kind which do not show a clean bill of health in the matter of freedom from tuberculosis. This action may be called radical by those who would suffer from an enforcement of the law, but from the standpoint of a decent regard for the public health it is to be commended. Yet a matter that so vitally concerns the public health should not be left for the individual state to cope with, but should be reached by an effective federal law. Were such a measure enacted and the interstate shipment of tuberculous animals prohibited the ax would be laid at the root of the difficulty, and the individual dairyman of no conscience, being prohibited from selling diseased animals, would quit business or reform. Action by individual states is a step in the right direction, but it is at best a patch where in truth a new garment is needed.

A VOLCANIC WONDER.

Travelers who have visited the Samoan islands tell of a volcano in active eruption on the island of Savii, which seems to surpass in magnitude of operation any other volcano of historical times. It broke loose four years ago, and from the beginning there has been a continuous and increasing flow of lava, which now comes from a rent in the mountain side in a stream eight miles wide, the volume being placed at 300,000 tons per minute. Already sixty square miles of land have been submerged by molten lava, hills 600 feet high being covered and valleys as deep being filled to the rim. The glare of the molten stream by night, coupled with the clouds of steam which rise as it plunges into the ocean, is said to be one of the most magnificent and awe inspiring sights imaginable.

Within reasonable limits those chickens will pay the largest percentage of profit which are marketed the soonest, as the most rapid as well as the cheapest gain in weight is made during the first three or four months.

In the recent land drawing which took place at Spokane there were more than 3,000 applications for every piece of land to be disposed of. If one of the lucky ones, it is still a gamble whether a fellow's number is low enough to give him the choice of a piece of land which is worth proving up on.

Butter makers of an inquiring turn of mind have found through careful tests that the water content of a dozen tubs of butter taken from the same churning may vary from one-half to 1 per cent. This would seem to suggest that the fellow who makes a practice of working up close to the 16 per cent limit should see to it that his water is pretty evenly mixed.

A part of the old Lee estate in Virginia has been set aside as a drug garden by the federal department of agriculture—that is, it is being used for the culture of new and valuable plants that may have a commercial value. Where success attends the growing of any varieties they will be recommended for other sections where soil and climatic conditions are right.

Last season Canadian orchardists shipped 5,000 barrels of apples to Cape Town, South Africa. The cost of transportation, storage, etc., was $3.05 per barrel and the price received $9.75, leaving the grower in the neighborhood of $2.25 per bushel net. This instance can be taken as still further proof that American fruit growers don't propose to lie still and lose money when foreign markets are more than glad to get their fine fruit.

Some investigations which the Iowa experiment station has made into a fungous disease of millet which has appeared at several places in the state this year indicate that the disease is millet smut, which is quite common in sections of Europe and which seems to have been brought into this country in seed imported from Germany. The smut in question is much like that which affects oats, and it can be prevented by soaking the seed for two hours in a solution of one pound of formalin to forty-five gallons of water.

The owner of a garden tract of three or four acres near Omaha has laid tile through the tract and is subirrigating it. In this case there is simply a reversal of the use of the ordinary system of draintiling, the water being pumped through the main lines into the laterals and drawn thence to the surface by capillary attraction as rapidly as needed. In sections where a water supply is handy and where periods of short rainfall are likely to occur at critical times such a system would seem to have a very definite and practical value.

James J. Hill, president of the Great Northern, is long headed enough to appreciate the vital relation between intelligent farming and big crops and increase in railroad traffic. In order to encourage a better type of farming he has put up prizes aggregating $2,500, to be awarded at the time of the Omaha corn show in December to exhibitors of small grains and grasses living in territory tributary to the Great Northern road. A plan of this kind is not philanthropy, but just good business policy, and might well be adopted by the officials of other roads.

Could some influence but be brought to bear to cause a partition of all agricultural land in parcels of a quarter section or more into forty or eighty acre tracts and the working of these areas in as intensive a way as is carried out on like areas in the irrigation districts of the western states a transformation would be brought about in crop yields and financial returns that could hardly be estimated. It goes without saying that the western irrigated tract possesses a marvelous and unimpaired fertility, while in many instances land in older sections of the country has been run down, but notwithstanding this handicap results that might be secured by a careful handling of this same old land would, to say the least, be surprising. The material welfare of coming generations is going to depend upon this more than upon any other single factor.

Bulletin No. 82, recently issued from the bureau of entomology of the department of agriculture, contains the results of a series of experiments which have recently been conducted with a view to finding effective methods of fighting the Colorado potato beetle. The information presented is primarily for the truck gardeners living in southeastern Virginia on either side of Chesapeake bay, who annually raise about $6,000,000 worth of early potatoes. Of late serious loss has resulted from the attacks of the mature potato beetles and the grubs or larvae. Heretofore the vines have been dusted in rather slipshod fashion with a mixture of paris green and land plaster, which in many cases, in addition to killing some of the bugs, has materially injured the vines. As a result of its experiments the department suggests that the poison, either in the form of paris green or arsenate of lead, be mixed with a bordeaux solution and applied with a power sprayer, making possible the spraying of large fields several times during the season. While the bulletin referred to is issued to help a particular group of growers, it might well be in the hands of all who are raising potatoes on a commercial scale.

Bumper crops of corn, wheat and oats with lowered prices will be viewed with satisfaction by the poultryman, who has had as much as he could do to keep his head above water with grain prices out of sight and no commensurate advance in the prices received for his poultry products.

We read an account the other day of a Nebraska granger who tried to hold up an express train to secure a lot of the gold which it carried. In view of the crop showing which Nebraska is making this year this attempted holdup is the worst case of effrontery we have run across. Had he lived in Rhode Island it wouldn't have been so bad.

The value of the products of Alaska, a bleak tract bought of Russia in 1867 for $7,200,000, during the period from 1880 to 1908 were: Gold, $140,000,000; other minerals, $6,000,000; fish, $100,000,000; furs, $50,000,000. The present annual production includes minerals, $20,000,000; fish, $10,000,000; furs, $500,000. When it comes to conducting a pretty profitable real estate business Uncle Sam should be included with the rest.

The scarcity of farm help in the great wheat belt during the season just closed, coupled with the unsatisfactory character of much that was available, is going to direct renewed attention to the feasibility of the gasoline tractor as a substitute for men and horses. This machine can be used not only to operate headers, but also in plowing, harrowing and seeding the land. The joint ownership of such a machine by the proprietors of small individual tracts of land has much to commend it.

A trip through the orange groves and vineyards of southern California, the prune, peach and apricot ranches of the central and northern part of the state and the apple growing sections of Oregon and Washington forces the conclusion that in all of these places, where the conditions are exceptionally favorable, the most important factor of success, after all, is not soil or climate, but the individual landowner and operator, whose energy, intelligence and skill determine whether he reaps a generous reward or no, for in all these sections are found ranches that are ill kept and therefore unprofitable.

It is not only the general appearance of the neighborhood in which one thinks of settling, but the appearance of individual farms here and there, as shown by clean fields and good crops growing, that often influences the prospective buyer. If so, it follows that the unkempt fields and slovenly premises of a shiftless or lazy person will tend to cast discredit on all his neighbors and the agricultural standing of the district and by so doing are likely to result in a depreciation of land values. This aspect of or reason for good farming is one that is not often referred to, but it is worth taking into account now and then.

In spite of the fame which the Hood river valley has achieved as a producer of high grade apples the business is but in its infancy. But little more than a fourth of the land in the valley suitable for orchard purposes has been utilized, and but a small per cent of the trees now set are in bearing. The prices which the grower receives for his crop run from $2 to $3.50 per bushel box, which is considerably more than growers in Missouri, Michigan and New York receive for three times as much. It is not surprising therefore that the fellows who work in sight of Mount Hood, snowcapped the year around, are a contented and prosperous lot.

The Missouri experiment station has secured valuable data from some recent hog feeding experiments. Six lots of six fifty-pound Poland-Chinas were fed different rations for a period of 102 days. In the windup it was found that the most economical ration was corn and skimmilk, the average daily gain per head being 1.61 pounds, while the cost per 100 pounds of gain (figuring corn at 40 cents and the milk at 15 cents per hundredweight) was $2.83. The next best showing was made by the bunch fed corn and alfalfa, the average daily gain in this case being .83 pound and the cost per 100 pounds of gain with corn and fresh alfalfa at $3 per ton, $3. Corn and clover gave .77 pound and $3.25 in these two respects and green rape and corn .58 pound gain and $3.34 as the cost per 100 pounds gain.

Estimates which have been made by careful students of crop conditions for the present season place the yield of wheat at the highest figure save one in the history of the country and the corn and oats crops as the largest which the country has ever produced. This has a tremendous significance in the minds of all who appreciate the connection between bumper crops and good times. Never before have these three great staples reached so high a figure in the same season. The result is in part due to exceptionally favorable weather conditions, including abundant moisture and freedom from blight, but also to a more intelligent and careful type of agriculture, about which much is being said these later days. This latter factor is one of the most hopeful signs of the present, as the possibilities of the American ranch and farm wisely handled are only just beginning to be realized.

HAD HIS SUSPICIONS.

That Was the Reason the Rabbits Did Not Surprise Him.

Si Perkins had never been surprised in all his life. When it snowed in the latter part of April he allowed he'd sorter felt it in the air for some time, when Jedge Abbott's barn burned Si thought it was about time, and when the town hall was struck by lightning he merely shrugged his shoulders and said he'd told 'em that them lightnin' rods wasn't any account when they were first talkin' of puttin' 'em up. Mrs. Perkins had just about given up all hope of ever exciting her husband's wonder when a friend told her of a marvelous conjurer who was showing at a variety theater in Boston. She took Si.

When the conjurer called for a volunteer from the audience Mrs. Perkins urged her husband to go up on the stage. He did. She watched expectantly as the "professor" extracted a five dollar gold piece from Si's ear, passed a watch through his back and extracted yards and yards of ticker tape from his shoes. Si looked bored. Finally the conjurer began to coax at Si's beard, and, to the amazement of the spectators, out hopped three little white rabbits.

"Waal," said Mrs. Perkins triumphantly when Si resumed his seat, "I guess that surprised ye some, didn't it?"

Si seemed almost surprised that she should think so. "Why, no," he finally drawled. "I didn't like to say nothin' about it, but I've been sorter suspectin' that them rabbits was thar for some time."—Everybody's Magazine.

The Operator's Amendment.

A young man who comes from a small town up New York state got a letter awhile ago from a young woman he knew up there asking him to let her know a good hotel at which to stay overnight in the city, as she was going to sail for Europe.

The letter came so close to the day of sailing that the young man decided it would be better to wire than to write a letter. He decided, too, that it would be best if the young woman put up at the Astor House, convenient to a morning sailing on the American line.

So he sent her this dispatch:

"You had better stop at Astor House."

When the operator up in the small country town got through with transcribing the message it conveyed to the young woman the following illuminating advice:

"You had better stop at a storehouse."—New York Sun.

this gentleman and threw one of the temperance tracts upon the paper before him.

The old gentleman glanced at the tract and then, looking up benignantly at Moody, asked:

"Are you a reformed drunkard?"

"No, sir; I am not!" cried Moody, drawing back indignantly.

"Then why in h— don't you reform?" quietly asked the old gentleman.

Illustrating a Word.

Myra Kelly, whose stories of child life on the east side of New York are well known to magazine readers, tells many amusing stories of her experiences in teaching the young idea of foreign extraction how to shoot in English. On one occasion she was attempting to demonstrate to a class of youthful pupils the exact meaning of various words, using the plan of taking a word, carefully explaining its meaning and then asking one of the class to construct a sentence containing that word. Among other words she selected was "disarrange," and after having attempted to make its meaning absolutely clear she called upon a little Italian boy for an oral demonstration. After an interval of deep thought he gave utterance to this:

"My papa he gets up early in de morning for a light a de fire in a de kitchen. De fire he go out, and my papa say, 'Damn-a dis-a range!'"

The Worth of a Woman.

In the thought of a woman's love.
—Charlotte Louise Rudyard in Harper's Bazar.

The Bishop Won.

"There was an English bishop, the bishop of Oxford, who could reel off wonderful rhymes," said a London clergyman. "The bishop once wrote a rhyme about a cassowary:

"I would I were a cassowary
On the plains of Timbuktu!
I would eat a missionary,
Cassock, bands and hymn book too!"

"A dispute once arose about the authorship of that rhyme. The bishop of Oxford claimed it, and a punster on Punch also claimed it. Accordingly, as a test, the word Jehoshaphat was submitted to the two claimants for rhyming. The man who best rhymed that difficult if not impossible word would be judged the true author of the cassowary effort.

"Well, the Punch punster failed—fell down completely—but the bishop of Oxford easily proved his rightful ownership of the cassowary production by dashing off on the spur of the moment this magnificent effort:

"The valiant King Sennacherib
Of any man could crack a rib,
But could not of Jehosaphat,
And that because he was so fat."

The Very Ideal

A Flushing (N. Y.) clergyman, pastor of a popular church there, received as a caller at his parsonage the other day a young matron carrying in her arms a chubby-faced youngster.

"I want the baby christened," the mother said.

After the ceremony the clergyman started to write out the baptismal certificate required by the board of health.

Forgetting for the moment the date of the month, he remarked to the mother:

"This is the ninth, isn't it?"

"No, indeed, sir," replied the young matron indignantly. "It's only the third."

Separating Them.

Mr. Grubb, an elderly bachelor, having been troubled for a week or two with a pain in his back, went to his doctor. The physician prescribed two large porous plasters and told him to call again in about a fortnight and report.

Mr. Grubb complied with directions. He went to a drug store and bought the plasters and after a prolonged struggle with them in his own room succeeded in getting them properly in place. Being a very small man, however, the two nearly covered his whole back. At the end of two weeks he called at the physician's office again.

"Well, how is your back?" asked the medical man.

"Sound as a dollar; hasn't pained me any for ten days or more."

"Glad to hear it. You may take the plasters off whenever you please."

"Not much!" exclaimed Mr. Grubb, removing his coat and vest, taking off his collar and locking the door of the doctor's office. "I won't touch 'em. They're bigger than I am. What I want you to do now, doctor, is to pull me off the plasters."

The Life Giving Touch of Sympathy.

A man may have become almost a demon, he may have resolved upon immortal hate and study of revenge, but let him once feel the life giving touch of sympathy and love, and the seal, long dormant, will spring up and bring forth its harvest in the field of life.—J. C. Sellers, Jr.

Very Considerate.

Four old Scotsmen, the remnant of a club formed some fifty years ago, were seated round the table in the clubroom. It was 5 a. m., and Dougal looked across at Donald and said in a thick, sleepy voice:

"Donald, d'ye notice what an awfu' peculiar expression there is on Jock's face?"

"Aye," says Donald. "I noticed that. He's deed! He's been deed these four hours."

"What? Deed! Why didn't ye no tell me?"

"Ah, no—no, no," said Donald. "I'm no that kind o' man to disturb a convivial evening."

A Sensitive Soul.

"THE LOST CHORD" WAS SOMEWHERE.

"YOU VOS RIGHT," HE SAID SLOWLY.

A poor foreign musician was doggedly wrestling with his trombone outside an English village inn. He knew that "The Lost Chord" was somewhere in that instrument, but the latter seemed loath to part with it. At length the landlord appeared at the door. The poor musician bowed and, doffing his cap, said, "Musig hath jarms," and smiled.

The innkeeper smiled also, and kindly.

"Well, not always," he said, "but try that tune outside that red brick house and I'll give you sixpence."

Three minutes later the trombonist was back again, mud bepattered and forlorn.

"You vos right," he said slowly and sadly. "Musig hath jarms not always—no. A mad vellow out ov dat house came, and me mit a brigg he knocked down—yes. He not like that tune, no, no!" And he rubbed the back of his head.

"I thought he wouldn't," said the landlord. "He's just done a month's hard labor for stealing a clothesline from a back garden."

Ambition.

"The narrow vale is not for me!"
Cried one aflame with youth's fierce fires.
"I'll climb a mountain peak and see
The world and all my heart desires!"

'Twas long and hard. On bended knee
He reached the top. What mournful cry!
He could not see—
Age dimmed his eye!

Particular About the Plates.

A Washingtonian who has lived at hotels and restaurants nearly all his life and who is notably absentminded, especially when absorbed in talking about a subject that interests him, went out to dinner the other night.

He had plunged into a discussion before dinner and was continuing it animatedly throughout the oyster and soup courses. When the fish plates were placed on the table he followed the usual custom of the man who lives at hotels and wiped the plate off with his napkin. Instantly a butler removed it and placed another.

Deep in his discussion, the guest wiped that one with his napkin, and the butler replaced that. This happened a third time, and then the hostess said: "Please do not do that any more. I assure you the plates are perfectly clean, and, besides, I have no more of that pattern."—Saturday Evening Post.

An Ignorant Salesman.

An uncouth looking and overdressed young man entered a drug store and said:

"Gimme a brush!"

"Very good, sir," said the polite assistant. "What kind of a brush—a toothbrush?"

"Toothbrush! Naw!" snarled the young man. "What would I want a toothbrush fur? Do ye think I've got hair on my teeth?"

A Very Common Crime.

A certain judge who had got into the way of using a regular form of expression when imposing sentences, says Arthur Train in "The Prisoner at the Bar," was sentencing a man for the crime of stealing a ship's anchor, which he had carried away in a dray drawn by six horses.

The judge, who could not escape from his regular formula, pronounced sentence in these terms: "You have pleaded guilty to the crime of stealing a ship's anchor." Then, raising his voice, he continued with perfect solemnity: "The crime of stealing a ship's anchor is becoming entirely too prevalent. I sentence you to three years and a half in prison."

Don't Stay Down.

And if you fall, why, rise again. Get up and go on. You may be sorely bruised and soiled with your fall, but is that any reason for lying still and giving up the struggle cowardly?—Charles Kingsley.

Unprotected.

A little girl was greatly interested in watching the men in her grandfather's orchard putting bands of tar around the fruit trees and asked a great many questions. Some weeks later, when in the city with her mother, she noticed a gentleman with a mourning band around his left sleeve.

"Mamma," she asked, "what's to keep them from crawling up his other arm?"—Everybody's Magazine.

A Narrow Escape.

Edgar N. Bayliss, a merchant of Robinsonville, Del., wrote: "About two years ago I was thin and sick, and coughed all the time and if I did not have consumption, it was near to it. I commenced using Foley's Honey and Tar, and it stopped my cough, and I am now entirely well, and have gained twenty-eight pounds, all due to the good results from taking Foley's Honey and Tar."

VOL. XXVI. THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1909 NUMBER 38

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

CLAIM NOT TO BE DENIED

H. E. Mussey, the First and Most Successful Fruit Grower of This Section.

Raises the Finest Duchess Apples, Crab Apples, Cherries and Aitkin Plums.

While of course there will always be some dispute as to whether Dr. Cook or Capt. Peary discovered the North Pole, there is never going to be any controversy as to who was the first successful grower of fruit in Northern Minnesota and the Red River Valley. Harvey E. Mussey, pioneer and one of the most highly respected citizens of Thief River Falls, long ago established his reputation as a fruit grower in this section, but each year he keeps out-doing his previous record and we just can't help from mentioning the fact.

Mr. Mussey is not a horticulturist by profession—although nature probably intended that he should be—but he certainly has demonstrated beyond a doubt that fruit can be successfully raised in this section and thereby has conferred a great blessing upon posterity. Last week Mr. Mussey brought some fruit to this office that was grown at his home on the East Side and it certainly excels anything ever grown anywhere. Among the samples Mr. Mussey brought to the News were Duchess apples, crab apples, Siberian crab apples, compass cherries and Aitkin plums.

The Siberian crab apples were raised from a tree brought to this country by Mr. Dohrmann, of Excel, and the compass cherries are cherry roots grafted upon a plum tree. All of the fruit is well developed and it proves beyond a doubt that as good fruit can be raised here as anywhere.

CLASSIFYING THE LANDS

Work on the Diminished Red Lake Reservations Progressing Rapidly.

Indians Up There Will Soon Be Given Their Allotments by the Government.

The work of examining and classifying the timber and agricultural lands on the diminished Red Lake-Indian reservation has been completed, and soon the department at Washington will have reliable estimates on which they can base the allotting of lands to those of the Red Lake tribe who have made application for allotment.

This estimation and classification of the land on the Red Lake reservation was necessitated by application for allotments which began a year ago and were made by members of the Red Lake band under the provision of the Steenerson law.

A suggestion has been made, and will probably eventually be followed, showing that these allotments would divide into two parts, each containing equal tracts of timber and agriculture land, and it is for the purpose of definitely determing just which is agriculture and which are timber lands that the present estimating corps have performed this work during the past summer.

Pat Kennedy has been in charge of this work and he has had three compass men in his employ. There are some 450,000 acres of land which have been examined. The examination began on July 1.

At last winter's session of congress an appropriation of $1,000,000 was made, to be used in the preservation of timber of all the Indians in the United States; and paying for the work of estimating and classifying the land of Red Lake reservation will be made from the sum of $100,000.

KNOX DITCH LET TO ARPIN

Local Man Secured Contract for the Building of Ditch Last Saturday.

Will Have to Be Completed by the First of November Next Year.

The contract for constructing Ditch No. 36, known as the Knox ditch, was awarded to A. M. Arpin last Saturday at 15 cents per yard. It also provides for the construction of a road along the side of the ditch.

The ditch will drain a large number of acres of land in the country south of the Red Lake river east of here and will result in building a fine graded road into this city. It will have to be completed by the 1st of November, 1910, and Mr. Arpin will have to build a new walking ditcher to do this work, as all of his other machines will be busy on the big Germantown ditch. There are 126,300 yards of dirt to be removed and at the contract price of 15 cents per yard this will make the cost of the ditch to the farmers $18,915.

Work upon this ditch will be commenced early in the spring and Mr. Arpin states that it will be completed before the first of November.

Germo Leaves Red Lake Falls.

Attorney Thos. Germo has definitely decided to leave Red Lake Falls and he and Mrs. Germo are now making preparations for their leave-taking. They will go to Taylor, N. Dak., about Oct. 1, where Mr. Germo will open a bank and engage in the practice of law. Mr. Germo will no doubt make a success of the undertaking. A man of many fine qualities and one whose integrity will earn him the confidence of the business people, he is well fitted for his new work.

The fact that he is well informed in the law will assist him materially in conducting a successful banking business.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

SURVEYORS ON THE WAY

Are Reported by the Bemidji Pioneer to Be North of That City.

Are Coming In an Almost Straight Line to Thief River Falls.

The Bemidji Pioneer contains the following information regarding the survey of the Thief River Falls-Duluth line of the Soo:

Working in a generally northwesterly direction from the government dam at Winnibigoshish, a party of Soo engineers are camped on the south shore of a Little Bass Lake (between Little and Big Bass), about two miles east of the north shore of Lake Bemidji, and they are completing with all due haste an air-line survey (with slight deviation) which may be used by the Soo in its proposed route from a point near Thief River Falls to Moose Lake, near Duluth. The route that is being surveyed by this party is desirable and would admit a comparatively easy construction of a railway.

The surveying party is in charge of William H. Evarts, and there are twenty men in the crew.

Those locating engineers began their work at a point on the Great Northern railway some four miles west of Bena, where the line as generally laid out for the party would cross the G. N. in the route Thief River-ward. The survey continued to the Leech Lake government dam, where the work of locating a desirable route became a difficult one, and much hard work was necessary to locate a feasible line westward bearing north for the purpose of skirting Cass Lake and generally avoiding anything but a line that would of necessity again cross the G. N. This generally northwesterly work was commenced August 1st.

From the government dam at Lake Winnibigoshish, the direction followed was generally westward, entering Beltrami county at the extreme northeasterly end, crossing the Turtle river near its entrance into Cass Lake, thence westerly south of Big lake and northwest, touching the north end of Long lake; thence taking a curve westward and passing between Big and Little Bass lakes, directly west and reaching the Minnesota & International railway grade at a point but a few rods below a big fill-in, at the westerly end of Little Bass lake and directly east of a point but a short distance from the north shore of Lake Bemidji.

The route to be pursued by this party of surveyors from the north end of Lake Bemidji lies in a generally northwesterly direction, following the general plan, 1 mile north in 4 west, after tunneling under the M. & I. tracks where the line has been surveyed across, it being impossible to trestle the M. & I. at that point and maintain anything like an even grade.

Despite reports that much surveying has been done for the Soo in Clearwater and Red Lake counties, it is a known fact that, beyond gaining some small information that as to the general topography of the territory in the vicinity of Pine lake in Clearwater county, nothing of a definite nature has been done in surveying the line west or northwest of Bemidji.

The Soo crew at present camped on Bass lake has instructions to run lines as near Pine lake as possible. From north of Lake Bemidji the line will run south of what is known as the Big Meadows, skirting the McGhee farm on the north; thence through the Towns of Eckles, Liberty, Buzzle (in Beltrami county) thence passing south of Four-Legged lake, in Clearwater county, and on the south shore of Pine lake, avoiding the low lands and "taking to" the ridges.

From Pine lake the route pursued will be direct in an almost straight line to the Glenwood-Winnipeg line south of Thief River Falls.

The survey being made by the Bass lake party would complete the northern "air line" from northern Leech lake to Plummer and is a very feasible route. Little difficulty was found locating a good line, with but little grading and filling east of Lake Bemidji to Winnibigoshish dam, although there will be several curves to avoid hills. But the grade proposed does not vary from the system adopted by the Soo of three-tenths grade and a small degree of curvature; in fact Soo grades are one-tenth less grade than G. N. grades, the country over, and the Soo has less degree of curvature making fast time and comparatively easy hauls a feature of the road.

Brooten Branch Open.

Last Friday the Soo road opened its Brooten branch for business and hereafter all of the wheat and other shipments to and from Duluth will be made over its own line. The opening up of this road means much to the railroad men in the employe of the Soo as it will give employment to an additional number of trainmen, and a number of the "young" conductors and engineers will secure much better runs.

Will They Know Each Other There?

A Kansas editor says: "We attended church some time ago and listened to a very good sermon, as sermons go. We enjoyed the singing, and stood up with the brethern and sisters while they sang the good old hymn, "Shall We Know Each Other There?" While the hymn was being sung we glanced about us and counted about a dozen members of the congregation of the church who do not speak to each other when they meet on the street or otherwise. The thought occured to us why should they 'know each other there' when they seemingly don't know each other here.

Married Harriman.

Edward H. Harriman, the railroad genius, who died last week, was a lifelong friend of Bishop J. D. Morrison of the Episcopal diocese of Duluth, who is well known in Thief River Falls, and he once remarked to the prelate that he hoped to visit Duluth some day and to enter the city over his own railway line.

It was Bishop Morrison who married Miss Mary Averell and Mr. Harriman many years ago in St. John's church in Ogdensburg. The Bishop was entertained at different times by the financier.

To Fight the Law.

The Railroads of Minnesota will fight the forest fire law enacted by the last legislature. The law requires the railroads to have a patrol on every mile through timber districts in dry seasons, and requires them to burn or remove all combustible materials from their rights of way. The fight has already been commenced in Beltrami county, two cases wherein fines were imposed on railway companies for failure to provide patrols having been appealed to the district court.

School Notes.

The present week finds every desk in the assembly room and the normal department occupied. On Tuesday morning several desks were crowded in among the recitation chairs and tables in the laboratory and these were assigned the latest arrivals. Where the students, who have not yet entered school and who have signified their intention of doing so, will be seated is a puzzle. Were the whole building devoted to high school purposes exclusively, it would not be more than ample, and, even then, would be inferior in facilities and accomodations to a majority of the high schools in Minnesota in cities the size of Thief River Falls.

Miss Madeline Collins, who has successfully taught lower grade work at Bagley for two years, has been engaged to care for the overflow in Miss Wold's and Miss McGinn's room. At the present time the first primary room in the Central enrolls 61 pupils.

The two primary rooms in the Knox building have 98 little people in attendance, and more are expected. With some four exceptions, all the primary children in the city are six years of age or over.

A course of sewing for the girls in the fourth to the seventh grade inclusive is being worked out and will be put in operation within a few days. The eight grade girls will take elementary cooking as soon as the domestic science equipment is complete. The state course in domestic science and art suggests cooking and household art in the eighth grade and the first and fourth years of the high school; while sewing is presented in the fourth to seventh grade inclusive, and in the second and third high school years. This may be modified to suit local conditions.

Two more typewriters are needed in the commercial department.

A public reception to the the school faculty and under the auspices of the board of education will take place at the Antlers Club rooms on Friday evening of this week.—All citizens are cordially invited to attend, and parents, particularly, are requested to be present.

Capt. McDonald has made a decided improvement in the appearance of the Central grounds and property by trimming up the shade trees liberally. The Captain's keen saw and axe could be similarly employed with good results in several sections of the city, where projecting branches keep the passerby busy dodging to save his headgear.

Miss Grindeland, English teacher for the past two years in the local high school, is now principal of the high school at Appleton, Minn.

Wayne Richardson, while taking a few weeks holidays prior to engaging in the practice of law, has kindly consented to act as coach for the high school football team. The boys are fortunate in securing his services and will no doubt add new laurels to their record on the gridiron this fall.

The high school students and faculty somewhat envious of the good fortune of the soldier boys in being provided with such commodious quarters by the city threaten to take forcible possession of the proposed $40,000 armory when completed. Their present crowded condition force them to the opinion that they could utilize every foot of space in the splendid assembly room, the numerous offices, gymasium, etc., in the armory to good purpose; in fact, some of the boldest among them are frank enough to suggest that a $40,000 high school building is the most pressing need of Thief River Falls at the present time.

COURT HOUSE CONTRACT LET

M. Brady, of Red Lake Falls, Secures a Job That Others Did Not Want.

Commissioners Take Back Their Gold at Expense of Thief River Falls.

At a meeting of the county commissioners held on Tuesday the contract for the construction of the proposed new court house was let to M. Brady, the Red Lake Falls contractor, for $15,130. Mr. Brady's nearest competitor was Ed Moran, also of Red Lake Falls, with John Duffy as surity. Outside contractors refused to bid upon the work as a general thing, there being a total of only four bids submitted.

Work of building the court house, it is said, will be commenced at once, and the contractor will be paid by warrants issued by the county. As the injunction proceedings restraining the county commissioners from letting the contract is in the courts and will be taken to the supreme court, there is going to be a considerable mix-up if the decision goes against the county commissioners. Attorney General Young is confident that he will win this case before the state supreme court. If he does, the commissioners personally, or the contractor, will be the owner of the court house and not the county of Red Lake.

Upon a motion, the $35,000 recently tansferred from the ditch fund was ordered transferred back. As there is less than $31,000 in the revenue fund now, it is not going to be an easy job for Treasurer Ives to do this. By transferring the money back to the original fund, the county commissioners admit that they did an illegal act in the first instance.

The commissioners also took a "fall" out of Thief River Falls by rescinding an appropriation made two years ago of $1,000 from the road and bridge fund to help pay the expense of constructing the new bridge across the Red Lake river here. The appropriation had never been paid because of a lack of funds in the road and bridge fund. Although the taxpayers of Thief River Falls pay one-fourth of the road and bridge fund tax, they are not going to do any kicking—as a matter of fact it would not do them any good if they did. The commissioners, however, did not attempt to get back any of the thousands of dollars that have been appropriated to build bridges in Red Lake Falls.

Removes County Commissioners.

Just prior to leaving for Rochester Monday to undergo his fourth surgical operation for appendicitis, Governor John A. Johnson filed an order removing from office A. W. Danaher, chairman, F. O. Sibldy and Wes Wright, commissioners of Beltrami county.

The governor is taking further time for the consideration of the charges against County Auditor John Wilmann.

County Commissioner Joseph Johnson was in the city the first of the week.

The Ladies Aid Society of the German Lutheran church meets with Mrs. Gilbert Lonson next Wednesday afternoon Sept. 22.

Mr. M. C. Mathbar, representing the Power Equipment Co., of Minneapolis and Mr. E. W. Johnson, engine expert for the same company, together with Mr. J. E. Morrisey, of Crookston, were in the city Monday for the purpose of making a professional test on a 25 H. P. Foos gasolene engine, which was purchased some time ago by O. Tessum from this company. The engine developed a considerable surplus over its rated horsepower, developing 29 horse power on a break test.

Killed by a Bull.

The 11 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Poplinski, living five miles northwest of Greenbush was killed by a bull in the field on his fathers place Sunday. The boy was crossing the field when suddenly attacked by the animal and was gored to death.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

After years of talk about "moving Sparta" and after months of turmoil in tearing down buildings and moving others to Gilbert it may now be stated that the history of the place as a town is now ended. A big steam shovel has started to eat up the earth on what was the main street of the town and a sidetrack of the Iron Range road is being run through the center of the town.

A total of 5,801 men were secured positions through the state free employment bureaus during the month of August. This is the best the state has ever done in one month. The average cost to the state was only 13 cents per man. Of the total number 2,072 were in Duluth, 1,049 in St. Paul and 2,680 in Minneapolis.

An extra session of the legislature to approve the income tax and provide taxes for good roads and reapportion the state was recommended by R. C. Dunn of Princeton in a speech before the reunion of the lawmakers at the state fair.

Figures on building operations for August throughout the United States show that St. Paul is fourth in rank for the largest increase over the corresponding month last year, the percentage of increase being 105 per cent.

Bathers to the number of 257,722, one-fifth of whom were women, used the St. Paul public baths this season. The season opened June 16 and closed Sept. 6.

Gaining $8,711,303.79 since June 23 the bank deposits of Minneapolis have reached $88,731,023.08.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

While John Donkers and his ten-year-old son were driving over a bridge in Warsaw township, Rice county, with a heavy manure spreader the structure gave way. Mr. Donkers and his son, together with the team, went down with the bridge into the stream. The boy was badly injured, but Mr. Donkers escaped without any injury. One of the horses was drowned and the other badly hurt.

O. C. Olson, a farmer residing a few miles out of Evansville, Douglas county, was killed on his farm by a vicious bull while endeavoring to drive the animal back into a pasture. The bull, after knocking the farmer to the ground, trampled him to death. It was at least twenty minutes before the enraged bull could be driven from his victim.

Frank Scherer, a St. Cloud saloonkeeper, committed suicide by drinking carbolic acid. He had engaged in a quarrel with his wife and she had leaped from the second story window of their home to escape his assaults. Scherer was at once taken to St. Raphael's hospital, where he died a half hour later. He was forty years old.

Joseph Kienlen, an employe of the Engesser Brewing company, was killed in an accident at Bradleys crossing, near St. Peter, when he fell from the heavily laden wagon he was driving and under its wheels. His head was fractured and he suffered serious internal injuries. He fell asleep while on the seat.

Thomas Jensen, a farmer of Rose Dell township, Pipestone county, was so badly injured while exhibiting some horses at a horse sale that he died within a few hours. One of the horses ran against a gate while the animal was being roped and the gate was pushed over, crushing Mr. Jensen.

Herman Hansen, a pioneer farmer of Carver county, was drowned in an old well on his farm, where he had gone to get a drink.

James Elliott of Fergus Falls was dangerously burned and crushed while operating a threshing machine near that city.

Louis Cugnet, the fifteen-year-old son of Louis Cugnet, Sr., of Warrond, accidentally killed himself while out hunting.

Louis Lauzon, aged thirty-five years, was accidentally killed at Cloquet by falling in front of his heavily loaded wagon.

A. E. Anderson, a resident of Whalen, was burned to death in a farmhouse on his farm near that place.

Ruth Berk of St. Paul, seven years old, was frightfully burned about the body in a bonfire.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

John Rihacek, a farmer residing about four miles from Mankato, was found lying dead in a field near his home. He was digging postholes at the time and it is thought that he was overcome by apoplexy.

Dr. H. Wychgram, a resident of Winona county since 1858 and of Winona city since 1863, is dead. He was for over forty years engaged in the manufacture of proprietary articles and was widely known.

Melvin Rasdall, a pioneer resident of Blue Earth county and a prominent citizen of St. Clair, is dead. During the Civil war he was a volunteer member of Company F, Minnesota heavy artillery.

George A. Hillis of Bethel, aged seventy-five, was stricken with apoplexy at the state fair grounds and died before medical aid could be called.

Monse Johnson, aged seventy-five years, a veteran of the Civil war, is dead at his country home near Lake Crystal.

PEONAGE IN MINNESOTA

Federal Official Claims That It Exists.

That a system of peonage and white slave labor exists in the northern part of this state so pronounced that it may involve the federal government with Russia is the sensational charge made by John Clifton Elder of the United States immigration department in a letter to Governor John A. Johnson.

Mr. Elder charges that foreigners are tricked and beaten if they attempt to leave their employment and in some cases the machinery of the law is used to detain these laborers.

"Reports seem general in the northern part of Minnesota," Mr. Elder says, "and when laborers owe transportation and try to leave they are arrested and forced to work out the indebtedness.

"The writer has found a case in Northern Minnesota of two subjects of the Russian government employed in a lumber camp who tried to escape and were taken before a justice of the peace and sentenced to thirty days."

FORMER RECORDS BROKEN

Attendance at State Fair Greater Than Ever Before.

After the force of ticket counters employed by Leslie G. Fuller, auditor for the Minnesota State Agricultural society, had completed its work it was found that the state fair of 1909 was the "biggest" as well as the "best." The attendance for the week was 328,678, as against 326,743 for 1908, the best previous record. The attendance by days for the two years follows:

Monday	38,032	88,620
Tuesday	62,376	41,972
Wednesday	66,982	89,852
Thursday	63,042	50,207
Friday	61,612	60,012
Saturday	34,469	48,015
Total	326,743	328,678

DIAMOND BADGE FOR TAFT

Japanese Will Make Presentation at Minneapolis.

All members of the party of Japanese commissioners now in this country are looking forward to meeting President Taft in Minneapolis on Sept. 19. Baron Shibusawa will deliver to the president a message of good will from the emperor of Japan. Mr. Taft will be presented with a badge of gold enamel and diamonds depicting the American eagle holding in its beak a pennant inscribed "Welcome," which it is extending toward the rising sun. The medal is suspended from a bar representing the American and Japanese flags.

MILL CITY FINANCIAL DEAL

Leading Bank and Big Trust Company Consolidate.

An associated bank and trust company for Minneapolis, with combined capital and surplus of $6,300,000 and total resources of more than $35,000,000, is the result of the biggest financial deal ever put through in the Mill City. The Northwestern National bank will increase its capital stock by $1,000,000, to $3,000,000, surplus remaining at $2,000,000. The Minnesota Loan and Trust company will add $500,000 to its capital, bringing it up to $1,000,000. Each institution will have undivided profits of $100,000.

DIES TELLING WIFE OF HURT

Minnesota Farmer Plunges Beneath His Own Hayrack.

Frank Senkyr, a farmer residing at Henryville, about nine miles south of Olivia, was leaning over the front end of an empty hayrack to urge on his horses when a board broke and he fell head first to the ground, both wheels passing over him.

He walked to the house, a distance of 400 feet, and, after telling his wife of the accident, fell to the floor dead.

GIRL IS BURNED TO DEATH

Awakes From Nap and Plays With Matches.

Alice, the three-year-old daughter of E. W. Anderson of Two Harbors, was burned to death.

She had been taking a nap in a room at home and is supposed to have awakened and played with matches.

The child was terribly burned before assistance came and suffered great agony for two hours.

County Commissioners Removed.

The ousting of the three county commissioners of Beltrami county, whose removal had been recommended by the state public examiner's department after a number of alleged irregularities had been reported by M. F. Kain, deputy examiner, was announced by Governor Johnson. The commissioners removed are Wes Wright, F. O. Sibley and A. H. Danaher. County Auditor John Wilman, whose removal was also recommended, will stay in office for a time.

St. Paul Man Decapitated.

John Tierney, employed by the People's Ice company of St. Paul, was run down by a Wisconsin Central train at North St. Paul and decapitated. The headless body was brought to St. Paul by Coroner A. W. Miller and placed in the morgue to be held until claimed by relatives.

PERISH IN FLAMES

Three Little Children Lose Lives at White Bear Lake.

COTTAGE HOME IS DESTROYED

Fire Started by Gasoline Explosion in Kitchen.

Fire destroyed the summer cottage of Richard A. Walsh, a well known St. Paul lawyer, at Lakewood, White Bear lake, and three children of a family of thirteen, John, aged five years; Angelina, aged four years, and Robert, aged nine months, were burned to death.

William Walsh, nine years old, was terribly burned about the head, arms and chest in his heroic efforts to save his little brothers and sisters, six of whom were sleeping on the second floor of the cottage. Sarah, fifteen years old, also was badly burned about the arms and chest while making a similar effort.

Mr. Walsh, the father, was severely burned, too. He was injured from the explosion of a gasoline stove in the kitchen of his home, which he attempted to light. Supposing that none of the burners were lighted Mr. Walsh set about to fill the gasoline reservoir of the stove, but one of the burners had been left burning and when he poured the gasoline into the tank the accumulated gas caught fire and a terrible explosion followed.

The fire immediately spread throughout the frame structure and it was a roaring furnace in a few moments. Six of the children, including those killed, were sleeping on the second floor and were practically imprisoned by the flames.

TORNADO ON MESABA RANGE

Destroys Thousands of Dollars' Worth of Property.

A tornado struck Coleraine, Western Mesabe, and continued an hour, completely demolishing the $20,000 two-story brick block belonging to A. M. Murnike of Eveleth.

The wind also destroyed the grandstand and scattered the fence of the Coleraine baseball team, involving a loss of $1,000, partly razed the scaffold of the Itasca Ski club's slide, which was to have been used in the national tournament to be held there next winter, lifted up the big Palace livery barn and set it diagonally on the lots, split telephone poles, damaged the mines, several stores, residences and outbuildings and did thousands of dollars' worth of damage to fences, sidewalks, streets, avenues and trees.

The wind, which blew seventy miles an hour, was accompanied by a heavy rain, which also did considerable damage.

The Canisto and Walker mines are partially filled with water for the second time within thirty days and operations are suspended.

SIX PERSONS ARE INJURED

Interurban Car Overturns at Fort Snelling.

One soldier was seriously hurt and five others, civilians and soldiers, were painfully injured when a Fort Snelling-Minnehaha interurban car jumped the track on a sharp curve near Fort Snelling and overturned, after running on the ground several feet. Those injured were immediately taken to the garrison hospital where the surgeons in charge said none was fatally injured.

It is possible that one soldier, Corporal W. E. McCulah, Company I, Twenty-eighth Infantry, is injured internally, as he was pinned beneath the overturned car twenty minutes before he was released by members of the guard detail which came from the fort to give aid.

JOHNSON FACES THE KNIFE

Governor of Minnesota to Be Operated Upon.

Governor John A. Johnson arrived in Rochester from his home in St. Paul with Mrs. Johnson and was met at the train by Dr. Charles Mayo, who led the governor to an automobile and hurried him away to the home of John Sullivan, deputy state oil inspector, where he will remain until conveyed to the St. Mary's hospital.

The operation will take place in a day or two in the hospital and will be conducted by Dr. William J. Mayo. It will consist chiefly of the removal of certain intestinal adhesions, arising from an operation for appendicitis performed on the governor several years ago.

BOTH ASPHYXIATED BY GAS

Wife and Son of Judge Nelson, Formerly of Minneapolis.

Mrs. Ina Nelson wife of former Judge G. M. Nelson, formerly of Minneapolis, and her little son, George Stewart Nelson, were asphyxiated by illuminating gas in their home at Larchmont, N. Y. Mother and child were found lying on the same bed and gas was pouring from a stop cock in the wall. Her husband discovered the bodies when he awoke in an adjoining room. It is thought that Mrs. Nelson accidentally turned on the gas. The Nelsons removed to the East from Minneapolis two years ago.

The Northern Pacific railroad has set out during the last summer about 200,000 Golden Willow along its right of way which will serve as snow fences in place of the old style board fences. On the north side of the track two rows are planted, one 175 and the other 100 feet from the track while on the south side one row is planted. These will make a far better protection than the old style snow fences and possess the advantage of, being ornamental as well. It is to be hoped that the other roads will follow the example and begin to use the same kind of a snow fence.—Ex.

If a thousand or so American mayors do not have in their possession by Oct. 9th, the latest and best ideas on how to run cities, it will not be the fault of the St. Louis Centennial Association and the Civic League of St. Louis. The former has arranged to bring together and entertain at least this number of chief executives of municipalities of the United States during the week that the one hundredth anniversary of the corporation of St. Louis will be celebrated, beginning October 3rd, and the latter has siezed upon the opportunity afforded to have the visitors join in a great conference on problems of city government.

FARM ORCHARD AND GARDEN

CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED

THE TIME FOR ACTION.

The most appropriate time to talk about good seed corn is not March 1, when the time for testing it is at hand, but the few weeks preceding Oct. 15, during which time the choicest and earliest maturing ears can be secured and thoroughly dried and cured before heavy freezes take place. While at the job it is well to secure more than one needs for himself, for some hapless fellow in all probability will not take the necessary precautions and next spring will be anxious to get the surplus seed and pay a good price for it. The seed ears should be hung in a well ventilated open shed, southern exposure preferable. When thoroughly dry it may be stored in a dry place, a conventional arrangement being to tie the ears in strings of about twenty ears, each being fastened at the middle and crisscrossing the one above it. The strings of ears should then be hung up where the mice cannot get at them and where they will not draw moisture during the winter months. To be on the safe side it is well to store the ears where they will not be subject to severe cold. In the fall selection of seed ears not only should the time of maturity of the ear be considered, but its shape, outward appearance of kernels and general thriftiness. It should be even rowed, and the kernels should cover the tip as completely as possible. A detailed study of the kernels is best delayed until next spring at testing time, when ears having kernels which are not plump to the germ end may be discarded along with those which do not show enough vitality. Professor Holden, the great corn expert, holds that if all seed ears were picked and hung up to dry by Oct. 15 more would be done to increase the yield of corn than would be possible in any other way.

HOW HE SAVED HIS CROP.

Last spring at blossom time, when growers in many sections of the west were having the time of their lives trying to save the prospective crop of fruit by making smudges and burning fire pots and pitch pots and what not in their orchards, a fruit ranch owner near Medford, in the Rogue river valley, in southern Oregon, having tried all of these plans and failed, decided that what was needed most in his orchard to keep the blossoms from freezing was just plain heat, so he built some fifty small fires of fir cord wood in about nine acres, nights when the thermometer dropped to the danger point and by this means succeeded in keeping the temperature up some 12 degrees. The fuel and labor cost per night of this protection was $5, or about 55 cents per acre. An interesting feature of this case is the fact that the fires which were kept burning in this orchard saved the blossoms in orchards on three adjoining sides from three to five rows back from the fence. That the ranchman in question was paid for his pains is shown in the fact that there are now hanging on his trees from 3,500 to 4,000 boxes of choice Newtowns, Spitz and Ben Davis, which will net him from $2 to $3 a box. So well did this simple plan work that others should know of it.

SOME FEEDING EXPERIMENTS.

The Illinois experiment station has been making some exhaustive tests in the feeding of steers. While the full details of the experiments have not been made public, some general results have been announced. One conclusion arrived at is that the quantity of the feed given affects materially the proportion of the feed digested by the animals—that is, the more feed given the less proportionately was digested, one lot, receiving 20 per cent less of the same food than another, making 2 per cent larger gain in flesh. Another fact demonstrated was that beeves can be fattened upon a relatively low protein ration, which means economical meat production. This one point of economical use of feed in fattening operations is one that should be given attention by every feeder, who without much extra trouble could carry out much the same tests as those indicated above and prove the value of them from his own experience.

POOR SCHOOLS AND BIG BARNS.

It ought not to be so, but in all too many instances the country schoolhouse and grounds are the most ill kept and slovenly in appearance and the teacher the most ill prepared for her work and poorly paid in districts where one sees the biggest barns, the most hogs in lot and cattle in pasture. It might be added, too, that it is usually in districts of this description where the boys and girls are kept from school on almost any pretext and from which they dig out for more congenial surroundings just as soon as they can earn their own way. This condition referred to is a wretched and short-sighted perversion of the relative importance of things and ought to be righted.

The present output of wheat in Canada is 283,000,000 bushels annually, and this with but 7 per cent of her available wheat land utilized.

The fall months are the proper ones in which to start the bulbous plants for next year's garden. The bed should be made rich and mellow and the bulbs set in place before the cold weather comes on.

It isn't the fish and game a fellow gets when on a day's jaunt, but rather the relaxation, exercise and fresh air, that are of most value. He may not think so at the time, but the delusion is perfectly harmless.

If the gasoline engine is to be stationary the best possible foundation for it is one of stonework or cement laid deep enough to give needed stability. Iron rods with large clamps should run to the bottom of the foundation and extend high enough so that the base of the machine can be anchored to them.

The tomato vines may be counted on to produce fruit which in size will be in an inverse ratio to the number allowed to mature. The best and most perfect fruit is produced where but two or three stems are permitted to carry fruit, the pruning being done gradually during the growing season. However, where the vines have been allowed to grow at will much can be done to increase the size of the fruit set as well as to hasten maturity by cutting off a good share of the growing shoots with some kind of a sharp knife.

A man who some years ago moved into a neighborhood where yellow mustard was thicker in the fields than hair on a dog's back writes a leading agricultural paper that the way to get rid of the pest is first to clean the seed grain and not sow mustard seed. As a second precaution he recommends plowing the fields as soon as the shocks are off, which will germinate the seed the same fall and prevent it living through the winter. Lastly he suggests keeping the roadsides and fence corners clean. This program of extermination would seem to be pretty good.

The forest service bureau has on exhibition a number of two inch sections of several varieties of wood which have been put through tests for strength, and the showing which the eucalyptus makes is remarkable. The sample of this wood broke down under an end strain of 43,200 pounds, the fiber stress per square inch being 13,580. In like blocks of oak and hickory, generally supposed to be the strongest and toughest of our native woods, the figures for the two strains were respectively 17,060 pounds and 4,870 pounds and 30,280 pounds and 8,800 pounds.

The writer recently had opportunity to put some questions to a civil engineer who has had charge of private and government irrigation projects in the Yakima valley. Among other things, his opinion touching pumping plants for irrigation purposes where the land did not lie right to receive water from a gravity system was that they were quite practicable and satisfactory and for a forty acre tract ought not to exceed $800. He held that even better results could be secured, including greater economy in operation, if a group of from three to six neighbors were to unite in the construction and maintenance of such irrigating plant.

One of the surprises for the visitor at the Seattle exposition is the remarkable display of agricultural products to be found in the Alaska building. The climate of southern Alaska is greatly modified by ocean currents, which have much the same effect that the gulf stream has on the countries of northern Europe. As far north as latitude 64 degrees grains and grasses are grown successfully, as well as potatoes and other root crops. The last to be added to the list is the festive watermelon. Considering the fact that this great domain was for many years viewed as a resort for seals and polar bears, the showing referred to is not bad.

The cutting of the roadside weeds is to be urged for two or three very good reasons—first, to keep them from maturing and scattering a big crop of seed; secondly, to prevent their becoming a catch for drifting snows and thus a serious hindrance to winter traffic, and, thirdly, the improved appearance of the highway from the standpoint of those who drive over it. While the first two reasons given are perhaps the most practical, the third is just as important, for, whether they will or no, the character, public spirit and enterprise of the residents of a community are often very accurately shown by the care they give the highways for which they are responsible.

As soon as the tops of the onions are ripe and the roots sufficiently dead to permit of easy pulling the crop should be raked into convenient rows with a round toothed rake, care being taken not to bruise the onions. They should then be allowed to dry until the top is completely shriveled and the outside skin rattles, when the topping may be done with a pair of light, sharp scissors. If dry enough to store they may be crated or sacked when topped. If not they should be given a few days more curing. Before being sacked or stored the crop should be thoroughly dry, and this is a point which any careful buyer will insist on. The crop should be secured as early as possible in sections where frosts occur, as a hard freeze will cause the onions to sweat and sprout.

Did he but realize it the farm or ranch owner living along main traveled roads is interested financially in keeping them in the best possible condition in a far greater degree than the rural carrier, the auto owner or any one else who uses them.

The annual loss to live stock in the United States from the ravages of predatory animals is placed at $130,000,000. In the face of these figures it is not surprising that a campaign of extermination is being organized by state and federal authorities.

An orchard plow has recently been devised with which it is possible to run close to the trunks of the trees, yet allows horses to work two or three feet farther from the tree. It is something that has been needed and is highly prized by those who have used it.

Secretary Coburn of the Kansas state board of agriculture refers in his book on alfalfa to fields of this legume in Mexico which have reached an age of 200 years, to fields in France that are 100 years old and to some in New York which have 60 years to their credit. In the face of such figures alfalfa well deserves its designation, "perennial."

The Montana experiment station has been making some investigations with a view to learning just how great is the effect of alkali in the soil upon different kinds of cement work. Cases have come to the notice of the station officials where cement foundations in moist alkali soil have almost entirely disintegrated. While the tests have not been completed, enough has been learned to make out a pretty bad case for cement work set in alkali soil.

There are today in the United States about 42,000 rural mail routes, served by some 40,000 carriers, who receive on the average a salary of $900 per annum. Many of the routes are not self sustaining and are largely responsible for the annual deficit which has existed for the past two or three years. Patrons on such unprofitable routes ought to realize more fully than they do that after being given a fair trial a good many of such routes will be discontinued. It is up to the patrons whether the service they have shall be kept up.

An old codger we read an account of the other day got his name into the newspapers by swallowing the claims of a smooth stranger without so much as winking and paying $10 for three little bottles of dope which it was claimed would cure any ailment of man or beast of however serious character. The item did not go on to say whether the stuff in the bottles later turned out to be plain water, vinegar or machine oil. The important thing is that the fool was parted from his money. This kind ought to take the next dollar or dollar and a half they get and subscribe for and also read their local paper, in which skin games and swindles of this and other brands are exposed every day.

A leaflet recently published by the Wisconsin experiment station places the annual loss of phosphoric acid in that state at 15,000,000 pounds, worth $750,000, and attributes the loss chiefly to the sale of animals and grain and the improper handling of barnyard manures, two-thirds of the loss being traceable to the last named cause. It is estimated that on an average 100 acre dairy farm there is an annual loss of thirty pounds of phosphoric acid, while on a 100 acre grain farm the loss is 615 pounds. In fifty years' cultivation it is estimated that one-third of the available soil phosphates are removed. Experiments with phosphate fertilizers showed that the application of 300 pounds per acre greatly increased the crop yields.

It would seem reasonable to assume that much might be done along the line of keeping boys and girls on the farm if more pains were taken to make the rural neighborhood more attractive. In one respect particularly do we believe a great improvement might be made—that is, in the building of more attractive and commodious schoolhouses and the keeping of the grounds in better shape. There is little reason to wonder that the young people of a community aren't particularly impressed with the educational and social life of the district when the school facilities are so meager and so poorly maintained. They argue, whether rightly or not, that this state of things points to a virtual disregard for education on the part of patrons and directors and that a development of the head isn't worth while when it comes to achieving success in agriculture. The net result of this attitude is that those who have got the brightest minds and most energy light out when occasion offers for some place and type of work where their capacities will be given opportunity to develop. We do not hold that their action is wise. There is great provocation for it. It is becoming more evident every day that there is no field of effort where brains energetically directed will bring uniformly larger or surer rewards than in agriculture. The great need of the day is to get the boys and girls to appreciate this fact. A more wholesome and wide awake attitude on the part of the old folks who are taxpayers would help to bring this about. It is time agricultural communities appreciated the opportunities at hand and put on a better front.

"I DON'T KNOW"

Some men seem to think it is poor policy to go into a store and not know exactly what they want. We expect our customers to rely upon us to furnish them with the most approved styles and the correct patterns and fabrics.

If you are in need of either a suit or an overcoat, or both, and do not know exactly what you want—come to us, and we will show you not only what is correct from the point of style, but will show you a correct style which is becoming to you. We do not expect every man to know exactly what he should wear, because that is not his business. It is our business to know exactly what every man should wear, and to have it here when he wants it. This is the store of advanced ideas.

The man who knows little or nothing about values is the man who should know the man he deals with. We stand behind every garment we sell.

We offer you the best of everything to wear--honest values--and money back at any time you find them otherwise.

BIG GAME IS PLENTIFUL

Large Number of Caribou in Country North of the Upper Red Lake.

State Executive Agent Avery Recently Visited This Section And Says So.

That there are many caribou, as well as moose in the country north and northeast of Red Lake is a fact which has been proven by actual observations during the past six months, says the Bemidji Pioneer.

While it is not generally known throughout the state that there are many caribou in the low lands north of Upper Red Lake, still the settlers adjacent to the lake have known for some time that large herds of caribou have roamed from Rainy river, south to Red Lake.

Recently Carlos Avery of St. Paul, executive agent of the Game and Fish commission, made a personal visit to both Upper and Lower Red lakes and traversed the Deer river at the north shore to the big bog north of the lake.

"We ran across thousands of tracks, and in many places there were paths beaten into the earth, showing that hundreds of the animals had been passing to and fro: and the marks were all fresh. I am satisfied that these animals will remain there for a long time, or at least until the country is drained, as it is a natural feeding ground for them.

"There is a large quantity of what is known as 'reindeer moss,' which is the one food they like."

Mr. Avery was accompanied by Albert Smith, an old trapper and hunter, and was given every opportunity to note game conditions in that section.

When he returned to Bemidji, Mr. Avery said concerning his observations at Red Lake:

"There are large numbers of caribou as well as moose inhabiting the woods and the big bog north of Red Lake, a fact which I am fully convinced from what I saw up there.

"It is to be hoped that the Indians and the north country settlers will co-operate with the Game and Fish commission in preserving these herds of caribou, as there are not many of these animals left in the United States."

While Mr. Avery was at Red Lake Indian agency, he was assured by W. H. Bishop, superintendent in charge of the agency, that the Indian was not a "game hog" in the sense that the State Game and Fish commission had been lead to believe.

Mr. Bishop stated that the Indians rarely killed many deer or moose unless they used the same for food; that they did not make a practice of selling venison or moose meat, and it would be no trouble to induce the Indians to be one of the best observers of the game laws in the state of Minnesota.

Who Wants to Help?

J. M. Shoemaker, St. Paul, secretary of the United States civil service board, has received instructions from E. D. Durand, director of the census at Washington, an examination for the appointment of clerks for the next federal census.

Candidates may obtain blank application forms by writing to Mr. Shoemaker at St. Paul, or any of the other secretaries of the civil service board, or to the civil service commission at Washington. UNION LABOR IS DENOUNCED

SWEDEN.

Says the Stockholm's Aftonblad under the caption: "A Distressing Picture:" "He cannot provide bread for the little ones. Yes, he can, but he is not allowed to; he does not dare. For if he puts his arm to the work which awaits him, if he appeases the hunger of a starving mother and her little ones, then he is branded as a coward. But when he lets them die from hunger, he has done his duty to the Landsorganisationen. Yes, that is comfort, but comfort for a tiger's heart. And tiger hearts these people must have indeed, who force men, women and children to famine. And why? In order to save their own skin. For it is just this that it concerns. The fight is lost, innocent children must die of hunger the country around; the victory will not at all events belong to the tiger-hearted demagogues in the People's House (Folkets Hus). No, vengeance will come sooner than these fellows expect. The day of reckoning is fast approaching. Soon there will be thousands just like the poor fellow who had to flee his home on account of the cry for bread from the lips of his loved one. It will be an army of terror that these strike leaders will have to meet." The Norwegian Aftenposten adds: "That there is lack of money can best be noticed through the fact that there are hundreds of young women out of employment in all cities, especially in Stockholm, where they are walking up and down the streets. It is predicted by many that scores of girls will in this way become ruined for life. It seems to us, and that is only expressing the sentiment of the laboring men themselves, who say that 'it is not a fight against capital, but a fight against women and children.'"

The Danish "Dannebrog" says in regard to the strike in Sweden: "This strike has been brewing a long time and it is only a matter of circumstances that it found its initial seat in Sweden, for it was bound to break loose in one of the Scandinavian countries anyway. It is fortunate for Denmark that she escaped at this time. Of the three countries, Sweden can best afford to have this strike, even though it is costing her in the neighborhood of three or four million crowns a day. But the Swedes are cool-headed and not so easily aroused as the Danes and Norwegians. This, too, will probably prove her salvation in the present unfortunate controversy. It is evident that through the diplomacy of the Swedish government a civil war has been avoided."

A few miles from Trosa the aged midwife of the parish was awakened in the middle of the night by a fisherman knocking at her window. He had rowed his wife about five miles across the bay to get her. But on the way a contrary wind stiffened into a violent storm, the trip took more than five hours, and in the middle of the bay his wife gave birth to a boy in the boat, which was half full of water by this time. The midwife built a fire in a hurry and gave the people all the assistance that she could. The next day the fisherman's family returned to their lonely island, the youngest member snugly packed up in warm shawls.

The new chemistry building, now a part of the Nobel institution, was formally dedicated last month. The dedication was at the same time a tribute to the director of this great institution, viz., Professor Svante Arrhenius the eminent Swedish scientist. Professor William Ostbrand, of the Leipzig university, delivered the dedicatory address.

Just as the Smiths are in the majority in most cities in America so the Andersons are in the majority in Stockholm. There are at present not less than 12,503 Andersons, besides women and children in Stockholm. After them come the Johnsons, Carlsons and Petersons.

Orville Wright, the American aerial navigator, has promised to come to Stockholm and give a series of exhibitions provided that the government will purchase one of his aeroplanes.

Leo Tolstoi has sent word to Stockholm that it is his intention to pay a visit to the Swedish capital this fall. That Tolstoi will receive a hearty reception in Sweden is self evident.

NORWAY.

A young woman servant was arrested in Christiania the other day when her master and mistress returned from their summer villa. During their absence the young woman had given a number of dinner parties to her friends, including a number of her gentlemen friends, had emptied all the wine in the cellar and had sold a number of the best furniture pieces in the house. She afterward stated to the police that she just wanted to feel how it felt when people "live high."

The outlook for the hunting season is the very best in Norway this year. There is an abundance of "ryper" up in Guldalen, and almost everywhere for that matter. Reports from the northern sections state that there is an abundance of elk and moose. Many English and German sportsmen have already arrived and are eagerly seeking hunting privileges. There have been more applications for hunting licenses from Germany this year than ever before.

During the year of 1908 Norway exported goods to Japan valued at 590,000 yens. Besides this there were seven freight steamers valued at 225,000 yens that were sold to Japan. Norway's trade with Japan is steadily increasing, especially lumber, paper and condensed milk. From Japan Norway only imported last year goods to the value of about 5,000 crowns.

Several thousand crates of berries have during the past three weeks been exported to England. There is a great demand in England for wild Norwegian berries and the berry industry has grown to be one of the greatest industries in the country at present.

Walter Wellman, the unsuccessful north pole seeker, was in Christiania the other day. Mr. Wellman stated to the newspaper correspondents that he had left two men in charge of the balloon house in Spitzbergen.

The tilled soil of Norway has an area of about 2,100,000 acres, and it is claimed that fully half as much tillable land has never been broken. Efforts will be made to give poor people a chance to use this land.

R. Joys, a prominent merchant in Bergen, has been appointed Norwegian consul in Genoa, Italy. Ottesen has been appointed consul in London. The latter has been in the consular service for a number of years.

Rev. Nordkvelle-Mathisen, a Norwegian-American clergyman, is at present traveling in Norway and will on his return write a book relating his observations during his extensive journey.

Norwegian railways are running extra trains to the berry picking regions at this time of the year. There is an unusually large amount of berries in the country districts all over this year.

In Christiania there is an eager demand at present for lumber owing to the big strike in Sweden, which has of course been a great setback for the lumber business in that country."

Rev. Jonas Dahl, the Norwegian author, celebrated his sixtieth birthday a few days ago. He is enjoying fine health and is just now at the very zenith of his career.

The first hunting train bound for the north left Christiania on the night of Aug. 22. It was loaded down with enthusiastic sportsmen from Christiania, London and Berlin.

Christiania will have an international exposition in 1914, and the storthing will undoubtedly make an appropriation of 10,000 crowns for this purpose at its next session.

The great bridge on the Elverum-Flisen railway, over the Glommen river, is now about completed. It is the largest railroad bridge in the country.

Severe storms have been raging in Ronsdalen lately, causing much destruction to property. Much grain was destroyed.

"Poetry and Prose," is the name of a play which is now drawing large houses at the National theater.

The firm of Beer & Co., in Christiania, have received a two million crown order for granite.

DENMARK.

The reception which was accorded Dr. Cook, the discoverer of the north pole, upon his arrival in the Danish capital last week, was one of the most enthusiastic events that has ever been recorded in the history of the city. People fairly went crazy with joy and to say that Dr. Cook could survive it all is putting it mildly. One of the most interesting features of Dr. Cook's present position in Copenhagen is that he is about the only intelligent man in the world now who does not realize how conspicuous and talked about Dr. Cook is today. Minister Egan (the American minister) has shielded him as carefully as possible. While he has during the last few days been theoretically living as the government's guest at a hotel he is practically living at the legation, so that he may be kept away from the pressure of the crowds which are still surrounding the hotel. Dr. Cook will soon visit Brussels and will also deliver a lecture at Paris. He will then return to Copenhagen and sail from there to New York.

The farmers that supply Copenhagen with milk get between 16 and 18 cents a gallon, and the sale prices of the milk are 4½ cents a quart for whole milk, 2½ cents for half-skimmed milk and 6 cents for Pasteurized milk for infants. Denmark exports to Great Britain over $48,600,000 worth of butter yearly. Trifolium dairy, the largest co-operative dairy in Denmark, uses about 77,000 pounds of milk daily, and the output of butter varies from twelve to fourteen tons a week. The number of cows in Denmark in 1907 was [illegible], of which somewhat less than 500,000 were on farms delivering milk to the co-operative dairies.

A demonstration in which 500 business men participated in occurred a week ago last Sunday in Copenhagen. The demonstration was designated against the chief of the war department, Mr. J. C. Christensen, whose removal by the king is now demanded. The people it appears are not satisfied with the part that he played in the Alberti scandal and they are now bound to have him removed.

The grand total attendance for the week at the Minnesota state fair was 328,678, as against 326,743, the best previous record, made in 1908.

FINANCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL

No crash in the market followed the death of E. H. Harriman. The big financiers took charge of the situation. Long conferences followed the financier's death and when the gong sounded for the opening of the market their brokers were on hand with the sinews of war. Vaults were opened and millions and millions of dollars thrown into the market to hold up the price of stocks.

Unusual activity in building operations all over the United States during the month of August is indicated in a report published in the Construction News. According to this authority an increase of 34 per cent is recorded compared with the corresponding time last year.

John F. Stevens, the engineer formerly in charge of the Panama canal construction, has been elected president of the Oregon Trunk line, the Hill railroad to be built from the Columbia river to Central Oregon and to San Francisco.

Dispatches to Dun's Trade Review indicate a constant broadening demand in all branches of trade and industry and complaints of dull condition are steadily diminishing.

Railways of the United States paid approximately $56,700,000 for "loss and damage" and "injuries to persons" during the year ending June 30, 1908.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

As the result of a conference at the department of justice between the officials of the department, District Attorney Jordan of Pittsburg and Special Agent Hoagland it was announced that there have been no clear cases of peonage nor any violations of the federal labor laws at the Pressed Steel Car company's plant at McKees Rocks, Pa., to warrant federal prosecution.

President Taft has appointed the members of the new tariff commission as follows: Professor Henry C. Emery of Yale university, chairman; James B. Reynolds of Massachusetts, now assistant secretary of the treasury, and Alvin H. Sanders of Chicago, at present editor and proprietor of the Breeders' Gazette.

HE WAS INDIGNANT.

A Business Transaction That Made the Old Man Bristle.

A general merchant in a good sized country town was waiting upon an aged farmer in his store when the old man pointed to a quartet of ice cream freezers.

"What are they?" he asked.

"Ice cream freezers," explained the merchant. "Want one? They're only $2."

"Ice cream freezers," mused the old man. "They freeze milk, don't they? Will they freeze anything?"

"Sure," said the storekeeper.

"Freeze water?" asked the old man, interested.

"Freeze anything liquid," said the storekeeper, laughing.

The old man paid for one of the freezers and drove away.

Three days later he returned. His beard was bristling with indignation, and he eyed the merchant fiercely.

"You're a robber!" he said.

The merchant gasped.

"You told me that thing would freeze water," went on the old man indignantly, "and I took it home to freeze some water and make me some ice, and my nephew said you had to put ice in it before it would freeze anything. Gimme my $2."

The merchant weakly handed him $2, and the old man strode out and hasn't bought anything else at the store since.

Wanted Sympathy.

To the leader of a band in a small city, jocularly spoken of in its locality as "the worst in seven different states," there once came a man with a request that the band play at a cousin's funeral.

"Is it a military funeral?" asked the leader.

"Not at all," was the reply. "My cousin was no military man. In fact he was never even interested in matters military. Nevertheless it was his express wish that your band should play at his funeral."

The leader was surprised and flattered. "Is that so?" he asked.

"Yes," responded the other. "He said he wanted everybody in town to be sorry that he died."

Stories of Douglas Jerrold.

On the first night of the representation of one of Jerrold's pieces a successful adapter from the French rallied him on his nervousness. "I," said the adapter, "never feel nervous on the first night of my pieces." "Ah, my boy," Jerrold replied, "you are always certain of success. Your pieces have all been tried before."

He was seriously disappointed with a certain book written by one of his friends. This friend heard that Jerrold had expressed his disappointment and questioned him. "I hear you said —— was the worst book I ever wrote." "No, I didn't," came the answer; "I said it was the worst book anybody ever wrote."

Of a mistaken philanthropist Jerrold said he was "so benevolent, so merciful a man he would have held an umbrella over a duck in a shower of rain."

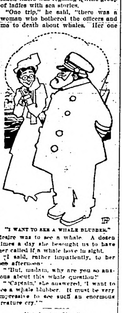
Resolution.

No man is fit to win who has not sat down alone to think and who has not come forth with purpose in his eye, with white cheeks, set lips and clinched palms, able to say, "I am resolved."—Bulwer.

The Weeping Whale.

A captain of one of the popular Atlantic liners was regaling a little group of ladies with sea stories.

"One trip," he said, "there was a woman who bothered the officers and me to death about whales. Her one desire was to see a whale. A dozen times a day she besought us to have her called if a whale hove in sight.



"I WANT TO SEE A WHALE BLUBBER."

"I said, rather impatiently, to her one afternoon:

"'But, madam, why are you so anxious about this whale question?'

"'Captain,' she answered, 'I want to see a whale blubber. It must be very impressive to see such an enormous creature cry.'"

Not Appius Claudius.

At a pageant given in an English town commemorating Britain at the time of the Roman occupation a young woman spoke to a tall, burly and shivering man whose Roman toga hardly protected him from a raw, penetrating east wind.

"Are you Appius Claudius?" she asked eagerly.

"Me, miss?" he replied dismally. "Me 'appy as Claudius? Oh, no, miss. I'm un'appy as 'ell!"

Wilhelm Michelet,

U. S. COMMISSIONER FOR THE DISTRICT OF MINNESOTA.

$8.50 HEDGETHORN PUNCTURE-PROOF SELF-HEALING TIRES A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

Graf von Blumen-Schloss.

[Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.]

Did I ever tell you how I was honored by an invitation from the emperor and empress and was thereby made a part of Berlin society? No? Well, I'll tell you now.

While in Vienna I was invited to a state ball at the palace. My partner for the cotillon was a young German, Graf von Blumen-Schloss. He was handsome, refined and of a noble bearing. His social position was of the very best not only from his personality, but because he represented one of the oldest families of Prussia. I was an untitled American whose father had been a pork packer and whose husband was a manufacturer of shoes. Nevertheless Graf von Blumen-Schloss treated me with as much attention as if I had been a duchess. When with me no attraction elsewhere could induce him to desist from listening to what I had to say to him or to suspend for a moment his attentive gaze upon my face. True, I was then young and had some good looks, but I knew it was not I who held his attention, but a courtesy inherited from a long line of nobles. Besides, when he was with other women he was apparently quite as much wrapped in them.

He wore an army uniform and on his breast several decorations. I did not know what they represented, but I understood that one of them had been bestowed upon him for bravery in battle. I think I should have fallen in love with him if I had been single and given an opportunity. But I did not see him again while in Vienna, and shortly afterward we left for America.

Two or three years after this, while in Philadelphia, stopping at one of the finest hotels in that city, on entering an elevator one evening to go up to my rooms I was ushered in by a man wearing the hotel uniform. There was something about him that was familiar to me. The uniform of a servant seemed to resolve itself into that of an army officer. I heard the strains of dance music and was whirling in the german cotillon. I raised my glance to the servant's face. Could I believe it? He was the Graf von Blumen-Schloss.

His flaming face told me that it was indeed he and that he knew me, but he made no other sign of recognition. Nor did I. The elevator door toward which he waved his hand stood open. I entered and was lifted to the fifth story. I could not bear to run the risk of continually meeting my previous cotillon partner reduced to a servant, and the next morning I left the hotel.

Three years after that my husband gave up business, and we again went abroad. Being wealthy and abundantly able to keep up a position in any foreign city, we desired especially to spend a winter in Berlin, but on arriving there my husband, who is an impatient, independent, thorough American, gave offense to our minister, and there was a deadlock upon our entering society. We were about to give the matter up and go elsewhere when something occurred to change our resolution. An invitation came one morning to attend a ball to be given by Graf and Gräfin von Blumen-Schloss.

It was evident, first, that the graf had resumed his original position in the world and, second, that he knew I was in Berlin. I assumed that he must have seen me, though I had not seen him. We made inquiries and learned that he had married a wealthy and refined American lady and had recently been appointed an aid-de-camp to the emperor.

We went to the ball and were very graciously received by the gräfin, who gave as a reason for inviting us that we were her fellow countrymen. My meeting with her husband in his own home was naturally constrained. He made no mention of having met me in America, but asked me if he had not met me in Europe. I told him that he had been my partner at a state ball in Vienna. Then he appeared to remember. He may have been sincere in not giving evidence of recollecting just where he had first seen me.

Later an invitation came to dine with the emperor and empress, which, of course, was inspired by his aid-de-camp, the Von Blumen-Schlosses being of the dinner party. After this we were welcome everywhere.

Never did either Von Blumen-Schloss or his wife make the slightest allusion to his having been in America. I as well ignored having met him in hotel livery. What inspired his kindness to me I do not know. It may have been intended to keep me silent on his past or it might have been a token of gratitude for my failure to recognize him while in a menial position. Indeed, he might have been influenced by both of these causes.

In time I came upon his story. Soon after I had danced with him in Vienna financial reverses deprived him of his fortune. Like many an European aristocrat in the same circumstances, he went to America and became a servant. From the hotel he went to serve a gentleman as chauffeur and while acting in that capacity won the heart of his daughter. Learning who he was, she had married him with her father's consent and set him up again as a Von Blumen-Schloss. After the marriage the husband came into another fortune. All that was known in Europe about his having been in America was that he had married there.

Query—Did he go there to get a rich wife in a clandestine manner? Owing to lack of means he could not have gone for matrimonial purposes in any other way.

THERESA C. HOLT.

In a Signal Tower.

[Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.]

Ten years ago I was employed in a signal block tower on a railroad. These towers are used to operate the levers controlling the semaphores which direct the engineers of passing trains. They are raised high above the tracks, and those located out in a sparsely settled country are lonely places. At that time some of the towers were worked by women, and I was one of these women. Indeed, I was a girl of twenty.

My duties were not onerous. I had time for sewing or fancy work or music, the latter of which I was very fond. I had the night watch, and I and my colleague of the day watch kept our quarters in spick and span condition, with plants in the windows—indeed, everything to make the place homelike.

Our tower was some distance from any house, but I was never lonely or afraid, for at the approach of danger I could lock myself in, and with arms and ammunition the place had great advantages for defense. But I never thought of defending myself, for I could see no reason why I should be attacked.

One evening shortly before dark I was singing, accompanying myself on my guitar. I did not hear a footstep ascending, and suddenly, looking back of me, I saw a man standing in the room. He was quite respectably dressed, but there was something in his face I did not like. Bowing to me deferentially, he said:

"Pardon me for this intrusion. I heard the music and was surprised that it should come from a railroad watch tower. I am very fond of music, and your voice is delicious. Would you mind my sitting here," taking a seat, "while you sing?"

I was not deceived by his smooth tongue, but what could I do? I must meet deception by deception. I appeared flattered by his approval and continued my singing, though with a trembling voice. The song was "In the Gloaming." It was very appropriate, but I was not thinking of the gloaming. I was thinking how I might outwit some nefarious scheme I was sure the man had in view. It occurred to me to play Miss Simplicity. As soon as I had finished the song I began to talk about music, how I doted on it and how I felt an immediate liking for any one who loved it. But the man soon turned the subject to my work, asking me all manner of questions with regard to it—the levers, the semaphores and how I threw the trains on to the right track.

I judged from this that he was there rather with some object in view connected with the railroad than myself personally. I made it appear that I was pleased to tell him what he wished to know and talked incessantly in order that I might keep him on that subject, hoping to stave off any intentions he might have with regard to me.

"Now, suppose," he said, "a train should come along. What's the next train?"

"The Bentford express."

"Well, you wish to put it on the right track. What do you do?"

"I pull this lever."

"And if you wished it to take the right hand track of the Y, a short distance up the track, what would you do?"

"I would pull this lever," putting my hand on another.

"H'm. It's very interesting. What a simple system when you once know it."

"Very."

He looked at the clock, rather nervously, I thought, and listened. There was a distant rattle of a train.

"Is that the express?" he asked.

"I have no doubt it is."

The expression on his face began to change. The interested look he had thus far worn gave place to one of resolution. He walked back and forth, and I saw him put his hand to his hip. I was satisfied that this was to make sure his weapon was in its proper place, though I did not see why he needed it for a girl like me. Perhaps he was going to shoot the engineer.

When the train came within a short distance of the tower I stepped to the levers and put my hand on one of them. My visitor stooped, evidently so as not to be seen from below.

"Not that," he said from behind; "not that one; the other. Throw the train on the right hand track of the Y."

I heard a click and, looking back, saw the muzzle of a revolver pointing at me. I pulled the lever he ordered me to pull, and the train went thundering by.

Taking a pair of nippers from his pocket, the man cut the wires connecting my telegraph instrument with the main line and, taking a piece of the wire with him, ran out and hurried down the stairs. I locked the door and, staggering to the window, looked out. He was running after the train. He turned and said:

"Goodby, sweetheart. You sing like a nightingale."

As soon as he was out of sight I fell on the floor in a dead faint. Then, coming to myself, I got up and, weak as I was, danced. When he had asked me how to throw the train on to the wrong course I had told him the way to put it on the right one.

I was called on the wire from another station and, not replying, a messenger was soon sent to learn the cause of my silence. Since there was no damage done, the missing wire was the only confirmation of my story. It was enough, and I received a liberal reward. My visitor's intention was never explained. It was doubtless intended to wreck the train and rob it.

HELOISE AMES.

THE MIRROR.

Rena Yeoti was to be married to Johan Tephold. Rena was pretty as a picture and was the envy of all the girls of the village, and all the young men envied Johan his possession of her.

But on the day of the wedding as the young pair were leading a procession to the little church an officer of the law stepped up to Rena and laid a rough hand on her shoulder. She, the groom, the peasant attendants, stood aghast. But the officer, never faltering in his duty, led her away and locked her up in a cell.

Instead of becoming a bride Rena became a convict. Her lover, convinced of her guilt, turned away from her when the judge pronounced the sentence, and she went to her prison home without a word of either sympathy or reproach from him. Only her poor mother befriended her, wept over her, encouraged her.

Rena in prison fell into a stupor. She hardly knew when it was day and when it was night. She hardly thought. After awhile she began to realize her position. She raved and tried to dash out her brains against the wall of her cell. But a sudden thought came over her—a thought with which was allied a heaven born hope. Her beauty—would she destroy it? What use would it ever be to her? Then a possible future reunion with the lover who had come so near being her husband occurred to her. In ten years she would be free.

She knew that she was innocent, and she knew the girl who had committed the crime for which she was accused. But what could she, a prisoner, do to prove the real criminal? For ten years her hands would be tied. Then perhaps she could begin to weave the thread of evidence. And if she succeeded? Suppose Johan were still without a sweetheart? Ah, then she would need her beauty. She would not mar it by striking her head against the wall.

From that moment her looks were all to her. But there was no way of watching it to note if it waned. One article of toilet was denied the women prisoners, a mirror. Often they would plead with their jailers for the coveted glass, but it was never granted them. As the years passed Rena more and more longed to see a reflection of her features. She asked her fellow prisoners if her comeliness were growing less. The most kindly of them told her that she was every day more beautiful. A few inhuman beings told her she was growing homely. Which should she believe? Oh, for a bit of mirror, even the tiniest, to get one glimpse of her face!

Rena was seventeen when she was sentenced and had served nine years without ever having had that glimpse. Her hair had been cut when she entered the prison and was not long enough for her to see it. One day a hair came out in her hand. It was white. She pulled out another. It, too, was white. They were all white. A prison official came along the corridor. She stretched forth her hands and with streaming eyes implored him to bring her for just one moment a mirror. He shook his head and passed on.

The tenth year had half passed and Rena was looking forward to freedom and a possible vindication when one day an official came to her and told her that the girl who had committed the crime was dead and before her death she had confessed all to a priest. As soon as the formal legal papers could be executed the innocent one would be permitted to leave the prison.

Then came word from Johan that he had loved Rena always, though he had believed her guilty. He had tried to conquer his love, but it had grown stronger each year. He would not be free to come to her till the next day, but he would come then.

Rena dreaded the meeting. When her lover would see that her beauty had gone, that her hair was white, he would surely turn away from her. She did not ask for a mirror now; she dreaded to see what her face was like. She would wait and note by her lover's expression when he saw her whether it was pleasing or disagreeable.

The hours till he came were hours of torture. She had but little hope that any of her beauty remained and believed that her face was as wrinkled as her hair was white. But wait. She would see what it was in Johan's eyes. She sent word to him to bring a mirror when he came.

Johan was there at last. A jailer came to Rena's cell and said she was wanted. He led her to a reception room, where she stood alone. A door opened, and a man with grizzly hair and a habitual melancholy stamped on his face entered. He stopped, looked at Rena eagerly as though confused between two pictures—pictures of the then and the now. Presently a pleasurable expression began to steal over his features as a pleasing dawn rises in the sky, and, starting forward, he took her in his arms.

"My—my"—she gasped—"is it all gone, Johan? For the love of God tell me, and tell me truly!"

"It is different, sweetheart. There is a splendid contrast of young face and snowy hair. Here, look for yourself."

He held up a mirror. Rena turned away her face.

"Don't be afraid. You will be pleased."

Rena turned and looked. For a moment she seemed stunned by her white hair, but gradually her face lighted with an expression of relief and satisfaction.

GRACE ETHEL WEEKS.

When the Deacon Wilted.

[Copyright, 1908, by T. C. McClure.]

After Deacon Grafton received his legacy he went back on his consent to his son's marriage with Nellie, daughter of the Widow Jordon.

"The thing must stop at once, Elias," he said. "She is not the girl for you to marry even if you were ready for the serious step of matrimony. I desire you to go over to the Widow Jordon's this evening and emphatically announce that there can be nothing further between you and her daughter."

The son respectfully but stubbornly refused to do any such thing. There was more talk, but it left both men firm, and the result was that Elias left the paternal roof and took up his residence with an uncle. Of course he called at the Widow Jordon's with the news. Miss Nellie felt hurt and humiliated and shed tears, but her mother had no tears to shed. She tossed her head like a war horse, and there was an edge to her voice as she said to the young man:

"Elias, a Jordon is as good as a Grafton any day in the year and maybe a little better. If you want it all off with Nellie, just say the word and don't beat about the bush. She isn't dying to marry you or any one else."

"But I am dying to marry her, and we will call on the minister tonight if you say so," was the answer.

"No; we'll wait awhile. I've seen men like your father before, and I have seen them come down off their high horse."

Two nights later Elias "sat up" with Nellie until near midnight. Nellie's mother "sat up" in the darkness of her room and made notes. One of the notes was to the effect that a human figure closely resembling Deacon Grafton's was sneaking about the yard and trying to peer into a side window. She was a woman who didn't have to be hit with a potato masher to take a hint. Next day she drove over to Elyria, and after buying a bear trap at a hardwood store she took it to a blacksmith and had him blunt the sharp teeth with a hammer. She also learned from him how to set it. When she reached home the trap was placed in the barn.

Word was sent to Elias not to come to the house for three nights, but a light was left burning in the sitting room each night until midnight. From her aerie in the second story the widow waited and watched, and that same human form appeared for half an hour each night. Then she was ready for it. When Elias came on the wings of love the trap was set and secretly placed beside the rosebush. It wasn't a rose without a thorn. On the contrary, it had many thorns, and in crowding into it to get at the side window some one had left many bits of gray cloth. There was also a larger and sharper thorn waiting to mature.

The hour was 11 o'clock, and Miss Nellie had just answered that she guessed Thanksgiving day was as good day as any other to get married on when a long drawn yell was heard under the window outside. At the same moment the mother came downstairs with a lighted lantern in hand and said:

"Keep your seats, children. It's only a cat, and I'm going outside to talk with him. He's yelling as if he was in pain, but he won't be hurt much."

Deacon Grafton had stepped into the widow's bear trap as he sought to get his ear to a window. Had the teeth not been blunted they would have gone to the bone of his leg. As it was, he was held fast, and the pinching was anything but pleasant. The widow found him lying on the grass and trying to loosen the trap, and she placed the lantern where the light fell full on his face and sat down beside him and said:

"Deacon Grafton, since when did you turn burglar?"

"What does this mean, woman?" he demanded in reply as he held up a leg.

"It means, sir, that that bear trap was set to protect that window and that you have been caught. We'll see what the law will have to say about it."

"But you know I'm no burglar. You know I was simply looking around to see if Elias was here."

"I know nothing of the kind. You can tell that story in court and see how many will believe it. It is my duty, deacon"—

"Look here, widder," interrupted the deacon, "no one will believe that I meant to get into your house, but I don't care to be made fun of. If you'll help me off with this pesky trap and say nothing I'll send you a barrel of flour."

"What! First try to break into my house and then try to bribe me? It won't do, deacon. Elias is in the house, as you know. Do you want to speak to him?"

"With this bear trap on my leg? Never!"

"Do you want to send him in word to come back home and that you've changed your mind about the Jordon family?"

"No, I don't!" was the sulky reply.

"Then I'll have to run over to Constable Brown's house and tell him I have a robber for him. Some folks will be surprised tomorrow morning."

Some folks were. It was not by seeing Deacon Grafton in court under a serious charge, but by seeing Elias back home and hearing his father explain:

"Elias is old enough to know his own mind, and if he wants to marry the Widder Jordon's girl I shan't say anything about it."

M. QUAD.

How the Chicken Was Hatched.

[Original.]

At one time during the civil war while we were campaigning in Virginia our brigade became separated from the main army, and we were in such a position between the Confederate forces that if they could have acted in concert they might have captured us. But neither one knew of the other's proximity—that is, we inferred they did not, for they made no move against us. But even if both knew of the other's presence they could not communicate with a view to making a concerted attack without sending a messenger through our lines.

One morning when I was in charge of a picket post a young girl came into the lines with a basket of butter on one arm and a basket of eggs on the other. She said she had come from a small plantation just without our lines and would like to sell us her produce. Since our rations had for some time been largely composed of salt pork and hard tack my mouth watered for her wares. I tasted the butter and found it delicious. As to the eggs, they looked tempting enough; but, yielding to an old habit when buying eggs, I held a number of them up to the light to make sure they were fresh. All transmitted a portion of the light except one, which transmitted none. It seemed to be of exactly the same weight, size and shape as the others; but, looking through it, I could not see a ray of light.

"There's a chicken in that one," I remarked to the girl.

"If there is, I don't see how it got in. I'll take it out. I think the rest are all right."

She took the egg out of my hands. I selected half a dozen of the others and a pound package of the butter—all I could take care of while on duty—intending them for our company mess. The girl went on in toward the camp, and I saw no more of her. We did not refuse citizens admittance within our lines. We reserved our refusal till they asked to go out. And we especially objected to their going out on the opposite side from which they came in. It was passed down among us from headquarters that we were between two fires and no person whatever should be permitted to pass through our lines.

We enjoyed our fresh eggs and butter immensely and wished all the dairymen in Virginia would come in with their produce. Several officers asked where we got them, and when I told them that a country girl had come into camp to sell them one of them went off to find her. This was in the evening after supper. The inclosure within the picket circle was not very large, and he might easily have come upon her if she had been in camp. Either she was not in camp or she was hiding. Some one suggested that she had gone through the lines. As our safety depended upon no one in the Confederate interest getting through the lines, this excited attention. I set out with several others on a still hunt, but we all came back with the report that no girl of the description given was in camp. I felt it my duty to report the matter to the general, only mentioning the girl and my having bought some of her butter and eggs. The general swore a good deal when he heard it, since he had given strict orders as to the departure of any citizen from our lines. Every officer of the picket was questioned, and all avowed that no one had gone out during the day. The only way I could account for the girl's disappearance was that she had stolen out between two pickets after dusk.

The next morning a flag of truce was seen coming, and when it arrived the officer in command presented a demand for the surrender of the brigade, stating that they had us surrounded. The general sent them back with a proposition which delayed matters till after nightfall. Then he ordered the four regiments composing the brigade to cut their way out in four different directions, each fighting on its own hook.

That was a terrible night. I shall never forget it. Our regiment took to a wood, where we came upon several regiments, and in the fight one half were captured, the other half getting through and away. I was with those who were captured. Two of the other regiments were taken entire, and a third had the good fortune to strike an unguarded opening and marched through it.

The next morning I with the other prisoners was undergoing an inspection by the general who had captured us when one of the officers with him, a beardless boy, rode up to me and put out his hand.

"How are you, captain?" he said. "I owe my life to your stupidity. If you'd been smart I would have swung within a few hours after you passed me into your lines."

"Who are you?" I asked, puzzled by a resemblance I could not explain.

"I'm the country girl who sold you butter and eggs. My neck being in a halter, I got nervous and left the wrong egg in the basket. That egg you couldn't see through was filled with sand and a message from my general to General B. here, arranging for a concerted plan to capture you Yanks. Of course you couldn't see through it. There was a chicken in it, as you said, and the chicken has been hatched."

When I was exchanged the war was over. I was glad of it, for I had no heart to continue in the service after the fearful results of my stupidity. From that day to this I have never been able to bear the sight of an egg.

SPENCER TROWBRIDGE.

An Episode of Bridge Whist.

[Original.]

Miss Bend threw down her cards and arose from the table. Her face was flushed, and her eyes flashed with indignation.

"What is it?" asked her partner, Mr. Cunningham.

"Cheating!"

The hostess approached, evidently anxious. "Anything amiss at this table?" she asked.

"Mrs. Lyman and Mr. Porter have been winning our money by using private signals informing each other of their hands!" said Miss Bend loudly.

"Oh, dear, no! None of my guests would do a thing like that. How could you have made such a mistake?"

The accused persons remained in their seats, with an expression on their faces indicating astonishment and injured innocence. Miss Bend and Mr. Cunningham went into another room. They were soon joined by the hostess.

"My dear," she said to Miss Bend, "you have been very indiscreet. We all know Mrs. Lyman's peculiarities. Nobody can prove that she cheats because she does it in a way that defies proof. She has a new signal every time she plays and never uses any signal except when playing with Mr. Porter. Then she makes enough money to regain all losses and have a snug sum over. What was the code tonight?"

"When she was strong in hearts," replied Miss Bend, "she would put her hand on her heart; when strong in diamonds, on her brooch."

The next day the scandal was known to every person of fashion. Mrs. Lyman disappeared for a season, and, as for her partner, it was intimated to him by the governors of his club that if he did not resign his membership he must face an investigation. He resigned and changed his residence.

Several months passed and Miss Bend had nearly forgotten the disagreeable incident when one day while making purchases in a dry goods store a floorwalker stepped up to her and asked her to please step into a private office. She was surprised, but, unsuspicious of anything unpleasant, followed the floorwalker. Arrived at the office, she found there Mr. Dargen of the firm of Dargen & Co. and a woman, who proceeded to examine the contents of her shopping bag. What was Miss Bend's astonishment to see the woman take out a roll of valuable lace.

"Some one put that there," said the girl indignantly. "I remember laying my bag down on the lace counter, forgetting it when I went away and going back for it."

"Bring the clerk," said Mr. Dargen, "who sells these especial goods."

The saleswoman came. When she saw the lace that had been taken from her counter she looked an astonishment that was evidently not assumed.

"How do you account for this lace getting in this lady's bag?" asked Mr. Dargen.

"I haven't an idea," said the clerk.

"Who discovered the theft?"

"A lady," said the floorwalker, "told me that she had seen this lady shoplifting."

"Why did you not hold on to your witness?"

"Fearing to lose the thief, I kept my eyes on her, and the accuser disappeared. I couldn't keep both in sight."

Miss Bend telephoned for her father, who came at once and proved the family respectability. Miss Bend had never before been accused of shoplifting, so the firm of Dargen & Co. consented that she be given time to offer an explanation before being prosecuted.

Despite an effort made to keep the matter quiet it became known. Miss Bend was one of those plain spoken, indifferent girls who, detesting society's methods of varnishing evil, are liable to make enemies outside the circle of their intimate friends. Her enemies said that she had got her just deserts, intimating that Mrs. Lyman, whom she had accused of cheating at cards, had been vindicated. Some of them went so far as to resume their invitations to the latter.

Mrs. Havens, the lady at whose house Mrs. Lyman had been accused, was abroad when Miss Bend was found to have lace in her bag. It was the first bit of news she heard on her return. Hastening to Miss Bend, she said to her:

"I should have warned you, Bertha, that Mrs. Lyman is a dangerous woman to offend and that she would get even with you for making public her cheating. She did this work. Let your lawyer confront her with the saleswoman at the lace counter and the floorwalker. Unless she acted through a confederate they will identify her."

The next day a gentlemanly looking man called on Mrs. Lyman and asked her to accompany him to the office of Dargen & Co. She turned pale and asked by what authority he acted. He replied that she had a choice between complying and being arrested. She thought the matter over and concluded to comply. In Dargen's office she found the floorwalker who had been informed of the theft and the saleswoman at the lace counter. The former identified her as his informant and the latter as a lady who stepped up to the counter at the time Miss Bend's bag was lying there and while its owner was absent.

A compromise was made by which Mrs. Lyman signed a confession to be shown to a few of Miss Bend's friends, and Mrs. Lyman went abroad.

And so it was that this respectable circle settled their differences without referring them to the criminal courts, and this little story never made even a ripple outside the social world.

Contempt of Court.

Mark Twain was waiting for a street car in Boston once when a young girl approached him, smiling. She was a lovely girl, fresh, blooming, ingenuous, bubbling with enthusiasm and evidently on her way home from school.

"Pardon me," she said. "I know it's very unconventional, but I may never have another chance. Would you mind giving me your autograph?"

"Glad to do it, my dear child," said Mr. Clemens, drawing out his fountain pen.

"Oh, it's so good of you!" gurgled the girl. "You know, I've never seen you but once, Chief Justice Fuller, and that was at a distance, but I've seen your portrait so often that I recognized you the moment I saw you here."

"Um—m—m—mm!" said Mr. Clemens noncommittally. Then he took from her eager hands her nice little autograph album and wrote in bold script these words:

It is delicious to be full,
But it is heavenly to be Fuller.
I am cordially yours,
MELVILLE W. FULLER.

Love.

Love came at dawn, when all the world was fair,
When crimson glories bloomed and songs were rife;
Love came at dawn, when hope's wings fanned the air
And murmured, "I am life."

Love came at even, when the day was done,
When heart and brain were tired and slumber pressed;
Love came at eve, shut out the sinking sun
And whispered, "I am rest."
—W. Wilfred Campbell.

Knew What He Was Talking About.

An old German, wearing a faded blue coat and a campaign hat, limped into the office of a palatial dog and horse hospital, bequeathed by a humane millionaire to the town of X.

"I wish to be admitted to dis hospital," he announced to the superintendent. "I've got heart trouble. I'm a G. A. R. man, and I can prove it."

"But you can't enter this institution, my good man."

"Sure I can. I fight at Gettysburg. I half got a veak heart efer sence. I can prove it."

"Yes, but you can't enter this hospital; it's a"—

"Can't, eh? Vhy not? I vas a solcher. I can prove it."

"But this is a veterinary hospital."

"I know dot. Ain'd I choost tellin' you dot I'm a veteran?"—Lippincott's.

A Scot's Lament.

There was a canny Scotsman who had three sons, of whom he was very proud—one a lawyer, one a doctor and one a minister. He was telling an old crony about it one day. He said, "If I had known that I was to be the father of three such fine boys—a doctor, a lawyer and a minister—I'd never have had Jennie McCosh for a wife."

Swimming Like a Duck.

Two English farm laborers, Jones and Smith, spent a day on a beach. During the day Jones suggested a dip in the briny and, on asking Smith if he could swim, that worthy said, "Yes, like a duck." They both entered the water, and Jones immediately struck out and soon left his companion fifteen or twenty yards behind.

On looking around to see if Smith was coming he was horrified to see him struggling in the water in a drowning condition. Jones at once made for his friend and with great difficulty managed to get him to shore. Restoratives were at once applied, and in a short time Smith regained consciousness, when his companion said to him, "You great fule, you said you cud swim like a duck!"

"So I can," said Smith. "But I lost my futhold."

The Bishop's One Regret.

"As harsh criticism as I know of," said an English critic, "was compactly and neatly uttered by a bishop.

"A minister wrote a commentary on the 'Lamentations of Jeremiah' and sent it to the bishop, along with a note asking for a few critical words. The bishop sent the book back after he had read it, with this judgment:

"'There is but one thing that I regret about this work—namely, that Jeremiah is not living now to compose a fresh book of lamentations on your commentary.'"

True Manhood.

Lavater described true manhood as openness without levity, generosity without waste, secrecy without craft, humility without meanness, boldness without insolence, caution without anxiety, regularity without formality, mildness without timidity, firmness without tyranny.

A Parrot In a Whirlwind.

A certain retired general of the Indian army possessed a parrot and also a very irascible temperament. The parrot was a valuable bird, but was rather a nuisance by reason of its extreme talkativeness. One day while the general was writing his business letters the parrot kept up a continual chatter very disturbing to the writer.

At last the general could stand it no longer, and, jumping up, he seized the cage of the unhappy bird, which he whirled vigorously round and round, at the same time swearing vigorously. Then he set the cage down again, and silence for some time ensued.

At length, however, a feeble voice came from the interior of the cage. "General," it inquired in quavering tones, "where were you when that cyclone struck us?"

MARY WAS POLITE.

She Amended the Message She Delivered to the Doctor.

A very pompous doctor is in charge of the female wards of a noted charitable institution in London. One evening about 9 o'clock Mary, a new Irish servant girl, knocked at the door of the doctor's office, saying:

"Doctor, the head nurse wants you to come down to supper."

The doctor, swelling in his pride of superiority above the nurses, sent the Irish girl away with a curt message. Half an hour later the head nurse came to his room looking very serious.

"Doctor," she said, "No. 8 is very bad indeed. I think you ought to see her at once."

"Why did you not let me know before?" was the reply.

"Why, doctor," said the nurse, "I sent you word by Mary half an hour ago!"

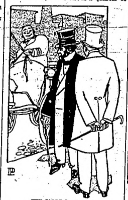
"The fool!" said the doctor. "She told me to come down to supper!"

"Why," said the nurse, "I sent you word to come down to eight!"

An inquiry made the whole thing clear. Mary thought it more polite to say "Come down to supper" than to say "Come down to ate."

Won His Bet.

A gentleman in Dublin, speaking of the Irish, said that nothing ever satisfied them and that he was willing to prove his words on a wager that if he should go to the door and call a cab, no matter what fee he would give, the driver would ask for more. The wager was taken for £10. The gentleman called a cab, drove about a quarter of a mile, stepped out and handed the driver a 10 shilling gold piece, the legal fee being 1 shilling. Cabby drove off. The gentleman who had taken the wager was exulting in his triumph when suddenly the cabby returned and, touching his hat, said: "Please, sir, have ye a durty thre'penny bit about ye? It would be such a pity to break a bright piece of gold like this for a drink!"



THE CABBY RETURNED.

Hitch Your Wagon to a Star.

Hitch your wagon to a star. Let us not fag in paltry works. Let us not lie and steal. No god will help. We shall find all their teams going the other way. Work rather for those interests which the divinities honor and promote—justice, love, freedom, knowledge, utility.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

A Test Question In Theology.

Six-year-old Walter had a new little wagon, and it was very dear to his heart. Sunday was a long day, and after getting home from Sunday school he brought his treasure around on the front lawn to enjoy it. But his father, who could not have the Sabbath broken in the face and eyes of passersby, remonstrated with him, telling him to take it around to the back yard.

"Why can't I play with it here, papa?"

"Why, because it is Sunday, my son!"

"But, papa, isn't it Sunday in the back yard?" asked Walter in surprise.

The Wrong Laddie.

A gentleman on a walk from one of the suburbs of Glasgow happened to call at a farmhouse, where he was readily supplied with a glass of milk. He offered the woman sixpence, but she declined all payment. "I couldna tak' money for 't," she said in her own proud way.

The gentleman expressed his acknowledgment and went on his way, but at the garden gate he detected a small boy playing. Surely, he thought, this is the lady's son. So he put his hand in his pocket to give him the sixpence when he heard a shrill voice, "That's na ma laddie, sir." Then there was a pause, and the voice afterward resounded, this time directed toward a small boy at the side door, "Gang oot, Wullie, an' speak till the nice gentleman at the gate!"

A Name Like a College Yell.

From a crowd of rah-rah college boys celebrating a crew victory a policeman had managed to abstract two prisoners.

"What is the charge against these young men?" asked the magistrate before whom they were arraigned.

"Disturbin' the peace, yer honor," said the policeman. "They were givin' their college yells in the street an' makin' trouble generally."

"What is your name?" the judge asked one of the prisoners.

"R-r-robert R-r-r-rollins," stuttered the youth.

"I asked for your name, sir—not the evidence."—Everybody's Magazine.

A Narrow Escape.

Edgar N. Bayliss, a merchant of Robinsonville, Del., wrote: "About two years ago I was thin and sick, and coughed all the time and if I did not have consumption, it was near to it. I commenced using Foley's Honey and Tar, and it stopped my cough, and I am now entirely well, and have gained twenty-eight pounds, all due to the good results from taking Foley's Honey and Tar."

VOL. XXVI. THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1909 NUMBER 39

ELECTION ON NOVEMBER 2

City Election to Be Held on That Date and Politicians Getting Busy.

Election May Be a Warm One if Enought Candidates Are in the Field.

Thief River Falls is going to have an election this fall, and an entire set of city officials are to be elected for a term of two years. Tuesday, the second day of November is the date on which the sovereign voters will pass judgement upon their servants and for sometime past the habitats of "Big Nick" Tarrant's store on the East Side have been busy making mayors, alderman and sundry officials. "Big Nick" does not like to have his customers talk politics, but he says that they are determined to do so and he just hasn't the heart to stop them. According to rumors afloat, Thief River Falls is quite likely to have an exciting election this fall, but there is a lack of candidates and this is going to do much towards throwing a wet blanket upon the flames that have been started.

Ed Wilcox is to be a candidate for mayor. He has been sufficiently urged by his friends and has given his consent. Ed is one of the old timers of Thief River Falls and is known to nearly every resident. Mayor Hamre does not state whether or not he will be a candidate for re-election, but the general impression is that his friends will insist that he again be a candidate. Mr. Hamre has given the city an excellent administration, and the greatest objection to him is that he is too expensive and too progressive. As mayor he is "on the job" all the time, and he will have the support and backing of the pushers. It is also rumored that a third candidate is to be in the field before long, although no name is mentioned with authority.

Most of the members of the old council will be candidates for re-election, and it is expected that there will be some warm fights. Among the candidates mentioned at present are M. V. Evenson, Olaf Ramstad, Milton Forder, Anton Langseth, Charlie Olson, Charles Alexander, Ben Christianson, Dr. Booron, Dr. Mellby and others.

Lars Backe, who has been city clerk since the city was first organized, states that he will not again be a candidate for this office, and it does not appear that anyone else is a candidate. Mr. Backe will become a candidate for city treasurer, which office pays nearly as large a salary and requires much less work.

First Norwegian In Forks.

E. Tharaldson of Thief River Falls, Minn. has been in Rollette several days soliciting aid for himself and wife who are both in serious need of medical attendance. Mr. Tharaldson says that he was the first Norwegian in North Dakota to engage in the mercantile business. He located at Grand Forks in 1870, and lived there for many years and became well to do. He lost heavily in various ways and his wife has now been an invalid for 10 years. He has spent $14,000 for sickness and is himself badly crippled up with rheumatism. Recently his home was sold under mortgage foreclosure at Starbuck, Minn., and now Mr. Tharaldson is obliged to look to his friends for assistance. He has a number of friends here who have known him for many years and they did all they could to aid him in supporting himself and family.—Rollette County Examiner.

Getting Even.

To get even with a neighbor Ole Rogne of Euclid put some iron bolts in the shocks on the Frank Kiefer farm with the result that the cylinder and concaves of the threshing machine at work on the farm were torn to pieces. It is now a question whether he got even or not as he is now confined in the county jail awaiting the action of the court.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Richardson, of Elgin, Minn., pioneer settlers of Minnesota, stopped off in the city last Saturday to visit Mr. and Mrs. Ira C. Richardson. They had been out to the Pacific coast where they spent the summer.

SOO ROAD TO BUILD N. E.

International Falls Paper Says That a Road Will Be Built to That Place.

Road Would Branch Off From Thief River Falls and Go Through Rich Country.

The following, taken from the International Falls Press, will be of much interest to the settlers living in the country northeast of this city, and it is stated upon good authority that this road will be built in the near future:

"A number of the chief officials of the Soo railroad arrived in their special car this morning, accompanied by E. W. Backus, of the Townsite and Power Development companies. They are spending the day looking over the water power, industrial development and townsite, and enjoying a short trip on Rainy lake.

Just where the new road will build from and when it will be built is a matter as yet undecided but it is very likely that it will be an extension of the Thief River Falls line. Surveyors are now at work on a preliminary survey southwest of here, and no doubt the road will soon follow after the best route is decided upon.

Minnesota Land Values.

Every day, we read of land selling in Iowa, Illinois, or some of the older states at from $100.00 to $200.00 an acre, and more, and that very land will not raise any better crops than land in Minnesota or the Dakotas, which can be purchased for $25.00 to $50.00 an acre. Niether is there a better market. Land in Minnesota and the Dakotas has not yet reached its proper level of valuation, thruthfully asserts the Northwestern Agriculturist.

WILD RICE IS PLENTIFUL

The Crop This Year Has Been Exceptionally Heavy in the Red Lake Country.

Indians Are Making a Business of Harvesting the Crop and There Are Many Buyers.

One of the heaviest wild rice crops in many years is being harvested in the Red Lake country this fall. Some of the oldtimers say they never before saw so much of the cereal in this territory. Conditions during the summer appear to have been ideal for its growth, and it has reached a luxuriance seldom attained.

There is plenty of it to supply a liberal amount for the winter consumption of Indians, but it is said there is danger that the red man's greed for money may, in the face of plenty, bring about a famine. In previous years the whole of the rice crop went to the Indians and ducks. During the last few seasons certain men have been buying the cereal for market, and this year the railroad men say more of it is being shipped out of the north country than ever before.

The rice brings a fancy price in the larger cities, and is in great demand. There is a good market for all that can be produced. There is a good profit in the business for the man who buys from the Indians and then resells to the trade. Indians are experts at harvesting this product on the lakes and streams, and they sell it at a low figure. As more buyers enter the field, however, the price to the harvester increases, for the buyers got to bidding against each other, and the Indians profit thereby. It is a repetition of the history of the fur business. The time was when valuable furs could be bought from the Indians for a song, but competition has taught him the real value of the fur-bearing animals, and now he is more cautious about disposing of his catch for he knows that if he does not sell to one man he can dispose of the furs to another.

The danger from famine comes from the fact that the Indian is liable to slight his own winter needs in disposing of the crop on the market. The money he gets from his work in this direction is, for the most part, squandered in the red man's usual reckless fashion, and little of it goes toward the laying in of winter stores. Instead of putting by a plentiful store of rice for his own use, he sells most of what he harvests, and it is feared that with the big demand existing this fall he will find himself short of both rice and money before the winter is over with. Wild rice has always been a staple with Minnesota Indians, and many of them depend upon it almost entirely for their winter food.

Norwegians to Raise Funds.

Collection of the fund for the gift of Norwegian-Americans to their mother country will begin at once in all states having any considerable Norwegian population. The committee of the Norwegian Memorial Gift association finished its work at a meeting in Minneapolis last week and the special organizations will take care of collections in each state.

The delegates organized the association and outlined a method for getting a large fund. L. O. Thorpe of Wilmar, president of the committee, will name a vice president for each state. These vice presidents will confer and set a time for making a general appeal to all Norwegian-Americans. After that the general committee will meet at intervals to advise the subcommittees and consider reports.

The chief gift is to be the restoration of the ancient cathedral at Trondhjem, where the Norwegian kings are crowned.

This work will require about 250,000 crowns but the committee expects to raise more money than that. The surplus will be the nucleus of a natural charity fund in charge of the storthing. The gifts will be made on May 17, 1914, the one-hundreth anniversary of Norway's independence.

Electric Headlights.

Montana passed a law ordering the railroads to use powerful electric headlights on all their engines. The railroad carried out a series of experiments to show that electric headlights were too bright for the eyes of railroad employes. Members of the Montana railway commission witnessed the tests. It was shown that the electric headlights rendered signals invisible at certain distances and are blinding in the effects upon the eyes. Instead of being a benefit they were shown to be a greater menace to employes of the railroads and to the public.

To Rush Work.

The following is from the Duluth News-Tribune.

"The contractors on the Thief River Falls branch of the Soo line are rushing their work as fast as possible, to have the grading finished by October 1.

The steel contractors are getting ready to begin laying tracks, and expect to start the first of next week. Crews are being secured and the work will be rushed at a rapid rate. It is expected that the ballasting will be finished early in the spring so that trains will be running by that time.

School Notes.

A complete list of the teachers is as follows: High School building: Blanche Godward, principal, Latin and German; Maria Blexrud, normal; C. H. Hess, mathematics and science; Gertrude Schwalbe, English; Elizabeth Dewey, commercial; Ruth Stubbings, domestic science; Tella Johnson, grades sixth and fifth; Rachel Schropel, fifth and fourth; L. V. Haslip, third and second; Emma Backe, first and primary. Central building: Anna Connelly, seventh grade; Edith Day, sixth; Julia Wahl, fifth; Mary McGinn, fourth, Madeline Collins, third and primary; Julia Larson, second; Grace Laughlin, first; Myrtle Wold, primary. Knox building: Hilda Ekholm, eighth and seventh; Kathryn Kohler, eigth; Stella Cipra, sixth, Alice McCabe, fifth; Julia Lommen, fourth and second; May Paine, third; Lulu Mc Crum, first; Emily Lakin, primary; J. H. Hay, superintendent.

Miss Madeline Collins, a St. Cloud normal graduate and a teacher in Bagley for two years, is the new instructor in the Central.

The Central eighth grade has been moved to the Knox, to the only school room which was not occupied in the city. This class, being comprised of large pupils, could the most easily make the change. But four of these students have more than ten blocks to walk to reach the latter school, and a majority of them have less than eight, so that not much inconvenience has been worked the pupils who made the change of school.

Next week all the eighth grade girls will begin elementary cooking at the high school domestic science room, taking one lesson a week. This is the time ordinarily devoted to this subject in all the city schools in this grade.

Children may complete the work of the primary and first and second grades in two years if they are mature and bright, but it is discovered that a minority only can accomplish this successfully. Better far, to give the child a thorough drill in the elementary principles of the common subjects, rather than to hustle him along into the third grade poorly prepared. Space forbids more than merely calling attention to the fact, that no part of the school system in this city receives more thoughtful consideration, than the preparation and outlining of the work in the first three grades. Details of how it is carried out can be learned at first hand by visiting the classes and by inquiry of the teachers. More children are spoiled as students in the first three grades than in any other three of the twelve of the common and secondary schools.

The public reception to the teachers was a pleasing method of permitting those interested in the schools—and the teachers—of making the acquaintance of those who will control the destinies of some eleven or twelve hundred pupils for the next year.

Ed Jaranson succeeded in climbing the flag pole on the high school building Tuesday and in replacing the rope in the pulley at the top.

A six foot cement walk has been laid along the west side of the Knox grounds.

A Hotel Proposition.

A proposition is under consideration by local business men for the building of a large new hotel in Thief River Falls by capital from Fargo. A committee has been named to have charge of the matter and is investigating the situation. As yet nothing definite has been done.

Preliminary returns indicate a winter wheat crop of 432,920 bushels, with a yield of 15.5 bushels per acre. While the total yield is a trifle less than 5,000,000 bushels below that of last year, the yield per acre is 1.1 bushels better.

A good many folks will burn kerosene lamps all night, with the doors and windows closed, and then wonder why they feel thick headed and dull in the morning or are afflicted with nervousness and indigestion, when the thing is a plain case of cause and effect.

Unadulterated milk should contain about 87 per cent of water and 13 per cent of solids. It also contains bacteria which hasten the souring and ripening processes. The number of harmful bacteria which it may contain depends largely upon the degree of cleanliness observed in handling it.

Danish dairymen seek to head off an infection of their calves by tuberculosis by removing them from their dams at once if the latter are found to be tuberculous. This malady is one that is not inherited at birth, but contracted by drinking germ laden milk. Thus removal and giving the calves pure milk insure their healthy development.

It is estimated that 300,000 people in all registered for the land drawings held in Spokane, Billings and Coeur d'Alene. If each person on the average spent $20 in car fare and hotel bills to make the trip to one of the three places the process of registering alone cost in the aggregate $6,000,000. This is a good round sum and would have bought 60,000 acres of land at $100 per acre.

It has been found as a result of experiments in sections where peat soils prevail that the application of a good supply of barnyard manure will do much to make them workable and will set bacterial life to working, which will make their fertilizer content available for plant life. In this respect natural fertilizers seem to be much more effective than commercial fertilizers, which are of an inorganic nature.

Cold storage experiments which have been conducted by the pomological division of the department of agriculture seems to show quite conclusively that apples will keep most perfectly in storage which are picked when full ripe and a minimum of the starch content is turned to sugar. The keeping quality of the fruit is further increased by the carefulest possible handling in picking and packing and placing in storage as soon as may be after picking. It was found that underripe fruit tended to shrink in storage and lost much of its sweetness and flavor.

Trials which have been made with "hogging down" corn by experiment stations and individual feeders seem to demonstrate quite clearly that a corn crop fed in this way is handled with the least possible expense, while the hogs make more rapid gain in weight than under any other system of feeding. This is a somewhat rare instance of where that which seems to be the easiest way of doing a thing is also the most to be commended from the standpoint of dollars and cents. To make the plan most effective the field should be fenced off in small areas and the hogs made to eat one section up clean before being turned into another.

One of the first things that strike the attention of the eastern tourist in California is the extensive use of crude petroleum as a substitute for coal. Steam engines have an oil tank instead of a coal tender, the oil being drawn from elevated tanks in the same way that water is for the supply of steam. Manufacturing plants not operated by electricity use the crude oil almost exclusively, as do ocean and river steamboats as far north as Seattle. The crude oil is also used extensively in sprinkling railroad tracks, suburban streets and country roads, and when the road is once "made" but a single application of oil is needed in eight or ten months to keep it in excellent shape. The discovery of oil in California has been a boon to her transportation and manufacturing interests that it would be difficult to estimate, as it is cheap, economical and easily handled.

The Turkish red variety of winter wheat is being sown this fall by many a farmer in the small grain belt who has not raised a bushel of wheat on his place for a score of years or more. Among the advantages of substituting winter wheat for oats in a crop rotation may be mentioned the fact that where conditions are at all favorable it will give a larger net return per acre than oats, while it matures two weeks earlier than early oats enabling one to turn under the stubble early and thus keeping myriads of weeds from maturing a crop of seed. Where one wishes to make a fall sowing of alfalfa, winter wheat makes an excellent preceding crop as there is time to give the land several diskings before the alfalfa is sown. With conditions at all favorable there should be a yield of from twenty five to thirty five bushels per acre while the price should be not less than $1 per bushel.

BEMIDJI MAY GET THE SOO

It Is Stated That Soo Line Has Made A Proposition to People of Bemidji.

Will Run Through That City if a Free Right of Way Is Given.

According to the Bemidji Pioneer, the officials of the Soo railway company have consented to build the Thief River Falls-Duluth line through the city of Bemidji providing that a free right of way which will cost in the neighborhood of $30,000, is donated by the city.

The Pioneer further says:

"The survey as now made from the Leech lake dam along the west side of Winnibigoshish Lake, north end of Lake Bemidji and from thence westward to Plummer has been practically completed and a satisfactory line has been secured.

However, through the persistant efforts of the Bemidji Commercial Club the company's attention has been drawn to Bemidji, and after M. D. Stoner had presented to the officials the profiles and maps of about sixteen miles of a line which would pass through Bemidji, the Soo company have made a very fair proposition.

The route is longer and more expensive to construct via Bemidji, and with these conditions in view, Bemidji can consider herself extremely fortunate for having such reasonable proposition made by a company which almost invariably passes up all villages and moderate sized cities and builds its own towns.

Bemidjites will not get a mere branch of the Soo railway system, if they secure the necessary right-of-way required, but will get the most important line of any built in the United States by that company, which in reality is a part of the great Canadian Pacific railway, having under operation over 30,000 miles of lines.

Immediately after the line from Moose Lake to Thief River Falls is constructed, steps will be taken to extend from Moose lake southeasterly to an intersection with the Wisconsin Central, which is a part of the Soo system which, when completed, will be the Soo's main line from Winnipeg to Chicago, or in other words, from Van Couver to Chicago, and will be many miles shorter than any other line now operated and the train service will be unequaled anywhere.

"With such an addition as the main line of the Soo, Bemidji will have the advantage of any city in the state, except a few of the largest. One of the many industries she may hope to secure is a large sawmill to manufacture the Weyerhaeuser timber. It is pretty generally known that this company is waiting to see where the Soo Railway company will build, when they will locate as large a mill as any in the state to cut their vast holdings of pine in Beltrami and Itasca counties. With the M. & I. and Red Lake lines running from Bemidji into the very heart of their timbers, it is only reasonable to conclude that they will look with favor upon Bemidji as a location for their mill.

The Soo company has assured the citizens committees that if the required right of way is secured, construction work will begin within a few weeks thereafter. The entire line must be completed and under operation in time to haul the wheat next fall.

As Bemidji is the only point readily accessible by the other railroads, the company has stated that this city will be their headquarters for their construction work through this country. This will mean that many thousands of dollars will be left here by the employes during the construction.

Adams Presbytery.

The Presbytery of Adams, which includes the Presbyterian churches of the nine northwest counties of the state, met in this city Tuesday and Wednesday. Ministers and elders came from different parts of the district to report on work and to plan together for advance. Rev. H. W. George, of East Grand Forks, was chosen Moderator. Two new men present were Rev. R. S. Sidebothan, of Warroad, and Rev. H. A. Noyes, of Stephen, and arrangements were made for the installation of the former as pastor.

Reports of the work, especially as to offerings to Benevolences were favorable. Among those present were Rev. R. T. Adams, D. D., of Minneapolis, one of the best known and honored men of the state.

Public meetings were held Tuesday evening with and addressed by Rev. Grant Stroh, of Warren, and Wednesday by Rev. R. D. Sidebothan and Rev. H. W. George.

The following resolution on the death of Gov. Johnson was passed:

"The Presbytery of Adams' meeting at Thief River Falls on the day of the death of Governor John A. Johnson, a member of the Presbyterian church, desires

1st. To express and record the profound sorrow of its members and that of the citizenship which we represent, over the great loss to our state and to the cause of good government.

2nd. To voice our sincere sympathy with his faithful life companion.

3rd. To call all our membership to faithfull prayer for all who occupy positions of great responsibility in the government of our state."

Raise the Price of Pork.

Owing to the scarcity of pork the butchers of this city will on Saturday, Sept. 25, raise the price of pork as follows: Roasts, 18 cents per pound; steaks and chops, 20 cents per pound; pork sausage 12½ cents per pound.

Also commencing on the first of October, no order for delivery will be taken after 11 o'clock a. m. for noon delivery, or after 5 o'clock p. m. for evening delivery.

The ladies of the Presbyterian church will give a Harvest Home supper in the Dobner Meehan building on Thursday evening, Sept. 30. Supper will be ready at 6:00 p. m., and will include the following bill of fare: Chicken, lemon, apple and pumpkin pie, brown bread, rolls, cold meats, pickles, salads, cheese, jellies, cake and doughnuts and coffee. Let everyone come and enjoy a good supper. Supper, 25 cents.

HOSPITAL FOR THE CITY

Matter of Building a Hospital Discussed at Meeting Held Monday Evening.

A Majority Seemed to Be In Favor of Having the City Build It.

A meeting called by Mayor T. P. Hamre was held in the Antlers Club rooms Monday evening to discuss the proposition of a hospital for Thief River Falls. It seemed to be the unanimous opinion of all that a hospital was greatly needed in Thief River Falls, but there was some division as to how this money should be raised. The majority seemed to think that the only way in which such a building could be erected was by an issue of bonds by the city, while others were of the opinion that the funds should be raised by private subscription. The impression has gained considerable headway that the city is not in a position to issue bonds, having reached the legal limit, but this is not true and if the voters so desire the required money for a first class hospital, it can be raised by a bond issue.

If a hospital is built by the city, it is the intention of leasing it to some church or charitable organization and have it run under rules laid down by the city council. It is thought that it could be rented for a sufficient sum to pay interest upon the cost of the investment, although it would not be the intention of the city to make any profit.

At the meeting of the city council held on Tuesday evening, the resolution allowing the voters to vote upon the question of issuing bonds for a city hospital at the November election was defeated. Ramstad and Evenson voted in favor of the resolution and Forder, Hoag and Alexander against it. This means that if a hospital is now built the funds will have to be raised by private subscription and it is almost impossible to do this.

"Nordlandslaget" which was organized two years ago, decided at its last meeting, held in Minneapolis June 21-26 to give to Norway a life saving boat, to cost about Kr. 13000.

Subscription lists have been to all places in America where Norwegians live urging all, and especially those born in the Northern part of that country to come with their aid and their help in this great and noble cause.

Some of us know by experience that many lives are lost in Norway every year and we also know what it means to have a life saving boat plying the northern coast of Norway during the fishing seasons rescuing lives that otherwise will be lost.

Sverre Johnson, of Thief River Falls, has been appointed solicitor for this district, but in order to reach those living out in the country, the list has been left in the hands of Bernhard Knudson, proprietor of Hotel Central, and he will explain more in detail, all about the life saving boat.

GOOD FROM THE START
Fifty-five years ago Gund's Beers were made in a log brewery and brewed in a six-gallon kettle. The superior grade of barley grown about this then sparsely settled region was the chief attraction that drew this famous German brewmaster to La Crosse. Now it is the heart of the world's finest barley growing belt and the cream of every barley crop comes to his brewery, from which combined with the finest hops grown in Old Bohemia, is brewed. Instead of a log brewery today, there stands a mammoth model 20th century plant operated and lighted by electricity to which visitors are always welcome.
Gund's Peerless
It is impossible to brew a beer of a higher quality than Peerless. You should see that it is always in your home. Telephone us today for a case of Peerless, the beer of matchless flavor

Not What He Expected.

A doctor in a Yorkshire village lately gave up his house and was succeeded in it by a veterinary surgeon. Before he had been many weeks in his new home the "vet" was awakened in the early hours of a rather bleak spring morning. Opening the window, he heard a voice call out of the darkness:

"Can you come with me at once, mister? She's very bad."

The surgeon dressed and found a trap waiting to take him to a farm two or three miles away from the village. On the way he asked a few questions about the case he was to attend.

"I'm afraid there's very little hope for her," said the farmer. "She's been ailing now, you see, for ten years, and she's getting pretty old as well."

Annoyed at being called out at such an hour to see an obviously not very valuable animal, the veterinary surgeon exclaimed, "Why on earth don't you shoot her?"

"What!" exclaimed the farmer. "Shoot my mother!"

Then the "vet" understood that it was the previous tenant who was wanted. —London Tit-Bits.

Work Day on a Mississippi Plantation.

The day begins on a plantation when it is yet night. The big bell rings between 4 and 5 o'clock for the "hands" to go to the fields. Mammy starts her small sable assistants around at the "big house" with early coffee about 6. Without this tiny cup of cafe noir your true creole gets up on the wrong side of the bed. He has no appetite for breakfast after a ride through the fields and still less for his generous noonday dinner. Supper is served at night, and the dishes are typically southern—the corn and batter breads, fried chickens and waffles and fig preserves, with "sillabub," that moonbeam mixture that makes modern ices and confections heavy by comparison, for dessert. Life on a plantation is not dull. There are visits to town and a constant stream of visitors from town. There are "sugar house" parties and hog killings, Christmas doings and Thanksgiving dinners, to say nothing of house parties and hunts.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

The Herring.

A peculiar feature in the herring trade is that an exceptionally large catch during one season has no effect whatever upon the next year's supply; also, large as is man's consumption of herrings, naturalists say the number killed by fishermen is quite insignificant as compared with the quantity destroyed every year by sharks, porpoises, cod, dogfish, ling and other fish, each of which must have its daily meal of from one to two score herrings, to say nothing of the sea birds, which practically live on surface feeding fishes. Herrings are not at all a modern article of diet. A vast commerce in them was carried on in northern Europe all through the dark and middle ages. The herring's chief food consists of minute organisms, which it strains from the water by its gills, but it also eats worms and at certain seasons its own young, sprats and sand eels.—Pearson's Weekly.

Rule of the Corset.

If Cleopatra wore corsets she may rank as a royal champion of them with Catherine de' Medici, who is credited with having introduced the busked corset in France from Italy. Male monarchs have been less friendly. Joseph II. of Austria tried to discourage the corset by making it part of the costume of a convicted woman of bad character. Napoleon, shaking his head over the tight lacing of his day, told Dr. Corvisart that he saw in it a sign of frivolous tastes and a menace of coming decadence. The restoration kings, Louis XVIII. and Charles X., were equally hostile. Formerly, said the latter, France had been full of Venuses, Dianas and Niobes, but now there were only wasps. The revolution alone temporarily put down the garment that has triumphantly defied kings.—London Spectator.

A Boomerang.

An amusing incident occurred when the house of lords was in committee on the reform bill of 1867. The clerk of the house intimated that an amendment had been handed in, the writing of which was so illegible that he was unable to say what it was about or who had written it. It was then discovered that Lord Lyttleton was the author, and it turned out to be a proposal disfranchising all persons who could not write.—Westminster Gazette.

Out of Place.

A sentry, an Irishman, was on post duty for the first time at night, when the officer of the day approached. He called, "Who comes there?"

"Officer of the day," was the reply.

"Then, what are yez doin' out at night?" asked the sentry.—London Telegraph.

"Your chauffeur seems very respectful," said the guest.

"That air of deferential solicitude," replied Mr. Chuggins, "is not respect. It is sympathy."—Washington Star.

Persian Cities.

Teheran, Persia's capital, is one of the least interesting cities of that ancient land. The houses are mean, the streets narrow and dirty, and even the palace of the shah is far from being a thing of beauty. It has no history worth mentioning and is only redeemed by the birth of Haroun-al-Raschid in a neighboring village. Its importance comes from the presence of the court, but it undergoes a sad decadence in summer, when the unhealthful climate drives the greater part of the population to more sanitary places.

Ispahan, the former capital of Persia, is far different. That city was once girdled by a wall of twenty-four miles, and Shah Abbas in the sixteenth century loaded it with magnificence. It contains splendid mosques and ancient palaces which appeal to the imagination. But Ispahan, too, has fallen upon evil days.

"Houses, bazaars, mosques, palaces, whole streets," writes a traveler of a few years ago, "are to be seen in total abandonment, and one may ride for miles without meeting with a single living creature except perhaps a solitary jackal looking over a mall or a fox running to his hole."

The Smithy Settled It.

One of the candidates at an English election was announced to address a meeting in a Yorkshire village well known to horse dealers and breeders as the center of a district noted for its hackneys and roadsters. The candidate was an eloquent speaker, but for some reason or other he failed to make any great impression on the horse loving farmers. However, the local blacksmith came to the rescue by summing up the respective merits of the rival candidates in the following laconic little speech:

"Friends, this feller"—the candidate—"rides a 'oss. T'other feller rides a mortycar. You breeds 'osses, an' I shoes 'em, so wot is theer to argy aboot?"

In such a district and before such an audience the brief, businesslike speech of the blacksmith was not without effect, for it touched the pockets as well as the hearts of those present.—London Mail.

Poison In the Middle Ages.

In the middle ages so little was known of toxicology that all sudden and mysterious deaths were attributed to poison, but in the light of modern knowledge many of these, says the British Medical Journal, are now easily explained by such diseases as appendicitis and gastric ulcer. Even the Borgias can be absolved from many of the poisonings laid to their charge. Nevertheless from early times in Italy poison was a favorite means of "removing" an enemy. In England, France and Germany cruder methods of vengeance prevailed, and it was not until the sixteenth century that the Medici introduced poisoning into France. The fashion spread with terrible rapidity, and poison was employed in every rank of society to get rid of inconvenient persons. The art introduced into France by Catherine de' Medici and her followers took root so deeply as to blossom later into the black magic of Louis XIV.'s reign.

Monuments to Wellington.

Has any British national hero more monuments to his fame in London than Wellington? There is the Achilles statue by Westmacott in Hyde park, cast from cannons taken at Salamanca, Vittoria, Toulouse and Waterloo, at a cost of £10,000, defrayed by "the women of England." The equestrian statue by Boehm at Hyde park corner is the second equestrian statue erected in that locality. The former one, by Wyatt, costing some £30,000, was removed to Aldershot when the arch which it crowned was moved. Then there is the colossal equestrian statue by Chantrey at the west front of the Royal Exchange, the monument by Bell in the Guildhall, the monument by Stevens in St. Paul's, which was over twenty years in hand, and a stone statue by Milnes, erected in the Tower of London near the Waterloo barracks. —London Chronicle.

Flower Gardens of the Sea.

The sea has its flower gardens, but the blooms are not on plants as they are on the land. It is the animals of the sea that make the gardens, the corals of the tropical waters particularly making a display of floral beauty that fairly rivals the gorgeous coloring and delicate grace presented by land flowers. So closely do they resemble plant blooms that it is hard to believe that they are wholly animal in organization. A naturalist says that among the coral gardens there are fishes of curious forms and flashing colors darting about, just as the birds and butterflies dart about plant gardens on land.

Not Much to Make Up.

"Fo' goodness' sake," impatiently exclaimed Mr. Coonley during the poker game, "speak up lively an' say what yo' am a-gwine to do, Mose! Why, it don't take me mo' den two seconds to make up mah mind."

"If it did," replied the player addressed, very deliberately, "you'd suttainly be loafin'!"—New York Sun.

Matching the Braid.

After ten years he returned, footsore and weary. His wife met him at the door.

"I thought you were dead," she told him.

"You should have known better than that," he said. "Do you remember that last piece of net I tried to match for you? You scolded because there was a difference of an eighth of an inch in the width of the folds, and I vowed that I would never again return from matching anything for you until I had found the exact thing you wanted."

He handed her a package.

"Here is that old rose binding braid that you told me to buy. I found it last Monday in Billings, Mont. I have looked for it in thirty-seven states."

She tore off the wrappings.

"It is a little too dark," she said.

"But the sample has faded some in ten years," he reminded her.

"It is a little too heavy besides."

"But handling by thousands of clerks has worn the sample away some. It was heavier when I started out."

"I suppose I can make it do," she said.—Newark News.

Her Dime.

Somebody had given the east side woman a bad dime. It was composed largely of lead. She tried to pass it at several places, but they are wary for some reason or other on the east side. They invariably ring a dime on the counter once or twice and bite it besides. When she got home with the dime it had several holes in it from the pressure of east side teeth. "It is more impossible than ever," she said.

The impecunious man called that evening. He had a dollar with him which was wholly intact—that is to say, it had not been broken.

"I am afraid they'll give me bad money for it," he said upon taking his departure, "over here in these east side cars. Will you change it for me?"

"I shall be delighted," said she.

He called a week later, with a grouch.

"You can't seem to get away from the bad money over here on your old east side," he complained. "Somebody or other stung me with an old lead dime that was full of holes."—New York Press.

Convincing the Waiter.

"I have learned how to make the foreign waiters in the restaurants where I eat think I have lived in Europe half a lifetime," said a woman who never dines at home. "I dawdle over my dinner twice as long as anybody else in the place. It requires no effort for me to do that. By nature I eat in the same leisurely manner that I do everything else. Most of my compatriots bolt their food. As a consequence the foreign waiters who are used to leisurely dining regard them with amazed horror.

"'Ah, those Americans!' they exclaim. 'Some day they choke. But as for madame'—meaning me—'well, madame is different. Madame nibbles, she sips, she lingers; therefore she is not as those of common American clay. It takes madame never less than two hours to eat her dinner. That marks her as one of the European elect.'"—New York Globe.

Some Odd Spelling.

Americans, says the London News, employ the word "Britisher," which they invented, in a contemptuous sense. It was a certain Philadelphia wit who is said to have asked his friends what a "Britisher" would mean to convey by the written word "ghoughphtheightteeau." He had to explain to them that, according to the genius of the English language, it meant "potato." Thus: Gh—p, as in "hiccough;" ough—o, as in "dough;" phth—t, as in "phthisis;" eigh—a, as in "neighbor;" tte—t, as in "gazette," and eau—o, as in "beau." This was at least as puzzling as the livery stable keeper's bill which contained the two lines—

Unappreciated Efforts.

Unselfish goodness is seldom appreciated in this world of ours. There was that man in the electric car, for instance. Having rung up three fares in his efforts to stop the car for the lady that sat on the opposite side, he tossed after her the umbrella that belonged to the little gray whiskered man on his right. Neither the gray whiskered man nor the conductor liked the thoughtful Samaritan for his altruistic efforts.—Boston Transcript.

He Beat the Baker.

His name was Johnny, and he was the idol of his mother's heart in spite of what the neighbors might say to his detriment.

"You'll get my bread today before returning to school, John," remarked his mother to the boy while he indulged in his midday meal.

"Yes, mother," answered he and shortly went forth to carry out his mother's wishes.

"A quartern of bread—yesterday's, please," murmured John sweetly as he tendered fivepence halfpenny in payment of the two loaves forthcoming.

"Bread has gone up, my boy, one halfpenny," remarked Mr. Dough as he held out his hand for the needful balance.

"When?" queried John thoughtfully as the prospect of a distasteful double journey flashed across his mind.

"This morning, my lad, if that is any consolation."

Johnny's face brightened visibly. "Yes, I think it is," he remarked spasmodically, "for it was yesterday's bread I ordered."

The baker concluded he had no claim.—London Telegraph.

The Candle Tree.

One of the wonders of the vegetable kingdom is undoubtedly the candle tree of Panama, known to botanists as Parmentiera cerifera. This tree produces from its stem and older branches a great profusion of yellowish, cylindrical, smooth fruits, twelve to eighteen inches long, which appear exactly like wax candles, as the botanical name implies. So close is this resemblance that travelers, seeing the tree for the first time, are liable to be temporarily puzzled as to whether the candles of shops are made in factories or grown on trees! The candle-like fruits are suspended from the branches and bare stem by short, slender stalks, dangling in the air, and readily give the impression of the chandler's shop. As night falls and the numerous fireflies move among the fruit this impression is intensified. The inexperienced traveler is not infrequently informed that the fireflies perform the duty of lighting up these "candles" at night when light is required by the denizens of the jungle.—London Strand.

A Lich Gate.

A lich gate is a shed, generally of oak, over the entrance of a churchyard, beneath which the bearers paused when bringing a body for interment. Here the clergyman met the body and read the introductory part of the burial service as he proceded the funeral train into the church. Examples of old lich gates are still to be seen in many country churchyards. In Wales they are more modern and are usually built of stone. Some of the old lich gates are formed with one wide door turning on a central pivot and self closing by means of a rude pulley wheel in the roof and a stone weight inclosed in an iron frame, a primitive but effective piece of machinery. In Herefordshire they are also called "scallage" or "scallenge" gates. "Lich gate" is derived from the Anglo-Saxon lich, a corpse; hence the north country "lyke wake."—London Answers.

Hypnotic Power In Animals.

An interesting instance of the hypnotic power possessed by a good many animals is given by a correspondent of the Glasgow Herald. One morning outside Elgin a blackbird was observed to be standing by the roadside, paying no heed to the footsteps of the passerby. It was gazing fixedly at four young weasels under the hedge, which were approaching in a semicircle, apparently to surround it. Just then a warning cry was heard from behind, uttered presumably by the parent weasel, and the young ones disappeared in the hedge. The bird still remained powerless and immovable, and only after repeated urging did it fly to a tree near by, when it gave forth a weak, frightened sound, as though still under the influence of the terror which had arrested its faculties.

A Mild Hint.

Two guests came to spend the evening and didn't know when to depart. The host and hostess were patient with them, very patient, but when 11, 12 and finally 1 o'clock struck the husband realized that something must be done. He was an original chap, and in his droll way he looked over at his wife and said mildly:

"My dear, hadn't we better get up to bed? Our friends may want to be going."

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.
Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.
We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.
IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.
DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

Preliminary returns indicate a winter wheat crop of 432,920 bushels, with a yield of 15.5 bushels per acre. While the total yield is a trifle less than 6,000,000 bushels below that of last year, the yield per acre is 1.1 bushels better.

Unadulterated milk should contain about 87 per cent of water and 13 per cent of solids. It also contains bacteria which hasten the souring and ripening processes. The number of harmful bacteria which it may contain depends largely upon the degree of cleanliness observed in handling it.

Danish dairymen seek to head off an infection of their calves by tuberculosis by removing them from their dams at once if the latter are found to be tuberculous. This malady is one that is not inherited at birth, but contracted by drinking germ laden milk. Thus removal and giving the calves pure milk insure their healthy development.

It is estimated that 300,000 people in all registered for the land drawings held in Spokane, Billings and Coeur d'Alene. If each person on the average spent $20 in car fare and hotel bills to make the trip to one of the three places the process of registering alone cost in the aggregate $6,000,000. This is a good round sum and would have bought 60,000 acres of land at $100 per acre.

It has been found as a result of experiments in sections where peat soils prevail that the application of a good supply of barnyard manure will do much to make them workable and will set bacterial life to working, which will make their fertilizer content available for plant life. In this respect natural fertilizers seem to be much more effective than commercial fertilizers, which are of an inorganic nature.

Cold storage experiments which have been conducted by the pomological division of the department of agriculture seems to show quite conclusively that apples will keep most perfectly in storage which are picked when full ripe and a minimum of the starch content is turned to sugar. The keeping quality of the fruit is further increased by the carefulest possible handling in picking and packing and placing in storage as soon as may be after picking. It was found that underripe fruit tended to shrink in storage and lost much of its sweetness and flavor.

Trials which have been made with "hogging down" corn by experiment

BEMIDJI MAY GET THE SOO

It Is Stated That Soo Line Has Made A Proposition to People of Bemidji.

Will Run Through That City if a Free Right of Way Is Given.

According to the Bemidji Pioneer, the officials of the Soo railway company have consented to build the Thief River Falls-Duluth line through the city of Bemidji providing that a free right of way which will cost in the neighborhood of $30,000, is donated by the city.

The Pioneer further says:

"The survey as now made from the Leech lake dam along the west side of Winnibigoshish Lake, north end of Lake Bemidji and from thence westward to Plummer has been practically completed and a satisfactory line has been secured.

However, through the persistant efforts of the Bemidji Commercial Club the company's attention has been drawn to Bemidji, and after M. D. Stoner had presented to the officials the profiles and maps of about sixteen miles of a line which would pass through Bemidji, the Soo company have made a very fair proposition.

The route is longer and more expensive to construct via Bemidji, and with these conditions in view, Bemidji can consider herself extremely fortunate for having such reasonable proposition made by a company which almost invariably passes up all villages and moderate sized cities and builds its own towns.

Bemidjites will not get a mere branch of the Soo railway system, if they secure the necessary right-of-way required, but will get the most important line of any built in the United States by that company, which in reality is a part of the great Canadian Pacific railway, having under operation over 30,000 miles of lines.

Immediately after the line from Moose Lake to Thief River Falls is constructed, steps will be taken to extend from Moose lake southeasterly to an intersection with the Wisconsin Central, which is a part of the Soo system which, when completed, will be the Soo's main line from Winnipeg to Chicago, or in other words, from Van Couver to Chicago, and will be many miles shorter than any other line now operated and the train service will be unequaled anywhere.

"With such an addition as the main line of the Soo, Bemidji will have the advantage of any city in the state, except a few of the largest. One of the many industries she may hope to secure is a large sawmill to manufacture the Weyerhaeuser timber. It is pretty generally known that this company is waiting to see where the Soo Railway company will build, when they will locate to haul the wheat next fall.

As Bemidji is the only point readily accessible by the other railroads, the company has stated that this city will be their headquarters for their construction work through this country. This will mean that many thousands of dollars will be left here by the employes during the construction.

Adams Presbytery.

The Presbytery of Adams, which includes the Presbyterian churches of the nine northwest counties of the state, met in this city Tuesday and Wednesday. Ministers and elders came from different parts of the district to report on work and to plan together for advance. Rev. H. W. George, of East Grand Forks, was chosen Moderator. Two new men present were Rev. R. S. Sidebothan, of Warroad, and Rev. H. A. Noyes, of Stephen, and arrangements were made for the installation of the former as pastor.

Reports of the work, especially as to offerings to Benevolences were favorable. Among those present were Rev. R. T. Adams, D. D., of Minneapolis, one of the best known and honored men of the state.

Public meetings were held Tuesday evening with and addressed by Rev. Grant Stroh, of Warren, and Wednesday by Rev. R. D. Sidebothan and Rev. H. W. George.

The following resolution on the death of Gov. Johnson was passed:

"The Presbytery of Adams' meeting at Thief River Falls on the day of the death of Governor John A. Johnson, a member of the Presbyterian church, desires

1st. To express and record the profound sorrow of its members and that of the citizenship which we represent, over the great loss to our state and to the cause of good government.

2nd. To voice our sincere sympathy with his faithful life companion.

3rd. To call all our membership to faithfull prayer for all who occupy positions of great responsibility in the government of our state."

Raise the Price of Pork.

Owing to the scarcity of pork the butchers of this city will on Saturday, Sept. 25, raise the price of pork as follows: Roasts, 18 cents per pound; steaks and chops, 20 cents per pound; pork sausage 12½ cents per pound.

Also commencing on the first of October, no order for delivery will be taken after 11 o'clock a. m. for noon delivery, or after 5 o'clock p. m. for evening delivery.

The ladies of the Presbyterian church will give a Harvest Home supper in the Dobner Meehan building on Thursday evening, Sept. 30. Supper will be ready at 6:00 p. m., and will include the following bill of fare: Chicken, lemon, apple and pumpkin pie, brown bread, rolls, cold meats, pickles, salads, cheese, jellies, cake and doughnuts and coffee. HOSPITAL FOR THE CITY

Matter of Building a Hospital Discussed at Meeting Held Monday Evening.

A Majority Seemed to Be In Favor of Having the City Build It.

A meeting called by Mayor T. P. Hamre was held in the Antlers Club rooms Monday evening to discuss the proposition of a hospital for Thief River Falls. It seemed to be the unanimous opinion of all that a hospital was greatly needed in Thief River Falls, but there was some division as to how this money should be raised. The majority seemed to think that the only way in which such a building could be erected was by an issue of bonds by the city, while others were of the opinion that the funds should be raised by private subscription. The impression has gained considerable headway that the city is not in a position to issue bonds, having reached the legal limit, but this is not true and if the voters so desire the required money for a first class hospital, it can be raised by a bond issue.

If a hospital is built by the city, it is the intention of leasing it to some church or charitable organization and have it run under rules laid down by the city council. It is thought that it could be rented for a sufficient sum to pay interest upon the cost of the investment, although it would not be the intention of the city to make any profit.

At the meeting of the city council held on Tuesday evening, the resolution allowing the voters to vote upon the question of issuing bonds for a city hospital at the November election was defeated. Ramstad and Evenson voted in favor of the resolution and Forder, Hoag and Alexander against it. This means that if a hospital is now built the funds will have to be raised by private subscription and it is almost impossible to do this.

"Nordlandslaget" which was organized two years ago, decided at its last meeting, held in Minneapolis June 21-26 to give to Norway a life saving boat, to cost about Kr. 13000.

Subscription lists have been to all places in America where Norwegians live urging all, and especially those born in the Northern part of that country to come with their aid and their help in this great and noble cause.

Some of us know by experience that many lives are lost in Norway every year and we also know what it means to have a life saving boat plying the northern coast of Norway during the fishing seasons rescuing lives that otherwise lost.

re Johnson, of Thief River Falls, en appointed solicitor for this dis ut in order to reach those living the country, the list has been left hands of Bernhard Knudson, etor of Hotel Central, and he will more in detail, all about the life boat.

Not What He Expected.

A doctor in a Yorkshire village lately gave up his house and was succeeded in it by a veterinary surgeon. Before he had been many weeks in his new home the "vet" was awakened in the early hours of a rather bleak spring morning. Opening the window, he heard a voice call out of the darkness:

"Can you come with me at once, mister? She's very bad."

The surgeon dressed and found a trap waiting to take him to a farm two or three miles away from the village. On the way he asked a few questions about the case he was to attend.

"I'm afraid there's very little hope for her," said the farmer. "She's been ailing now, you see, for ten years, and she's getting pretty old as well."

Annoyed at being called out at such an hour to see an obviously not very valuable animal, the veterinary surgeon exclaimed, "Why on earth don't you shoot her?"

"What!" exclaimed the farmer. "Shoot my mother!"

Then the "vet" understood that it was the previous tenant who was wanted. —London Tit-Bits.

Work Day on a Mississippi Plantation.

The day begins on a plantation when it is yet night. The big bell rings between 4 and 5 o'clock for the "hands" to go to the fields. Mammy starts her small sable assistants around at the "big house" with early coffee about it. Without this tiny cup of cafe noir your true creole gets up on the wrong side of the bed. He has no appetite for breakfast after a ride through the fields and still less for his generous noonday dinner. Supper is served at night, and the dishes are typically southern—the corn and batter breads, fried chickens and waffles and fig preserves, with "sillabub," that moonbeam mixture that makes modern ices and confections heavy by comparison, for dessert. Life on a plantation is not dull. There are visits to town and a constant stream of visitors from town. There are "sugar house" parties and hog killings, Christmas doings and Thanksgiving dinners, to say nothing of house parties and hunts.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

The Herring.

A peculiar feature in the herring trade is that an exceptionally large catch during one season has no effect whatever upon the next year's supply; also, large as is man's consumption of herrings, naturalists say the number killed by fishermen is quite insignificant as compared with the quantity destroyed every year by sharks, porpoises, cod, dogfish, ling and other fish, each of which must have its daily meal of from one to two score herrings, to say nothing of the sea birds, which practically live on surface feeding fishes. Herrings are not at all a modern article of diet. A vast commerce in them was carried on in northern Europe all through the dark and middle ages. The herring's chief food consists of minute organisms, which it strains from the water by its gills, but it also eats worms and at certain seasons its own young, sprats and sand eels.—Pearson's Weekly.

Rule of the Corset.

A Boomerang.

An amusing incident occurred when the house of lords was in committee on the reform bill of 1867. The clerk of the house intimated that an amendment had been handed in, the writing of which was so illegible that he was unable to say what it was about or who had written it. It was then discovered that Lord Lyttleton was the author, and it turned out to be a proposal disfranchising all persons who could not write.—Westminster Gazette.

Out of Place.

A sentry, an Irishman, was on post duty for the first time at night, when the officer of the day approached. He called, "Who comes there?"

"Officer of the day," was the reply.

"Then, what are yez doin' out at night?" asked the sentry.—London Telegraph.

Demeanor Analyzed.

"Your chauffeur seems very respectful," said the guest.

"That air of deferential solicitude," replied Mr. Chuggins, "is not respect. It is sympathy."—Washington Star.

Persian Cities.

Teheran, Persia's capital, is one of the least interesting cities of that ancient land. The houses are mean, the streets narrow and dirty, and even the palace of the shah is far from being a thing of beauty. It has no history worth mentioning and is only redeemed by the birth of Haroun-al-Raschid in a neighboring village. Its importance comes from the presence of the court, but it undergoes a sad decadence in summer, when the unhealthful climate drives the greater part of the population to more sanitary places.

Ispahan, the former capital of Persia, is far different. That city was once girdled by a wall of twenty-four miles, and Shah Abbas in the sixteenth century loaded it with magnificence. It contains splendid mosques and ancient palaces which appeal to the imagination. But Ispahan, too, has fallen upon evil days.

"Houses, bazaars, mosques, palaces, whole streets," writes a traveler of a few years ago, "are to be seen in total abandonment, and one may ride for miles without meeting with a single living creature except perhaps a solitary jackal looking over a mall or a fox running to his hole."

The Smithy Settled It.

One of the candidates at an English election was announced to address a meeting in a Yorkshire village well known to horse dealers and breeders as the center of a district noted for its hackneys and roadsters. The candidate was an eloquent speaker, but for some reason or other he failed to make any great impression on the horse loving farmers. However, the local blacksmith came to the rescue by summing up the respective merits of the rival candidates in the following laconic little speech:

"Friends, this feller"—the candidate—"rides a 'oss. T'other feller rides a mortycar. You breeds 'osses, an' I shoes 'em, so wot is theer to argy about?"

In such a district and before such an audience the brief, businesslike speech of the blacksmith was not without effect, for it touched the pockets as well as the hearts of those present.—London Mail.

Poison In the Middle Ages.

In the middle ages so little was known of toxicology that all sudden and mysterious deaths were attributed to poison, but in the light of modern knowledge many of these, says the British Medical Journal, are now easily explained by such diseases as appendicitis and gastric ulcer. Even the Borgias can be absolved from many of the poisonings laid to their charge. Nevertheless from early times in Italy poison was a favorite means of "removing" an enemy. In England, France and Germany cruder methods of vengeance prevailed, and it was not until the sixteenth century that the Medici introduced poisoning into France. The fashion spread with terrible rapidity, and poison was employed in every rank of society to get rid of inconvenient persons. The art introduced into France by Catherine de' Medici and her followers took root so deeply as to blossom later into the black magic of Louis XIV.'s reign.

Monuments to Wellington.

Has any British national hero more monuments to his fame in London than Wellington? There is the Achilles statue by Westmacott in Hyde park, cast from cannons taken at Salamanca, Vittoria, Toulouse and Waterloo, at a cost of £10,000, defrayed by "the women of England." The equestrian statue by Boehm at Hyde park corner is the second equestrian statue erected in that locality. The former one, by Wyatt, costing some £30,000, was removed to Aldershot when the arch which it crowned was moved. Then there is the colossal equestrian statue by Chantrey at the west front of the Royal Exchange, the monument by Bell in the Guildhall, the monument by Stevens in St. Paul's, which was over twenty years in hand, and a stone statue by Milnes, erected in the Tower of London near the Waterloo barracks.—London Chronicle.

Flower Gardens of the Sea.

The sea has its flower gardens, but the blooms are not on plants as they are on the land. It is the animals of the sea that make the gardens, the corals of the tropical waters particularly making a display of floral beauty that fairly rivals the gorgeous coloring and delicate grace presented by land flowers. So closely do they resemble plant blooms that it is hard to believe that they are wholly animal in organization. A naturalist says that among the coral gardens there are fishes of curious forms and flashing colors darting about, just as the birds and butterflies dart about plant gardens on land.

Not Much to Make Up.

"Fo' goodness' sake," impatiently exclaimed Mr. Coonley during the poker game, "speak up lively an' say what yo' am a-gwine to do, Mose! Why, it don't take me mo' den two seconds to make up mah mind."

"If it did," replied the player addressed, very deliberately, "you'd suttainly be losin'!"—New York Sun.

A Mean Critic.

"A sunset makes your mouth water?"

"Oh, it is a sunset, is it? I thought it was a fried egg!"

Fire is not extinguished by fire.—Italian Proverb.

Matching the Braid.

After ten years he returned, footsore and weary. His wife met him at the door.

"I thought you were dead," she told him.

"You should have known better than that," he said. "Do you remember that last piece of net I tried to match for you? You scolded because there was a difference of an eighth of an inch in the width of the folds, and I vowed that I would never again return from matching anything for you until I had found the exact thing you wanted."

He handed her a package.

"Here is that old rose binding braid that you told me to buy. I found it last Monday in Billings, Mont. I have looked for it in thirty-seven states."

She tore off the wrappings.

"It is a little too dark," she said.

"But the sample has faded some in ten years," he reminded her.

"It is a little too heavy besides."

"But handling by thousands of clerks has worn the sample away some. It was heavier when I started out."

"I suppose I can make it do," she said.—Newark News.

Her Dime.

Somebody had given the east side woman a bad dime. It was composed largely of lead. She tried to pass it at several places, but they are wary for some reason or other on the east side. They invariably ring a dime on the counter once or twice and bite it besides. When she got home with the dime it had several holes in it from the pressure of east side teeth. "It is more impossible than ever," she said.

The impecunious man called that evening. He had a dollar with him which was wholly intact—that is to say, it had not been broken.

"I am afraid they'll give me bad money for it," he said, upon taking his departure, "over here in these east side cars. Will you change it for me?"

"I shall be delighted," said she.

He called a week later with a grouch.

"You can't seem to get away from the bad money over here on your old east side," he complained. "Somebody or other stung me with an old lead dime that was full of holes."—New York Press.

Convincing the Waiter.

"I have learned how to make the foreign waiters in the restaurants where I eat think I have lived in Europe half a lifetime," said a woman who never dines at home. "I dawdle over my dinner twice as long as anybody else in the place. It requires no effort for me to do that. By nature I eat in the same leisurely manner that I do everything else. Most of my compatriots bolt their food. As a consequence the foreign waiters who are used to leisurely dining regard them with amazed horror.

"'Ah, those Americans!' they exclaim. 'Some day they choke. But as for madame'—meaning me—'well, madame is different. Madame nibbles, she sips, she lingers; therefore she is not as those of common American clay. It takes madame never less than two hours to eat her dinner. That marks her as one of the European elect.'"—New York Globe.

Some Odd Spelling.

Americans, says the London News, employ the word "Britisher," which they invented, in a contemptuous sense. It was a certain Philadelphia wit who is said to have asked his friends what a "Britisher" would mean to convey by the written word "ghoughphtheightteeau." He had to explain to them that, according to the genius of the English language, it meant "potato." Thus: Gh—p, as in "hiccough;" ough—o, as in "dough;" phth—t, as in "phthisis;" eigh—a, as in "neighbor;" tte—t, as in "gazette," and eau—o, as in "beau." This was at least as puzzling as the livery stable keeper's bill which contained the two lines—

Atacinonimomgin.

Nobody who does not "know the answer" has ever yet arrived at the solution, which is, in the vernacular of the creditor himself, "A 'oss 'alf a day" and "A-takin' on 'im 'ome ag'in."

Unappreciated Efforts.

Unselfish goodness is seldom appreciated in this world of ours. There was that man in the electric car, for instance. Having rung up three fares in his efforts to stop the car for the lady that sat on the opposite side, he tossed after her the umbrella that belonged to the little gray whiskered man on his right. Neither the gray whiskered man nor the conductor liked the thoughtful Samaritan for his altruistic efforts.—Boston Transcript.

There Are Better Seats.

"He is now, they say, on the very pinnacle of fame, and yet he isn't exactly in comfortable circumstances."

"That's not surprising. Did you ever sit on a pinnacle of any sort?"—Brooklyn Citizen.

The Better Way.

"Awfully rude of him to throw a kiss at me."

"Yes, my dear; those are things which always ought to be delivered in person."—Illustrated Bits.

What He Found.

"He went into the country to find solitude."

"Did he find it?"

"No; quite the opposite. He sat down on an ant hill."

He Beat the Baker.

His name was Johnny, and he was the idol of his mother's heart in spite of what the neighbors might say to his detriment.

"You'll get my bread today before returning to school, John," remarked his mother to the boy while he indulged in his midday meal.

"Yes, mother," answered he and shortly went forth to carry out his mother's wishes.

"A quartern of bread—yesterday's, please," murmured John sweetly as he tendered fivepence halfpenny in payment of the two loaves forthcoming.

"Bread has gone up, my boy, one halfpenny," remarked Mr. Dough as he held out his hand for the needful balance.

"When?" queried John thoughtfully as the prospect of a distasteful double journey flashed across his mind.

"This morning, my lad, if that is any consolation."

Johnny's face brightened visibly. "Yes, I think it is," he remarked spasmodically, "for it was yesterday's bread I ordered."

The baker concluded he had no claim.—London Telegraph.

The Candle Tree.

One of the wonders of the vegetable kingdom is undoubtedly the candle tree of Panama, known to botanists as Parmentiera cerifera. This tree produces from its stem and older branches a great profusion of yellowish, cylindrical, smooth fruits, twelve to eighteen inches long, which appear exactly like wax candles, as the botanical name implies. So close is this resemblance that travelers, seeing the tree for the first time, are liable to be temporarily puzzled as to whether the candles of shops are made in factories or grown on trees! The candle-like fruits are suspended from the branches and bare stem by short, slender stalks, dangling in the air, and readily give the impression of the chandler's shop. As night falls and the numerous fireflies move among the fruit this impression is intensified. The inexperienced traveler is not infrequently informed that the fireflies perform the duty of lighting up these "candles" at night when light is required by the denizens of the jungle.—London Strand.

A Lich Gate.

A lich gate is a shed, generally of oak, over the entrance of a churchyard, beneath which the bearers paused when bringing a body for interment. Here the clergyman met the body and read the introductory part of the burial service as he preceded the funeral train into the church. Examples of old lich gates are still to be seen in many country churchyards. In Wales they are more modern and are usually built of stone. Some of the old lich gates are formed with one wide door turning on a central pivot and self closing by means of a rude pulley wheel in the roof and a stone weight inclosed in an iron frame, a primitive but effective piece of machinery. In Herefordshire they are also called "scallage" or "scallenge" gates. "Lich gate" is derived from the Anglo-Saxon lich, a corpse; hence the north country "lyke wake."—London Answers.

Hypnotic Power In Animals.

An interesting instance of the hypnotic power possessed by a good many animals is given by a correspondent of the Glasgow Herald. One morning outside Elgin a blackbird was observed to be standing by the roadside, paying no heed to the footsteps of the passerby. It was gazing fixedly at four young weasels under the hedge, which were approaching in a semicircle, apparently to surround it. Just then a warning cry was heard from behind, uttered presumably by the parent weasel, and the young ones disappeared in the hedge. The bird still remained powerless and immovable, and only after repeated urging did it fly to a tree near by, when it gave forth a weak, frightened sound, as though still under the influence of the terror which had arrested its faculties.

A Mild Hint.

Two guests came to spend the evening and didn't know when to depart. The host and hostess were patient with them, very patient, but when 11, 12 and finally 1 o'clock struck the husband realized that something must be done. He was an original chap, and in his droll way he looked over at his wife and said mildly:

"My dear, hadn't we better get up to bed? Our friends may want to be going."

The Separation.

"I understand that she is separated from her husband."

"Yes."

"Oh, tell me all about it. What did she do?"

"Nothing. He died."

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

It is Governor Eberhardt now.

Without doubt there will be plenty of candidates for the office of governor in this state next year, and it may end in a free for all fight.

The Seattle exposition has more than paid for itself and still has several weeks to run. This is likely to cause a general revival in the exposition business.

The charges on which the three Beltrami county commissioners were removed was over-drawing the road and bridge fund. The charges against the Red Lake county commissioners are far more serious.

The death of Gov. John A. Johnson is a very sad one. No man had a more promising future and it is quite likely that he would have been the next Democratic candidate for president of the United States with fair chances of success.

If the somewhat loosely organized Society of Equity should prove able to boost the price of wheat considerable this year, it is a question what would happen should the farmers manage to organize as closely as some of the labor unions. Would it mean a raise in the price of all agricultural products to such figures as to starve out the working classes in the cities?—Hendrum Review.

The Sunbeam blames County Attorney Wilhelm Michelet for allowing the commissioners to transfer the $35,000 from the ditch fund to the general fund. Mr. Michelet is in no way to blame. He was elected by the people of Red Lake county to give legal advice to the county officials, but it appears that these gentlemen prefer to hire Red Lake Falls attorneys to give them advice. They get the kind of advice that they want and it is going to make them some trouble.

[Too Late For Last Week.]

Germantown, Sept. 13, 1909.—Favorable weather for the comfortable existence of all species—humans, live stock and flies—has prevailed for the last three weeks and everybody is happy and busy at the haying that was not done before harvest and stacking. Good warm weather has kept the grass in good condition and a large amount of hay will be made from now on. Grain crops are now all in stacks and indicate that this will be as good a year as any.

Hunting season is with us again and game is said to be quite plentiful throughout the country. City hunters have turned out en masse over the stretches to fill their empty bags and it is hoped that each and all may be learned enough in natural history to note the apparent difference between wild chickens and ducks and tame cows and farmers.

School commenced here Tuesday last week with Mrs. Annie J. Fallman of St. Hilaire as teacher. The first term of the year, four months, will be completed before Christmas.

A very unfortunate accident occured about four miles northwest of here a week ago Sunday, while forest Holton and his family were moving to Thief River Falls. While driving over a rough place on the road Mrs. Holten fell out of the wagon and was caught under the wheels resulting in a very badly broken leg. She was taken at once to the Thief River Falls hospital where it was found necessary to amputate the injured member near the knee.

John Halvorson Borve and family who have resided about four miles northeast of here for the past six years moved out last week to Thief River Falls from where they ship their horses and machinery to Alberta, Canada, with the intention of taking up land out there.

A lively chimney blaze at the hotel on Sunday morning of last week called for the prompt action of our fire brigade, who are credited with doing their duty to the letter and no damage was done.

Mrs. Olson of Alexandria, visited here last week with her daughter Mrs. J. H. Roller.

The meeting of the Farmer's Club at N. Bundhunds on Sept. 5th., was well attended by farmers from all directions, and all who came went away contented. The speakers, Bundhund, Philipp and Roller gave many good pointers on things pertaining to farming, of value to any real or would-be tiller of the soil.

And now that the North Pole has been discovered way up in the arctic regions, we are called on to abandon a little theory of our own, formulated during some trips to Mud Lake in times when Mother Earth was covered by its sheet of beautiful white, that the pole must have been located somewhere in that vicinity. As we didn't have the instruments known to science by which location can be determined, of course it would be useless to file a report; but our nose and toes did plainly indicate that the prized spot was not far distant, and we dreamed of some day putting Nansen, Abruzzi, Peary, Cook and the other arctic explorers into the background.

Today's rain will delay threshing for a few days. That work is expected to be on in earnest about the middle of this week.

OUR BABY'S BOOK

MOTHER LOVE watches and mentally records every step of her baby's physical and mental growth, but the human brain is not always the most infallible recorder of events. Lest the passing years efface these memories a mother should keep a written record of her baby's history.

BABY RECORD BOOK

A book for this purpose, beautifully designed and illustrated, and containing no advertising, is yours practically for the asking. This book is a creation of the Graphic Artists. In size it is 8x10 inches, bound in mode shade cloth, decorated in gold, and contains thirty-six pages of which seventeen are full page drawings in colors of child-life, by Verona Busby Dobbin, famous as an illustrator and particularly known for her studies of children. The other pages consist of forms covering events of importance from birth on through babyhood, in which may be entered dates, data and memoranda concerning this interesting period of development. This book is a model of the bookmaker's and artist's craft. It is impossible to explain its superior quality here; suffice to say that such a book would cost at least $2.00 at any bookstore.

A Trait That Brands Them as Unsociable and Abrupt.

What a complicated thing is the character of the Londoner! Out of pure shyness he becomes disagreeably abrupt; out of pure fear of intrusion he becomes unsociable. A number of unacquainted men in the same tramway car will never think of entering into conversation as they would anywhere else in the world. Silently they leave the car as they entered it. And yet it does not seem natural to me that they should not prefer to converse. But they are afraid to intrude; besides, they have not been "introduced."

"Proper" introduction is one of the characteristics of the Londoner. In Germany when a man enters a private room containing people he does not know or if he sits down at a table outside a restaurant—in fact, whenever he comes into touch with a stranger—he will make his bow and announce his name. He will introduce himself. Then both will chat like old acquaintances. But it is ten to one that neither of them caught the mumbled name of the other, nor did they care. To both of them their meeting has been an episode to be forgotten the very next second. And it not infrequently happens that a man will turn to some friend, asking: "Did you see me talk to that man? Who is he? He mentioned his name, but I did not quite catch it."

Now, in England to walk into a room where there is a private gathering and to go around from one to another introducing yourself would, as I see, be called bad manners. The Englishman wants to be introduced by a third person, and it seems that the third person will introduce the other two only if he thinks they would actually like to know each other. Then, however, the name is not only mumbled or mentioned, but grappled with. The two men at once impress that name upon their minds, associate the person with the name and forget neither the one nor the other. An introduction in London does not seem an episode to me to be over and done with the next second, but always the beginning of an actual friendship. And where friendship is not likely to ensue an introduction is left aside.—London Mail.

WOMEN IN TROUSERS.

Some Whose Work Compels Them to Dispense With Draperies.

The idea of a woman in trousers seems to be the most horrible that the modern civilized mind can conjure up, but there are parts of the world where women wear these garments as a matter of course, and the heavens have not yet fallen. They even contrive to look charming in them, too, as in one of the cantons of Switzerland, where the bifurcated garment is worn on dress occasions as well as for work. Not even at the altar are the trousers discarded. The bride wears white ones, with a white bodice and white flowers in her hair, and many a bride in a court train is less shy and sweet. In spite of their trousers, which are necessitated by the work they do in the fields, these women do not ride astride, but use a sidesaddle just like the woman who is trammeled by skirts.

The trousers of Switzerland are loose, baggy affairs, sometimes almost as cumbersome as skirts, but the peasant maids of the Austrian Tyrol wear short, close fitting small clothes, which cannot impede their movements in any way and which are not particularly becoming. The socks do not meet the trousers and the knee is left bare, like a highlander's. The upper part of the costume has some feminine touches, and over the trousers is a short drapery, which may be the remains of a skirt. These women work in the fields and stables and are compelled by their life to dispense with superfluous draperies.

French and Belgian fisherwomen wear trousers. They wade through the water, pushing their nets before them, and the heavy waves would soon sweep them off their feet if they wore skirts. Even without them they are obliged to go out in little parties for mutual protection.

In China, where they do most things differently from the rest of the world, the women wear trousers and the men do not disdain skirts. The women also smoke. In Turkey, before Paris fashions invaded the harem, trousers were worn by the women, while the cigarette is an indispensable part of their lives.—New York Tribune.

George IV.'s Hoardings.

One of the most inveterate hoarders on record was George IV. Not only was he averse to destroying books and papers, but he preserved everything that could possibly be kept. When he died all the suits of clothes he had worn for twenty years were discovered and sold by public auction. His executors also found secreted in various desks, drawers and cupboards numerous purses and pocketbooks crammed full of money to the extent, it is said, of £20,000, together with more sentimental treasures in the form of locks of hair from the tresses of forgotten beauties of the court.—London Graphic.

Disappointment.

Head Waiter—What's the matter with that dyspeptic looking old chap over there at the fourth table?

Assistant—He's got a grouch. He was getting all ready to make a kick about that cantaloupe, and he found it was a good one."—Chicago Tribune.

Two Painters.

Highbrow (boastfully)—I get 20 cents a word for my stuff. I'm a word painter. Lowbrow (scornfully)—That's nothing. I get $2 a word for mine. I'm a sign painter.—Exchange.

CHEVY CHASE.

The Old Rodgers Mansion and the Famous Washington Club.

Doubtless few of the many thousands of persons who have read of Chevy Chase have any idea of the interesting history attached to the clubhouse and surroundings. Part of the old colonial structure as it stands today was erected in 1747 and from that time until a few years ago remained in the Rodgers family. In the war of 1812, when the British were advancing on Washington, the army and navy records were taken from the White House and secreted in the cellar of the Rodgers mansion, where they were kept for several days.

The Rodgers family has been famous in the American navy, no fewer than seven having served as admirals. The estate consisted of something like 200 acres, and as the beautifying of the property was always a hobby of its owners it is not surprising that unusual taste should have been shown in laying it out. It is a fact that there are 105 varieties of trees and bushes to be found within a stone's throw of the clubhouse. Not far from the present fourth green there was once a sunken garden, but this is scarcely more than a memory now.

The Chevy Chase club took possession in 1883 and at first rented the property from the Rodgers estate, but later the club purchased 200 acres. Several horse shows have been conducted on the property, and some years back the regular old fashioned county fairs were popular there. The membership consists of persons prominent in Washington socially. It is only half an hour's ride from the treasury to the door of the clubhouse.—Exchange.

True Thrift.

"When visiting a certain town in the north of England," says a medical man, "I was told of an extraordinary incident wherein the main figure, an economical housewife, exhibited under trying circumstances a trait quite characteristic of her. It seems that she had by mistake taken a quantity of poison—mercurial poison—the antidote for which, as all should know, comprises the whites of eggs. When this antidote was being administered, the order for which the unfortunate lady had overheard, she managed to murmur, although almost unconscious: 'Mary, Mary! Save the yolks for the puddings!'"—London Tit-Bits.

Scientific.

"Mary Ellen, why is it you are always smashing your gold eyeglasses and the steel ones stick on your nose as though glued there?"

"Can't you guess why?"

"Not unless it's a sign that riches are fleeting and the poor you have always with you."

"Not at all. There is nothing allegorical about it. The reason is just scientific. It's my magnetic attraction, that's all."—New York Sun.

Used to Them.

The Plain One—And weren't you a bit nervous when he proposed to you? The Pretty One—Oh, dear, no! Proposals used to make me nervous, but not any more.—Exchange.

A Slander.

"I see that royal blood has been discovered in an old American family."

"Don't believe it. Some gossip is always making a slam at our old families."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Some men seem to think it is poor policy to go into a store and not know exactly what they want. We expect our customers to rely upon us to furnish them with the most approved styles and the correct patterns and fabrics.

If you are in need of either a suit or an overcoat, or both, and do not know exactly what you want—come to us, and we will show you not only what is correct from the point of style, but will show you a correct style which is becoming to you. We do not expect every man to know exactly what he should wear, because that is not his business. It is our business to know exactly what every man should wear, and to have it here when he wants it. This is the store of advanced ideas.

The man who knows little or nothing about values is the man who should know the man he deals with. We stand behind every garment we sell.

We offer you the best of everything to wear--honest values--and money back at any time you find them otherwise.

A Lesson In Physiology.

The school superintendent was in the habit of dropping in to the different class rooms and demanding a recital of lessons from the pupils. One day her active mind hit upon physiology as the study for examination.

It happened that the teacher did herself not like the study of the human anatomy and therefore had not drilled her scholars as she should have done. But the little girl to whom the first question was put, so bewildered the superintendent and made her lose her patience that there were no more questions of a similar nature asked.

"Tell me," said the superintendent, "what a skeleton is."

The little girl thought for a short time.

"A skeleton?" she asked. "A skeleton? Why, a skeleton is a man with his insides out and his outsides off."—New York Times.

Wanted Them Labeled.

There was a certain master of foxhounds in one of the English shires who was greatly angered by the awkwardness of one of the gentlemen who invariably rode over the hounds. At one of the meets the M. F. H. rode up to the awkward hunter and in the most chilling tones said, "Mr. So-and-so, there are two dogs in the pack today, Snap and Tatters, which I am especially fond of, and I would esteem it a favor if you would avoid killing or maiming them with your horse's hoofs." "Certainly, my dear fellow," replied Mr. So-and-so; "but, as I do not know them, will you be kind enough to put tags on them for me?"

MAN IN ISOLATION.

He Is of Little Consequence and Is a Barrier to Progress.

It is not an easy thing for a man to separate himself from the thought and activity and purpose of the community in which he lives and to pursue an isolated, disconnected and selfish part. He can't do it, indeed, and if he tries it he will only reduce himself to a cipher or stumbling block. The community will get on somehow, for it must, but if it has many members of this kind it will be dull, heavy and unprogressive.

Man in isolation is of little consequence, next to nothing. His association with others, the inspiration he receives from others, draw out his own powers. "The state," to this day, as Plato conceived it, remains "a product of mind." Out of the action and interaction of currents of mind, affected and even directed by variant views or opinions, comes the whole progress of man, of society, of the human race. We want what Burke described as "that action and counteraction which in the natural and political world, from the reciprocal struggle of discordant powers, draw out the harmony of the universe."

The most isolated man cannot separate himself from the situation he lives in. If such isolation were general or could be general it would be the negation of civilization.—Portland Oregonian.

SUBMARINE RIVERS.

Cold Water Currents Flowing Along the Deep Sea Bottom.

The bottom currents of seas and oceans, such as those which possibly bring amber to our shores, are strangely disposed. The seigneur of Sark some fifty years ago was shipwrecked in his yacht near the island of Guernsey. He lost, among other things, a well fastened, strongly made chest containing silver plate. It was found a year later in deep water off the coast of Norway and restored to him.

In the really deep sea over a thousand fathoms down there are well marked broad currents which may be described as rivers of very cold water (only 4 degrees or so above freezing point). They flow along the deep sea bottom and are sharply marked off from the warmer waters above and to the side. Their inhabitants are different from those of the warmer water. They are due to the melting of the polar ice, the cold water so formed sinking at once owing to its greater density below the warmer water of the surface currents.

These deep currents originate in both the arctic and antarctic regions.—Sir Ray Lankester in London Telegraph.

To Select Successors.

Bemidji, Minn., Sept. 20.—County Auditor Willmann has received the order of Governor Johnson removing from office A. W. Donaher, F. O. Sibley and Wes Wright, county commissioners of Beltrami county. He states that he will immediately call meetings of the different presidents of village councils and chairmen of the boards of supervisors for the purpose of selecting the successors, but that he has not yet fully decided what time to set for this meeting. In order to personally serve notice on each of the chairmen of town boards, it will be necessary in the Third district, for Sheriff Hazen to make trips into the Lake of the Woods country and also through swamps and bogs between Thief River Falls and Red Lake, and it would take at least two weeks to complete serving these notices; so that it is likely that the meetings will not be held inside of the next fifteen days.

TESTING THE TEACHER.

A Curious Old School Report Made in Boston in 1722.

In the town records of the city of Boston there is a curious passage which records how a schoolmaster was examined and what happened. The manner in which the visit of inspection is recorded makes one incline to the view that the unlucky schoolmaster may not have had fair play, although if he was really inefficient he may be said to have been judged by his peers.

In the record for the 22d of May, 1722, it is set forth that:

"Coll Pen Townsend, Jeremiah Allen Esqr, & John Edwards together with the Select men, Visitted the wrighting School at the Southerly End of Boston on Thirsday the 24th apil 1722, and Examined the Scholars under mr Ames Angers tuition as to their proficiency in Reading writing Scyphering & the masters ability of teaching & instructing youth his rules & methods therefore And are of Opinion That it will be no Service to the Town to Continue mr anger in that Employ."

Whereupon it was voted that the said Mr. Ames Anger should not continue master of the "Said South school."

It is true that nothing is said of the methods of spelling inculcated at the "wrighting School," and it is also possible that a clerk rather than the committee was responsible for the errors of the record, but there is certainly something absurd in the passage as it stands.—Exchange.

THE BLUE WHALE.

A Monster Skeleton That Is Eighty-seven Feet In Length.

What is claimed as the largest animal in the world is represented by a colossal skeleton in the museum of Christchurch, New Zealand, says the London Globe. This is the remains of a large specimen of the blue whale stranded on the coast of that country. This whale is probably the largest of all living animals. The length of the skeleton is eighty-seven feet, and the head alone is twenty-one feet. The weight of the bones is estimated at nine tons. This gigantic whale gets its name of blue whale from the dark bluish gray of its upper surface. The tinge of yellow on its lower part has led to the name "sulphur bottom," by which it is known on the western side of the Atlantic. It is otherwise known as Sibbald's rorqual (Balenoptera sibbaldii).

The chief food of this gigantic animal is a small marine crustacean (Thysanopoda inermis), known to the whales as "kril." Another species of the same shrimplike group has been obtained in thousands from the stomachs of mackerel caught on the Cornish coast. The nearly related opossum shrimps found in enormous numbers in the Greenland seas form the chief food of the common whale. Some of the thysanopodae are phosphorescent and contribute to the luminosity of the sea.

After the Show.

A well dressed man, said to be an Englishman, has been arrested in Montmartre, Paris, on a charge of tendering bad half sovereigns for dinners and entertainments, which reminds us of the story about the touring company which has been doing very bad business in "the smalls." While the proprietor and sole responsible manager was standing outside the temporary theater (the Corn Exchange) a very small boy with a very large melon arrived and proposed to barter the fruit for a seat in the gallery. The bargain was duly concluded, and the scene now changes to the interior of the theater after the performance. "Boy," says the manager severely, "that melon was rotten." "That's all right," returns the youthful critic; "so was yer show."—London Globe.

Difference In Time.

When it is noon at any given place it is similarly noon at all other points having the same longitudinal meridian, and the sun is in its zenith where meridian and equator intersect.

For business convenience every fifteen degrees of longitude evenly divided from Greenwich has the same time, being the distance that the earth travels in one hour. In the United States we have eastern, central, mountain and Pacific time. Thus when it is noon at New York it is 11 a. m. at Chicago, central time; 10 a. m. at Denver, mountain time, and 9 a. m. at San Francisco, Pacific time.—New York American.

As Represented.

Irate Stranger—Look here! I thought you told me that dog I bought from you had a good many fine points. He looks like he has been shot full of arrows.

Mountaineer Pete—Those be the fine points, stranger. He tackled a porcupine the day before you bought him.—Los Angeles Times.

One Foot In the Grave.

"You see that strapping, robust man? When I saw him last night he had one foot in the grave."

"Extraordinary! Who is he?"

"He is playing the gravedigger in 'Hamlet' at the local theater."

Inconsistent.

"He vowed he would love me always, no matter what happened."

"Well?"

"And got mad five minutes later because I had a pin in my belt."

The Part It Was.

Teacher—In this sentence, "The sick boy loves his medicine," what part of speech is "loves?" Small Boy—Please, ma'am, it's the part that ain't so.—Chicago News.

OLD ANNE ROYALL.

She Was Once One of the Quaint Characters of Washington.

Old, queer, sharp tongued Anne Royall, traveler, editress and interviewer, was for many years a familiar figure in the streets of Washington, trotting indomitably about her business, very poor, very persistent, often troublesome, often rebuffed, but with qualities of honesty and courage to be respected.

There is given in the story of her life by Sarah Harvey Porter a delightful glimpse of her visit to ex-President Madison and his wife. The contrast between the gracious mature beauty of charming Dolly Madison, elegant in her rustling black silk, and the funny little limping, shabby figure in antiquated skirts and ridiculous wadded bonnet, could scarcely have been enhanced.

As usual, old Anne Royall had tramped to save carriage hire; as usual, her errand, probably none too welcome to her hosts, was to secure an interview and use a descriptive background. But Dolly Madison saw in the absurd, inquisitive, bespattered person before her neither the reporter nor the guy—only an aged and weary woman who was her guest. She hurried to bring her a glass of water, then quite simply stooped and retied her loosened shoe laces and wiped the Virginia mud from the tired old feet.

It is small wonder that Mrs. Royall's clothes were queer. She was scarcely of a bent of mind frivolously to pursue the fashions had she had the time and money, but she had neither. Her paper, the Huntress, of which she was owner, editor and chief reporter, once published conspicuously on the editorial page a notice which is perhaps unique in journalism:

"No paper will be issued from this office this week. We really must take one week once in ten years to fix up our wardrobe, which is getting shabby. Our next issue will welcome congress."

WILD GEESE.

They Never Feed Without Throwing Out Scouts or Sentries.

Some of the common sayings concerning birds are stupidly wrong.

"You stupid goose!" is an expression constantly heard, yet the goose, whether wild or tame, is most sagacious. Wild geese, for instance, never feed without throwing out scouts or sentries. J. G. Millais describes how he saw a flock of geese feeding with sentries out and how after a time one of the sentries went up to a bird that was feeding and gave it a gentle peck on the back. The latter thereupon left its grazing and went off to take up guard, while the sentry took its turn to feed.

"Gentle as a dove" is such a common proverb that the dove has become the emblem of peace. Quite a mistake, for all the dove and pigeon tribe are great fighters, and in the breeding season the cock birds indulge in battles royal.

The foolish prejudice against all birds of prey includes that pretty little hawk the kestrel. Now, if the kestrel were known as the mouse falcon it is possible that keepers would not invariably shoot it on sight. The kestrel lives mainly on mice and wireworms. It is quite innocent of killing partridges.

In a game preserving district in southern Scotland kestrels were practically exterminated a few years ago. What was the result? Over a tract of country of 1,200 square miles field mice increased in such myriads that the grazing was absolutely ruined. One sheep farmer lost $8,000 in one year.—Exchange.

The Wheel Problem.

Which, at any given moment, is moving forward faster—the top of a coach wheel or the bottom?

The answer to this question seems simple enough, but probably nine persons out of ten, asked at random, would give the wrong reply. It would appear at first sight that the top and bottom must be moving at the same rate—that is, the speed of the carriage. But by a little thought it will be discovered that the bottom of the wheel is in fact, by the direction of its motion around its axis, moving backward, in an opposite direction to that which the carriage is advancing and is consequently stationary in space, while the point on top of the wheel is moving forward with the double velocity of its own motion around the axis and the speed at which the carriage moves.

The Whistle Tankard.

A rare form of drinking vessel is in the possession of the corporation of Hull. This is a whistle tankard which belonged to Anthony Lambert, mayor of Hull in 1669. This fine specimen of old English silverware is fitted with a whistle, which comes into play when the tankard is empty and is evidently meant to be used as a signal for more liquor. It is said that only one other whistle tankard is to be found in England, so temperate is England now!—London Chronicle.

A Good Alarm Clock.

Husband—Why don't you have the cook shut the kitchen door? One can smell the breakfast cooking all over the house. Wife—We leave it open on purpose. The smell is all that gets the family up.—Judge.

No Terminal Facilities.

PROMPT JUSTICE.

The Magistrate Was Firm and Tried to Be Genial.

In the "History of Beverly," Mass., the following anecdote is related of a good justice of the peace in the old colonial times. On a cold night in winter a traveler called at his house for lodging. The ready hospitality of the justice was about being displayed when the traveler unluckily uttered a word which his host considered profane.

Upon this he informed his guest that he was a magistrate, pointed out the nature of the offense and explained the necessity of its being expiated by sitting an hour in the stocks.

Remonstrance was unavailing, for custom at that time allowed the magistrate to convict and punish at once, and in this case he acted as accuser, witness, jury, judge and sheriff, all in one.

Cold as it was, our worthy justice, aided by his son, conducted the traveler to the place of punishment, an open place near the meeting house where the stocks were placed. Here the traveler was confined in the usual manner, the benevolent executor of the law remaining with him to beguile the time of its tedium by edifying conversation.

At the expiration of the hour he was reconducted to the house and hospitably entertained till the next morning, when the traveler departed with, let us hope, a determination to consider his words more carefully before giving them utterance in the hearing of a conscientious magistrate.

JAPAN'S PAGODAS.

They Are Built to Resist the Shock of an Earthquake.

A remarkable fact in Japan is that pagodas built hundreds of years ago embody the principle of the modern seismograph, which is to minimize the effect of earthquake motion by the combination of an inverted pendulum with an ordinary pendulum, or, in other words, by the union of a stable and an unstable structure to produce a neutral stability, which renders the whole building least sensible to earthquake shock.

In the hollow well of every five storied pagoda a heavy mass of timber is suspended freely, like an exaggerated tongue, from the top right to the ground, but not in contact with it, and at the shock of an earthquake this large pendulum slowly swings and the structure sways and then settles back safely upon its base.

This is also the principle followed in the construction of all bell towers throughout Japan, where the bell acts as pendulum, and the roof, supported by posts, forms an inverted pendulum, as in the seismograph.

When an earthquake occurs a pagoda or a bell tower may be rotated or displaced, but it cannot be overturned as a whole.—Wide World Magazine.

Peeling a Snake.

It is difficult to skin a dead snake, and the skin is often spoiled in the course of the operation, while, on the other hand, it is a simple matter to skin a live snake, and the skin thus gained is worth much more. Dead snakes bring from 2 to 5 cents, according to their size, and live ones from 25 cents to $1. One of the largest snake skin companies has factories in Sumatra. When a snake is received from a hunter it is seized adroitly by an operator, one hand squeezing the neck and the other holding the tail. It is then attached by the neck to the trunk of a palm tree, an assistant holding it by the tail. With the point of a knife the operator cuts the skin just below the head and, pulling with all his strength, peels it from the writhing reptile in the same way that a woman peels a pair of gloves from her hand.—Popular Mechanics.

Two Points of View.

"Good morning, Jones!"

"Good morning, Brown! Any news today?"

"Why, yes. You know my brother who works at the bank? Well, he went to business the other day and found £1,000 on the counter. And what do you think he did? Stole the money and tripped off to Canada. And when the news reached my father it broke the old man's heart."

"That's funny! You know, my brother works at a bank, too, and when he went to business the other morning he found £1,000. And what do you think he did?"

"What—stole it?"

"No; took it straight to the manager's office. And when the news reached my father, do you know, it broke the old man's heart!"—London Telegraph.

Streams of Light.

One night we were in a dense crowd watching a parade when during one of those unaccountable lulls which so often occur in large crowds a little fellow who was perched high up on his father's shoulder shouted: "Oh, papa, you ought to see! Way in the street they are just squirting light all over the people."—Delineator.

Education is a capital to a poor man and an interest to a rich man.—Horace Mann.

ATHLETIC TRAINING.

To Acquire an Excess of Muscle May Prove Injurious.

Nothing could be more elusive than the idea that by a period of athletic training a man can lay in a stock of health and strength upon which he can draw later while engaged in a sedentary occupation. The truth is that the big muscles and hypertrophied heart of the athlete are perilous possessions for the man who no longer has the time or the inclination for using them. When he stops the exercises by which he gained them, instead of simply returning to their original size they suffer one or another of the many forms of degeneration and become incapable of performing their original services.

It is not quite true that all exercise for its own sake is harmless, for it is well to be prepared for the meeting of life's little emergencies as well as its ordinary and daily demands, but it probably is true that, the emergencies apart, every man does enough in going about his customary business and pleasure to keep himself in the condition which that business and pleasure demand and that anything besides is superfluous or injurious. That athletics take one into the open air is less a commendation of athletics than an indictment of our houses, offices and stores for lack of adequate ventilation. If all the air we breathe was pure air we could get along well enough without any open air at all. Any man who has the muscle he needs for doing the things he wants to do and should do has all the muscle he ought to have. To acquire more is a silly waste of time and perilous besides.—New York Times.

FEET OF SEA BEASTS.

Their Appearance When the Skin Is Stripped Off.

Of all the feet that I have looked at I know only one more utterly ridiculous than the twisted flipper on which the sea lion props his great bulk in front, and that is the forked fly flap which extends from the hinder part of the same. How can it be worth any beast's while to carry such an absurd apparatus with it just for the sake of getting out into the air sometimes and pushing oneself about on the ice and being eaten by polar bears? The porpoise has discarded one pair, turned the other into decent fins and recovered a grace and power of motion in water, which is not equaled by the greyhound on land. Why have the seals hung back? I believe I know the secret. It is the baby! No one knows where the porpoise and the whale cradle their newborn infants—it is so difficult to pry into the domestic ways of these sea people—but evidently the seals cannot manage it, so they are forced to return to the land when the cares of maternity are on them.

I have called the feet of these sea beasts ridiculous things, and so they are as we see them. But strip off the skin, and, lo, there appears a plain foot, with its five digits, each of several joints, tipped with claws, nowise essentially different, in short, from that with which the toad or frog first set out in a past too distant for our infirm imagination. Admiration itself is paralyzed by a contrivance so simple, so transmutable and so sufficient for every need that time and change could bring.—Strand Magazine.

A Willing Scot.

Dean Ramsay has a story of that border hostility between English and Scots which used to go to halter lengths. A Scottish drover was returning from the south in particularly bad humor with the English, having done poor business, when he saw in Carlisle a notice offering a reward of £50 to any one who would volunteer for the unpopular task of hanging a condemned criminal. Seeing his chance to make up for his bad market and comforting himself with the thought that he was unknown there, he did the job and got his fee. As he was leaving he was taunted as a beggarly Scot, doing for money what no Englishman would. But he answered, with a cheerful grin, "I'll hang ye a' at the price."

Ways to an Untimely End.

The catalogue of the ways and means employed by otherwise sensible people to incur the risk of disease and an untimely end include running to catch trolley cars, breathing rapidly through the mouth instead of deeply through the nose, eating too hastily and overeating, "slouching" instead of standing and walking in an erect attitude, using unnecessary stimulants, failing to exterminate the pestilential housefly, which goes blithely about carrying the germs of disease; sleeping in ill ventilated rooms and failing to protect food from flies and other insects by proper screening.—Philadelphia Press.

Hard Luck.

Bob Footlite (actor)—Failure? I should think it was! The whole play was ruined. She—Gracious! How was that? Bob Footlite—Why, at the end of the last act a steam pipe burst and hissed me off the stage.

STOCKHOLM WOMEN THRIFTY

Several of Them Have Applied for Positions as Ticket Sellers and Collectors on the Street Cars and One Says She Would Like To Be a Cab Driver—"If a German Woman Can Do It, Why Not a Swedish Woman?"

SWEDEN.

The women of Stockholm are an enterprising lot. Several of them have applied for positions as ticket sellers and collectors on the street cars and there is one woman who says that she would like to be a cab driver. She says that when she visited Berlin lately she saw several women who were cab drivers and if a German woman can do it "why not a Swedish woman?" Another lady stated her case to a newspaper representative as follows: "I don't see why a woman could not sell and collect tickets and punch a hole in their corners as well as the men. I have applied for such a position and I believe that I would enjoy the work very much. Then just think what a pleasant sight it would be to see a woman collecting and punching tickets on a street car. Everybody would be interested in seeing a smiling face and a trim figure." It is possible that this young woman may get the position that she is looking for after the strike has been settled.

A dispatch states that the strike situation is calming down considerably and that there are no new developments. There is this significant fact, however, and that is that the railway passenger traffic is only about one-half of what it used to be and but little freight is moving. The losses sustained by the transportation companies is described as being something enormous. The Aftonblade asserts that the strikers are actually starving, and that many are subsisting on bread and water and fish caught in the archipelago. Again there are a number of men who are tramping about in the country robbing the potato fields. The situation is at all events far from satisfactory and there may be more trouble in store ere perfect peace can be restored.

The cabinet has decided not to submit to the courts the labor conflict which led to the strike. The Salvation Army states that the distress in the homes of the workingmen who are striking is terrible. Many laborers have pawned most of their belongings, and their families either have no food or get only one meager meal a day. They are also afraid that their landlords will eject them. The strikers dare not and can not turn to the poor department, but depend upon the Salvation Army, which is preventing an actual famine. According to government reports, 211,089 persons are striking, while the strike leaders claim that the number exceeds 300,000.

The Swedish consul in Tunis urges the Swedish government to establish direct steamship communication between Tunis and Sweden and thus secure a splendid market for Swedish export goods. Direct steamship lines are maintained with this country by Germany, Italy and Denmark. The way things are running now all Swedish export goods bound for Tunis must be reloaded in Hamburg, Germany. This causes much delay and other nations have a chance to get ahead of Sweden in sending their goods to that country. It is very possible that the government will act soon on the consul's suggestion.

The American-Scandinavian society, whose purport is to bring about closer relations between the people of Scandinavia and the Scandinavian-Americans, have sent three students, viz., the Swede, Harald Erbing, from Boras; the Norwegian, Haakon Thyri, from Christiania, and the Dane, Trodehjems from Copenhagen, to Pittsburg, Pa., where they will be students at the Carnegie Technical institute.

John Svanberg, the Swedish Marathon runner, arrived in Stockholm last month and was met at the Central depot by a large crowd of people and was given a most enthusiastic reception. On the evening of his arrival he was tendered a banquet and reception by the Stockholm Athletic club.

It has been practically impossible to hire any man to keep watch at the powder and dynamite storehouse in Soderhamn. As much as fifty cents an hour has been offered several men, but they point blank refuse to serve. In one way we certainly do not blame them.

The strike has also seriously affected the marriage market. But few persons have dared to take the important step during these troublesome times.

The Duchess of Sodermanland, accompanied by Price Lennart and Grand Duke Dimitri Pavloviaf, arrived from St. Petersburg last month.

NORWAY.

Dr. Frederick A. Cook was greeted Sept. 12 at Christiansand by a salute of seven guns from the fort by special order of King Haakon. Dr. Cook was the object of the greatest enthusiasm during his brief stop in Christiansand and was given a notable farewell when the Oscar II. sailed. He was welcomed aboard the Scandinavian liner by more than a thousand passengers who crowded the decks headed by Captains Moller and Hemple, with all the ship's officers in full uniform. The anchor was weighed immediately and the Oscar II. sailed down the fjord, with bands playing national airs, until the open sea was reached. The liner was gayly decorated and a splendid suite had been reserved for the distinguished American explorer, who, notwithstanding the experience he has gained recently in meeting crowds of enthusiasts, found some difficulty in making his way to his quarters. At lunch Dr. Cook joined freely in the conversation of the passengers, among whom was Benjamin F. Trueblood, president of the American Peace society. The explorer was compelled to relate further incidents of his polar trip. He told of a report current among Eskimos last year that a dirigible balloon had sailed over Greenland, and it was thought that Walter Wellman had made a start for the pole. The Eskimos, he said, described a cigar shaped balloon with comparative accuracy, but as nothing further has sice been ascertained about it, it was to be presumed that the Eskimos had been mistaken. During the afternoon Dr. Cook held a reception, which was attended by all the passengers.

The London tourist bureau sent a man to Norway not long ago to ascertain what prospects there would be for making the country a winter sporting resort. He reported that Norway offers fine winter sports for one or two months after the season expires in Switzerland. But the trouble is that there are such poor winter accommodations in the mountains that it would be very nearly impossible to take large parties from England to those regions in the winter season.

The discovery of the north pole, which is claimed by Cook and Peary, has set the scientific world thinking all over the country. Interesting statements have been forthcoming from both Nansen and Sverdrup, but they are characteristic because of their reserve. Nansen will not give out a conclusive interview until the return of Peary. He does not, however, seem to doubt the possibility of Cook having been there first.

The Grand Hotel in Christiania is goig to be rebuilt. The managers are having elaborate plans for improving the big hostelry under consideration and it is calculated that the work may be finished by next spring. A large new annex will be erected and the entire building will be submitted to a thorough renovation.

The industrial exposition at Fredrikshald was well attended and the exposition itself was from every viewpoint an excellent one. Fredrikshald has developed into a great industrial center during the past few years and the city is rapidly increasing in population.

The Norwegian socialist, Rev. Eriksen, advocates the sending of 50,000 crowns to the strikers in Sweden. This movement he said would forever seal the friendship between the laboring men of the two countries.

The Dagsposten of Trondhjem accuses Dr. Cook of appropriating the plans and the route for reaching the north pole devised by Captain Baumann of the last Fram expedition in 1906.

A peculiar disease has broken out among the crawfish in Hjalmaren and the rivers of that neighborhood. The pest threatens to destroy all the crawfish in that neighborhood.

Up in Storlien there have been strong frosts lately, which have done much damage to berries and vegetables.

DENMARK.

It is now stated that the direct cause of General Lutken's resignation as commander-in-chief of the Danish army was because of the fact that he and Minister Christensen could not agree. They were in daily disputes over the plan to improve Copenhagen's fortifications and could not agree whatever. Rather than remain in this delicate position, General Lutken tendered his resignation. The general was a popular officer and there are thousands who are sorry to know that he felt constrained to take this step.

A well-to-do and prominent business man in Copenhagen has recently been swindled out of 5,000 crowns by his bookkeeper, who succeeded in fooling his employer by making false entries in the books. The swindler politely resigned some time ago and left the country without causing the least suspicion. When the merchant came to examine the books the other day he found that the bookkeeper had succeeded in deluding him for more than a year.

In Falster is an old estate which has a quaint old residence on it which was at one time occupied by Peter the Great of Russia. The Russian government has been offered the first right to purchase it, but it was sold at auction the other day for 60,000 crowns. It was purchased by Attorney Frederick Graa.

Copenhagen will have a new post office, for the erection of which the rigsdag has made an appropriation of 2,253,000 crowns. It will be erected on the corner of Tivoli and Tietgens streets and will be one of the most imposing structures in the country.

General Jesperson Wahnsson, formerly minister of war, died a few ways ago after a short illness. He was for a number of years one of the country's leading political figures and made an excellent minister of war. He was born in 1827.

The folketinget are now busy discussing the fortification laws of the country. The government is planning to make a large appropriation for defenses this session and it is the one question which is now uppermost in the Danish mind.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

The wolf crop is good this fall. Bounties of $8,757 on 1,581 wolves have been approved for payment by the state auditor, covering a period of five months. The surprising number of claims from the well settled districts of Southern Minnesota has raised some question among the authorities whether "wolf farms" are again coming in vogue.

Officials of the Milwaukee road are seriously considering a plan to operate all Chicago to Pacific coast freight service via Hastings, thus cutting out Minneapolis, according to F. W. Root, attorney for the Milwaukee. It is also proposed to remove the big shops from the Mill City to Hastings. These shops pay $2,500,000 a year in salaries.

As a special representative of the Minnesota state fair J. J. Furlong of Austin, first vice president of the Minnesota State Agricultural society, has gone to the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition, where he will make an extended visit for the purpose of securing information of value to the board of managers of the state fair.

An increase of $30,000,000 in the assessments of the mining companies in the northern part of the state has been agreed upon by the state tax commission. This may be modified, however, as individual pieces of property may be raised or lowered or the whole thing may be changed.

George T. Somerville of Sleepy Eye, who several weeks ago was shot through the chest in his office, surprised some of his friends by appearing at the luncheon in honor of President Taft at St. Paul. This rapid recovery is one of the most remarkable ever heard of.

Charles E. French, husband of Anne Warner French, the well known St. Paul literary woman, was granted a divorce in Minneapolis on the ground of desertion. Mrs. French was not present, but was represented by counsel, who, however, entered no defense.

James J. Hill passed the seventy-first milestone on Sept. 16. The event was marked by the receipt of many congratulatory telegrams from all sections of the country, but outside of a quiet observance at his home in St. Paul there was no celebration.

The National Securities company of Minneapolis has been taken in charge by J. B. Galarneault, state superintendent of banks, at a request of a majority of the stockholders, who allege that the company has been running behind in its affairs.

An increase of about 4,000 in the school attendance in the state during the year ending July 31, 1909, over the previous year is shown by the reports from the county superintendents coming into the state superintendent's office.

For the first time in ten years Minnesota has passed through two successive weeks without a single case of smallpox being reported to the state board of health.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Hugo and Oscar Orth, living near Bertha, Todd county, were found dead on the railroad track at Aldrich Station, near Wadena. They had been working in Dakota and it is presumed that they took a fast train for home. The train did not stop at Aldrich Station and they attempted to jump off as the train was running at high speed.

Andrew MacAndrew of Cresco, Ia., was run down in the St. Paul road yards at Austin and was instantly killed. MacAndrew was in Austin on a matter of business and had strolled out into the yards. He did not hear the approach of the train from the rear until it was too late to get out of the way.

John A. Roman of Monticello was accidentally shot by Guy White while duck hunting and is in a critical condition. The hunters were in a boat and White reached for his gun, the trigger catching on the boat and the charge hitting Roman in the left side.

R. V. Cady, a construction lineman whose home is at Warren, Pa., fell off the blind baggage of a moving passenger train near Red Wing, rolled down an embankment, striking on his head, which resulted in instant death.

Marcus Lauritzen, banker of Tyler, this state, was injured during an automobile tour to attend the national bankers' convention at Chicago.

Clarence Nashold, who was knocked down in a runaway while leaving school at Fergus Falls, died as a result of his injuries.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Henry Schmidt, seventy-one years old, of Anoka was found dead by his son on Pomeroy lake, near Pomeroy. He started to row across the lake to his quarters. His son saw the boat drifting and went to investigate. Death was due to heart failure.

Franklin T. Parlin, Northwestern manager for the Germania Life Insurance company, with headquarters in St. Paul, is dead at his home in that city.

Le Roy R. Brooks, proprietor of the Brooks Press and editor of the Publicist, is dead at Minneapolis, aged twenty-eight.

John Sloan, well known in St. Paul when big gambling was in vogue, is dead, aged sixty.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

President Taft, in a speech at Boston, accepted the issue promulgated by Governor Johnson of Minnesota in his keynote speech at the Seattle exposition. Governor Johnson argued that the East has a predominating influence in the government and he called on the West to rise up and demand its rights. President Taft declares that the whole country is in the same boat. He stands for the obliteration of sectional lines.

In the most important utterance he has made since his occupancy of the White House President Taft, at Winona, Minn., in a state which is the hotbed of the "insurgent" movement within the Republican party, defended the Payne tariff bill as the best tariff measure ever passed by a Republican congress and hence the best tariff bill the people have ever known.

In his fair grounds speech at Milwaukee President Taft devoted almost his entire time to the subject of postal savings banks and aroused a quick response of applause when he declared that he stood firm for a redemption of the promise of the Republican platform for the establishment of such a system of banks.

Resolutions condemning in strong terms both guaranty deposit laws and the establishment of postal savings banks were adopted by the American Bankers' association at Chicago.

The public schools of the five boroughs of Greater New York opened with 60,000 children unable to gain admittance for the full courses.

THE DEATH RECORD.

John W. Castles, president of the Union Trust company of New York city, a director in other well known corporations and prominent in club and social life in that city and the South, cut his throat from ear to ear in the Grand Union hotel and was found dead stretched across a bed. He had been in ill health for some time.

Right Rev. William G. McCloskey, bishop of the Catholic diocese of Kentucky and the oldest Catholic bishop both in years and in point of continuous service, is dead at Louisville of ailments incident to old age. The bishop was in his eighty-sixth year.

Turlington Walker Harvey, one of Chicago's pioneer lumbermen and at one time the greatest retail lumber dealer in the world, is dead in a hospital at Littleton, N. H., of injuries caused by a fall six weeks ago while entering a ferryboat in Jersey City.

Mrs. Nelson Morris, widow of the Chicago packer, is dead at Saints Bleu, a small town near Paris, as a result of injuries received in an automobile accident. The machine in which Mrs. Morris was riding was overturned.

Mrs. Angeline E. Newman, widow of the late Bishop John P. Newman, is dead at Jerusalem, aged eighty. For several years she has been conducting a school for kindergarten missionary work there.

FOREIGN NEWS.

The fall maneuvers of the French army, in which 60,000 men are engaged, are attracting particular attention on account of the work of the dirigible balloon Republique, attached to the army of defense.

French exports to the United States, instead of diminishing, have increased rapidly under the new tariff. The total for the month of August shows an increase of 76 per cent over that of August, 1908.

The Irish land bill, which was introduced in parliament March 30 by Augustine Birrell, chief secretary of Ireland, passed through its final stage in the house of commons by a vote of 174 to 51.

UPHOLDS TAWNEY

President Scores Insurgents in Speech at Winona.

DEFENDS PAYNE TARIFF BILL

Calls It Best Measure of the Kind Ever Passed.

In the most important utterance he has made since his occupancy of the White House President Taft, in a speech at Winona, in a state which is the hotbed of the "insurgent" movement within the Republican party, defended the Payne tariff bill as the best tariff measure ever passed by a Republican congress and hence the best tariff bill the people have ever known.

The president boldly asserted that the insurgents who voted against the bill had abandoned the Republican party.

"Was it the duty of the member of congress who believed that the bill did not accomplish everything that it ought to accomplish, to vote against it?" asked the president.

"I am here to justify those who answer this question in the negative. I am not here to defend those who voted for the Payne bill, but to support them.

"All I have to say in respect to Mr. Tawney's action in voting for the bill and my action in signing it, is that I believed that the interests of the country, the interests of the party, required me to sacrifice the accomplishment of certain things in the revision of the tariff which I had hoped for in order to obtain party solidarity, which I believed more important than the reduction of rates in one or two schedules of the tariff."

GIVEN ONE MONTH TO QUIT

Saloons in Towns on Leech Lake Reservation Must Close.

Orders have been issued from Onigum, the Leech Lake Indian agency, giving thirty days' notice to proprietors to close all saloons in Cass county above township 138. This includes the towns of Walker, Cass Lake, Backus, Bena, Longville and Leech Lake Dam, with a total of twenty-three saloons. The notice to the saloon men was signed by William E. Johnson, chief special officer of the United States Indian service. Government detectives had been in Walker and Cass Lake for some days and a report was made to the department of Indian affairs at Washington that practically all saloons in that territory were selling to Indians and the order came back as stated above.

KILLS ONE OF THE ROBBERS

Old German Attacked in Box Car at River Junction.

Attacked in a box car, where he was dozing awaiting a freight to Chicago, an old German, fifty-two years old, shot and killed the largest robber, and fled to safety to the semaphore tower up the yards at River Junction, this state.

The dead man is identified as a member of a bandit gang operating for several weeks between St. Paul and La Crosse on harvester hands returning from the West. Both accomplices escaped and the old German, returning from the West, took a freight for Chicago before morning without leaving even his name.

KICK OF HORSE IS FATAL

Benton County Citizen Found Dead in Field.

Lars Erickson, an old and respected citizen of Maywood, Benton county, was found dead in a field he was clearing. He had been at work hauling logs with a team and was kicked in the head by one of the horses, causing instant death.

Erickson was sixty-three years of age and lived alone.

Victim of Infantile Paralysis.

Father George A. Arctander, pastor of St. Andrew's Catholic church at St. Paul, is dead of infantile paralysis. Some of his parishioners consider him a martyr to duty, since they believe that he contracted the disease attending to the spiritual wants of members of his congregation who had been stricken. Father Arctander was forty-one years of age.

Woman Killed by Auto.

Mrs. D. R. Thompson, aged fifty-three, wife of a merchant of Rockford, Minn., was run over and fatally injured in North Minneapolis by an automobile driven by Fred H. Camp of St. Paul, manager of Wonderland. Mrs. Thompson died three and one-half hours later at Asbury hospital. Death was due to a fracture of the skull.

Jurist Seeks a Divorce.

The announcement that Judge J. W. Finehout of St. Paul has filed suit for divorce will come as no less of a surprise to many people than will the further announcement that he has brought suit against his brother-in-law, William Rea of Forsyth, Mont., on the ground of alienation of his wife's affections.

GOVERNOR JOHNSON IS DEAD

Fails to Survive the Operation.

PASSES QUIETLY AWAY

End Comes Peacefully to Distinguished Patient.

DEVOTED WIFE AT BEDSIDE

Brightens Last Moments of Her Husband's Life.

Rochester, Minn., Sept. 21.—Governor John A. Johnson died at 3:25 o'clock this morning.

Life quietly slipped away and in its wake there remained but the sorrow of a great state, the infinite grief of a devoted and courageous wife and the thoughts of what greatness to which his career might have expanded had not it been so sadly brought to a close.

Until death came, he was quite conscious, his firm, resolute mind fully cognizant of the approaching end and meeting it with the clear equanimity which so characterized his active life.

As the shortening hours passed by, the governor remained tranquil despite the mental anguish which he must have endured. Knowing quite well that which he could not avert, he lay quietly in his bed, waiting.

With him during the last hours were Mrs. Johnson, Frank A. Day, Doctors Mayo, Dr. Charles F. McNevin, Miss Margaret Sullivan, Miss Jammie, head nurse of the hospital, and Miss Schiller, the governor's night nurse. All the hospital attaches were those who had guarded him as best they might since the operation nearly a week ago and who had ministered to him so vigilantly.

Through the evening and the early morning Mrs. Johnson remained tirelessly beside him, giving the solace which only she could give. She held his hand almost constantly, and at intervals bathed both of them with alhohol. Although none could ever know how she suffered, she cheered the governor when his spirits drooped lowest. Although her husband seemed quite which was gradually flooding over him and its import, Mrs. Johnson declined to allow the physicians to tell him the time had arrived when there was no hope. Steadfast at his bedside she stayed, repressing her own grief in order that she might ease the last moments for her husband.

When death touched the still figure, Dr. Will Mayo led Mrs. Johnson away to an adjoining room, where Miss Sullivan gave those comforts so needed to dull the widow's grief.

And so came the end to a state's governor, who was so deeply intrenched in the people's confidence, esteem and love.

Governor Johnson's trouble, which had its fatal termination Tuesday morning, began ten years ago. At that time he was operated on for appendicitis and the operation was not entirely successful. Two subsequent operations were performed, but both were unsuccessful in restoring him to his usual health and vigor. Finally the last operation was decided upon as the governor had been feeling poorly for several months. That Governor Johnson did not regard the operation as dangerous was evidenced when he declined to settle his personal affairs at the suggestion of his secretary, Frank A. Day.

After the governor had been operated on and examined an old abscess was found that had left a fistula in his abdomen that was removed as well as the hernia that was the primary cause of the operation. It is said that the operation was one of the most difficult ever performed by the Doctors Mayo, it requiring nearly three hours' time. The prolonged exposure and disturbance of the intestines caused unusual gas accumulations, which caused a distension of the abdomen, excruciating pains and sapped the vitality.

Mayor Eby Convicted.

Philadelphia, Sept. 21.—A. C. Eby, the mayor of Burkville, Va., who wrote to President McCrea of the Pennsylvania road that unless he was paid the sum of $45,000 he would blow up the property of the Norfolk and Western railroad, was convicted by a jury in the United States court here of using the mail to attempt blackmail. Sentence was deferred.

Marriages In Spain.

Though marriages in Spain are often arranged without the consent of the bride elect, law or custom gives the Spanish woman the power of appealing to a magistrate if she wishes to escape from a union which is distasteful to her, and the magistrate may take her from her father's house until she is of age and her own mistress, while if she determines to marry a man of whom her parents disapprove she may also place herself under the protection of the law, and she cannot be deprived of her share of the family estates. On reaching her majority she enjoys the same privileges as her brother with regard to property. She may inherit, will, buy and sell. But when she marries she again reverts to the position of a minor, and her husband has entire control of her possessions, which he can squander without rendering any account to her, though she cannot spend a penny of her own money without his consent. He may desert her and her children without incurring any punishment or much public condemnation. A Spanish lady confers on her husband the titles of nobility and any privilege connected therewith she may possess at the time of her marriage.—London Queen.

Early Prejudice Against Potatoes.

The way of the potato was said to have been barred by the prejudice that it was never mentioned in the Bible. In the Lothians it came in about 1740, the year of the famine, from Ireland, but was confined to gardens till about 1754, when it was planted in fields about Aberlady. By the close of the century it was a general article of diet. Ramsay says that George Henderson went about 1750 for a bag of potatoes to Kilsyth, where the Irish method of field culture had lately been tried, and introduced the potato into Mentieth; where a few had been known, but only in kale yards. The old folks, however, did not take kindly to the new food. Old George Bachop, one of the Ochtertyre tenants, when told by his wife that she had potatoes for supper said: "Tatties! Tatties! I never supped on them a' my days and winna the nicht. Gie them to the herd and get me sowens." It is significant that Burns, who sings the praises of kale and porridge and haggis, should have nothing to say of the potato.—Blackwood's Magazine.

A Convert.

An old Cambridge friend of mine who had a good deal of the wisdom of the serpent in him had a farmer in his parish in Norfolk whom he could not get to church. Whenever he pressed upon him his neglect or his bad example he was always met with the same excuse, "You be too young and do not know enough to teach such as I." At last he gave up the farmer in despair. But one day he happened to pass by the farm while his parishioner was engaged in killing a fine pig. My friend said: "What a pig!—Why, he weighs thirty-four stone!" "What dost thou know of pigs?" replied the farmer. "I only wish he weighed as much." When they next met the farmer, to his surprise, told my friend that the pig had been found to weigh just thirty-four stone. He added, much to my friend's gratification, "And thou wilt see me at church next Sunday, parson."—London Globe.

A Problem In Mathematics.

The town of Sturgis, in Mississippi, is the only round square town in existence. By legal enactment the circle has been squared, and the mathematician may now proceed to calculate the area of a square circle. In the laws of Mississippi for the year 1886, on page 682, is found the following:

"An act to incorporate the town of Sturgis, in Oktibbeha county, Mississippi.

"Section 1. Be it enacted by the legislature of the state of Mississippi that the town of Sturgis, in the county of Oktibbeha, is hereby incorporated and that the corporate limits of said town shall be as follows: Beginning at the quarter stake in front of Caleb Hannah's residence and running 600 yards in every direction, making said corporate limits 1,200 yards square."

Thus the circle is squared by the solemn declaration of the law.—Youth's Companion.

Turks and Animals.

In the matter of kindness to animals it is said that the Turk cannot be surpassed. Thus at Stamboul the wandering dogs are treated with great gentleness, and when puppies come into the world they are lodged with their mother at the side of the street in improvised kennels made out of old boxes lined with straw and bits of carpet. And frequently when a young Turk happens to be flush of money he goes to the nearest baker's shop and buys a quantity of bread, which he distributes among the dogs of the quarter, who testify their gratitude by jumping up at him with muddy paws and sniffing muzzles.

A Great Walker.

On July 12, 1809, the Newmarket bells rang a peal in honor of Captain Barclay's completed walk of a mile in each of 1,000 successive hours. In his first week of it he had averaged less than fifteen minutes for each mile and in the last week more than twenty-one, and his weight had gone down from thirteen stone four pounds to eleven stone. But on July 17 he joined the Walcheren expedition in perfect health as aid-de-camp to the Marquis of Huntly. Captain Barclay, who was a Barclay of Ury and unsuccessfully claimed three Scottish earldoms, had performed wonderful feats before the Newmarket walk. In 1801 he walked 110 miles in nineteen hours in a muddy park. In 1808 he rose one morning at 5, walked thirty miles grouse shooting, dined at 5 p. m., walked sixty miles to his house at Ury in eleven hours, did some business and walked sixteen miles to dance at a ball, walked home by 7 a. m. and spent the day partridge shooting—in all 130 miles without sleep for two nights and three days. At twenty he could lift half a ton.—St. James' Gazette.

Not Afraid.

Personal courage invests its owner with a protection beyond that afforded by outside forces. An illustration of this is recorded by General William F. Draper in his "Recollections of a Varied Career," where he gives this incident:

In 1864 Colonel Daniels of the Seventh Rhode Island became unpopular with some of his command, and a rumor spread that he would be shot at the next engagement. He heard of it. It was customary when guns had been loaded for some time to have them discharged into some convenient bank, and Colonel Daniels took advantage of this. Marching his regiment out with loaded rifles, he faced them toward a suitable elevation, and, taking position on the top of it and in front of them as at dress parade, he gave the commands, "Ready!" "Aim!" "Fire!" and the pieces were discharged.

Needless to say, any man could have shot him with little danger of discovery, and, needless to say, also, none of them did. There were no more threats of that kind in his regiment.

Europe's Dirtiest Town.

All travelers should shun Boryslaw, in Galicia—"the back of Europe"—truthfully called the dirtiest place in Europe. It is the oil trade center and is decidedly not beautiful. In the main street all the houses have been built on mine refuse, and most of them have sunk below the level of the street. In fact, there is not a solid brick or stone building in the whole of the town, and many of the houses are in a state of partial or entire collapse. Unrefined petroleum is everywhere. It gets into everything—food and clothing—and the atmosphere reeks of it. Along one side of the main street is a raised wooden pavement, and beneath it is an oily ditch. Boryslaw's main waterway is a narrow, sluggish, oily stream. On its banks the town's refuse is cast, and the market booths are erected alongside, while the local washerwomen—though from external appearances one would judge that laundresses did not exist there at all—do their washing in its oily depths.

Got Too Familiar.

A story told of Justice Brewer concerns a trip he made to his old home in Kansas, accompanied by Mrs. Brewer. In Washington a justice of the supreme court is spoken of as "Mr. Justice," and that is the title Mrs. Brewer always has heard. When they reached Chicago, however, the "Mr." was dropped and the jurist was referred to as "Justice Brewer." At Omaha some old friends called him "David J.," and when they crossed the Kansas line some former neighbors referred to him as "David."

"Let's go home," suggested Mrs. Brewer.

"Why?" asked the justice.

"Because, dear," Mrs. Brewer replied, "I am afraid if we go any farther they will be calling you 'Davie.'"

Cure For Disconsolate Lovers.

Somebody has dug out of an old book of the time of Queen Elizabeth the following advice to a slighted and despondent lover:

Tye one end of a rope righte over a beame
And make a slippe noose at the other extreame.
Just under the beame lett a bucket be sett;
On it lett the lovier most manfullie gett.
Right over his heade be left the snicket be gott
And under his eare well fastened the knott.
The buckett kicked cleare, lett him take a full swinge
And leave alle the reste of the worke to the stringe!

MONTAGUE HAS RESIGNED

Register of United States Land Office at Crookston Tenders His Resignation.

A. P. Toupin, of Red Lake Falls, It Is Said to Be Appointed Receiver.

Crookston Times: Judge Montague has tendered his resignation as receiver of the Crookston United States land office, to take effect in December, and A. P. Toupin will without doubt be named as his successor, as he has received the endorsement of Congressman Steenerson, who was the recipient of strong endorsements for Mr. Toupin from a number of leading residents of this vicinity.

Judge Montague has been contemplating resigning for some time past, as he desired to devote more attention to his law practice, which he had to neglect to a great extent because of his duties as receiver of the United States land office. He practiced law for so many years that he preferred devoting his entire attention to it again, as he enjoyed his work in that capacity more than the routine work as a land official.

Judge Montague has made a most capable official and the rulings of the local office have almost without exception been sustained by the department at Washington, when appealed.

Mr. Toupin is one of the very best known men in Red Lake county, having been a resident of Red Lake Falls for years, and is also well known here, where he has a host of friends who will congratulate him upon his good fortune. He is also a capable man and well posted along lines which will make his duties easy.

Minnesota Farmers' Institute Circular No. 15.

The first co-operative cow testing association was organized Jan. 23, 1885 in Denmark for the purpose of investigating and recording the feeding, as well as the milk and butter fat yields, of the individual cows in the herds.

This association has been so successful that today, instead of a few associations with a few cows, there are more than 450 associations with over 170,000 cows. The average yield per cow has been increased from 5,451 pounds of milk, averaging 3.3 per cent butterfat, to 7,776 pounds of milk, averaging 3.52 per cent butterfat.

Minnesota dairymen need not be ashamed to imitate in so good a cause. The average yield of the Minnesota cow is approximately 4,000 pounds milk and 156 pounds butter fat, while the writer has records of several cows whose milk yield for the past year was below 2,000 pounds and several that exceeded 7,000 pounds. If a dairyman wishes to improve the productiveness of his herd, there is only one way of doing it, provided they are properly fed and cared for, namely; to weed out poor producers and replace them with profitable ones. Such cows, however, are rarely found on the market, except at very high prices, and the average dairyman will find, that if he wants good cows, he must raise them himself. The most economical method he can adopt then is to purchase a sire of pronounced dairy qualities and raise the calves from his best cows and with them replace the cows that prove unprofitable.

But in order to do this, he must be able to tell the good cows from the poor ones. He must know three things about each individual. First, how much milk she will give in a year. Second, he must know the richness of the milk. Third, he must know how much it costs to keep the cow a year.

The simplest method of obtaining these facts is for a few farmers to organize and hire a competent man to do the testing. The expense to be paid prorata by each man in proportion to the number of cows he owns. It is desirable to have a sufficient number of cows in the association so that the expense will not exceed $1.00 to $1.50 per cow per year. The tester visits one herd a day. He arrives in the afternoon, sees the cows milked, weighs the milk and takes a sample from each cow. This is repeated next morning. He tests the milk from each cow and figures out the value of the butter fat and a suitable ration and leaves these with the farmer. This farmer then takes the tester and his outfit to the next farmer. He gets to each farm every month, so that the farmer has monthly records. At the end of the year the tester figures up the yield of milk and butter fat and the value of the same, the cost of feed to maintain a cow each year and the profit or loss on each individual in the herd, and furnishes every patron with this record.

One of the greatest values of testing cows for the first year at least is that it gives the facts needed to feed intelligently. Only when cows are in good condition and properly fed can they do work up to their full capacity. When they have been in good condition and well fed for a year, their records as shown by the test will enable one to cull out the unprofitable cows.

Karlstad Bank Robbers.

The two men brought to Hallock charged with the bank burglary at Karlstad were arraigned in justice court for preliminary hearing on Wednesday. The examination was continued to Oct. 1. In the mean time they will remain in jail.

The prisoners are undoubtebly bad men and have been in the clutches of the law before. They are non committal and seem to be well posted on criminal procedure. The older of the two is one of the men who were implicated in the Walhalla robbery two years ago. He was seen at Lancaster at that time but made his escape.

The authorities feel confident that they have the right parties. Before conviction can be had, however evidence must be produced connecting these men with the burglary. To this end County attorney Hedenberg and Sheriff Andersen are working to complete the chain of circumstantial evidence which it is confidently believed will fasten the guilt where it rightly belongs. The third man in the gang has been traced into Minneapolis and the detectives working on the case will nab him in time.—Karlstad Advocate.

TO IMPROVE RED LAKE

Congressman Steenerson to Go to Washington and Make Fight for Red Lake River.

Improvements on This Important River Should Be Continued Next Year.

On Monday, October 11, before the war department at Washington, Congressman Halvor Steenerson will make arguments for the improvement of the Red Lake river which is of such a vital importance to the settlers living on the eleven towns east of this city. As the keeping open of the Red Lake river for navigation is of great growing importance, the citizens of Thief River Falls, in conjunction with a number of enterprising farmers living up along the river, have made an exhaustive report to Congressman Steenerson covering the benefits and importance of continuing the improvements upon the river.

At his own personal expense, Congressman Steenerson has consented to make the trip to Washington at this time for the sole purpose of presenting these arguments which it is to be hoped will be successful.

At the present time there are three steamboats and nine gasoline boats that are caring for the traffic upon the river, but owing to the low stage of water this summer, the steamboats have been put out of commission and it has been almost impossible for the gasoline boats to run full time. There are a large number of farmers who depend entirely upon the river as a means of communication with Thief River Falls, and unless the improvements upon the river are made it will prove a great hardship to them.

Peter Eberhardt, who has built and operated boats on the river for the past twenty years, informed the committee that there is at all times sufficient water for navigation were it confined to a channel of reasonable width. The difficulty appears to be that in the more shallow places the river is too wide.

The territory on either side of the Red Lake river is only in the infancy of its development. A large portion of it is as fine grain growing land as there is in the Northwest. The people are of the better class of settlers, who were induced to purchase these lands adjacent to the river from the Government at a fair price, having in view the development of the river as a highway and a means of reaching market with their products.

There are three creameries, two directly on the river and one within a short distance, that depend entirely upon the river as a means of getting their product to the nearest market, Thief River Falls.

Hunt's Think Tank Working.

(From The Sunbeam.)

Our County Commissioners may think they done something smart when they voted that bridge money away from Thief River Falls, but they didn't. But we are of the opinion that instead of handing out a lemon, as they intended to do, that they did hand out one of the smoothest pieces of county division timber that we ever set eyes on.

In the last proceedings of our board of County Commissioners we note the following bills allowed:

F. A. Grady, to Prof. services and expenses in case of P. B. Gauss vs. Board of County Commissioners $205.50

F. A. Grady, to Prof. services and expenses in case of Martin V. Evenson vs. Co. Commissioners et al..................$155.50

It seems that Prof. Grady is an expensive Prof. according to the above bills, and these are only a small portion of the expenses of the county lawsuits that are taxed up to the taxpayers of this county to pay for this string of law suits that have been kept going for the past four years, and we challenge anyone to note one single change, where anyone is ahead or behind, except the tax payers who are way behind and the lawyers are way ahead.

Did you notice that Attorney Grady always has a 50 cent charge in his bill for Prof. services and expenses against the county? Did you ever wonder what that extra 50 cents was for? Why that's an easy question to answer! It is for the expenses of setting 'em up to the Commissioners.

Wheat Movement Now On.

The movement of wheat on the Soo line has been very heavy the past few weeks and a large number of extra train crews have been employed on the road. Last Thursday the largest train to be pulled by one engine was made up in the Thief River Falls yards. Eighty cars all loaded with wheat was pulled out of here by the engine known as the "big battleship." It was over a mile long and although it was a heavy load, fairly good time was made, as the Soo tracks don't run up hill.

Suit Commenced.

Dr. P. L. Vistaunet has commenced a suit against the city for $201 for services rendered as health officer from January 1, 1908, to March 19, 1908. The dispute arises from the fact that Dr. Vistaunet claims he was working on a fee basis while the members of the city council claim that he was to be paid a salary of $150 per year. Some time ago Dr. Vistaunet rendered a bill to the city council for this amount, but payment was refused upon the grounds above stated. F. A. Grady, of Red Lake Falls, is attorney for Dr. Vistaunet and City Attorney Halvorson will look after the city's interests.

H. W. Lee the former Thief River Falls attorney, is expected to arrive here the latter part of October to spend a few days.

The Ladies of the Presbyterian church will serve a harvest home supper in the Dobner-Meehan block tonight. Supper will be served from 5:30 to 8. Price 25 cents.

Mrs. Mary McGinty arrived in the city to visit her sons J. W. and Frank McGinty last week. She departed yesterday for Tioga, N. D. to visit a son there.

The long winter evenings will soon be here. A Victor phonograph will make them more cheerful. Get one now! A little down and a little each month. At the City Drug & Jewelry Store.

Dr. A. J. Klimek, the eye specialist, will be at the Ogahmah Hotel in Thief River Falls on Friday, Oct. 8. Consult him if you have eye troubles or need glasses. Examination free.

Sunday, the morning service at the Presbyterian church will be at the usual hour, 10:30, but the evening service will begin at 7:30 instead of 8 o'clock. This will be the regular hour for the winter months. The theme of the evening service will be "The Harvest Ended."

Ivor Th. Vallacher has opened up a tailor shop on Third street just west of the Soo Cafe. Mr. Vallacher is an experienced workman and guarantees to give satisfaction. He will also do cleaning and pressing of ladies' and gentlemen's suits on short notice and at reasonable prices.

Game Warden Munch was up from Crookston the first of the week and secured the conviction of Pat Murphy in Judge Bishop's court for violating the game laws. Pat could not resist the temptation of shooting a goose when he had a good opportunity, even if it was in August, and as a result it cost him $20 and costs.

The patrons of the moving picture shows in Thief River Falls have been taking a forced vacation the past week, caused by the removal into new quarters of both of these popular resorts. The Bijou will open tonight in the Masonic building, which has been recently fixed up into one of the finest little theatre buildings in the Northwest. On Saturday evening there will be no charge made for admission at the Bijou. The The Lyceum will be open next Monday evening.

Testifies After Four Years.

Carlisle Center, N. Y. G. B. Burhans writes: "About four years ago I wrote you that I had been entirely cured of kidney trouble by taking two bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy, and after four years I am again pleased to state that I have never had any return of those symptoms, and I am evidently cured." Foley's Kidney Remedy will do the same for you. A. Bjerkboel.

Married Last Evening.

Last evening at the German Evangelical Lutheran church occurred the marraige of Rev. Fred J. Seitz, the pastor of this church, to Miss Tillie Jonas. Rev. H. Burgel, of St. Thomas, N. D., performed the ceremony. After the ceremony the bride and groom departed for Minneapolis and will spend a month there and at points in Southern Minnesota before returning to Thief River Falls.

County Commisisoners.

A meeting of the board of county commissioners was held the first of the week to consider a number of ditch petitions that had been sent in from the Highlanding country. A large number of residents from that section of the country were in attendance. C. H. Martz was appointed engineer for the ditches, and he will commence the work of surveying at once.

SIR THOMAS WAS HERE

President of the Canadian Pacific and Soo Officials in the City This Week.

Messrs. Pennington and Huntington Much Pleased With Growth of This City.

E. Pennington, president of the Soo line, G. R. Huntington, general manager, and other Soo officials arrived in the city Monday evening at about 8 o'clock on a special train and remained here until Tuesday morning at 7:30, when they made the run up to Emerson, where they met Sir Thomas G. Shaughnessy, president of the Canadian Pacific road, and they returned to to this city at noon on Tuesday. After spending a short time here they proceeded to Minneapolis.

The visit of these notable railroad officials here was of much concern to the people of Thief River Falls, as this road has done so much for this city in the past and is expected to do far greater things in the future. Messrs. Pennington and Huntington took a walk through the business portion of the city and expressed themselves as very greatly pleased with the development this city has made in the past few years. They made no statement to further improvements that the Soo would make here, but it is a well known fact that next spring it is going to be necessary for the Soo to greatly enlarge its round house here, and their visit probably had to do with this.

The visit of Sir Thomas Shaughnessy is for the purpose of inspecting the line and make suggestions regarding the proposed improvements and new lines. The Canadian Pacific of which Sir Thomas is the president, is the owner of 51 per cent of the stock in the Soo line.

Supt. Michaels accompanied the party to Emerson and back to Thief River Falls.

School Notes.

During the tolling of the city bells on Thursday last, all the school children stood at attention. Immediately following the five minute period of silence, appropriate remarks on the late Governor Johnson and the lessons to be drawn therefrom were addressed the pupils by their teachers. The board of education accompanied by a few other citizens attended the exercises held at the high school assembly room, where short addresses were delivered by Attorney Halvorson, W. B. Fuller and Attorney Miller of Crookston.

Seven more pupils have enrolled in the high school this week.

Thirty three eight grade girls received their first lessons in elementary cooking Tuesday morning of this week, and on Wednesday morning twenty girls from the seventh grades made a formal start in a years course of sewing. These students report at the high school building on the mornings assigned them and receive their instruction from Miss Stubbings in the domestic science room.

An interesting circular issued this week by State Superintendent Schulz calls attention to the importance of the normal training departments in the high schools, and urges the attendance thereon of all who propose teaching in the rural schools. The number of these departments in the state has been increased from eleven to twenty six this year and over fifty boards made application for the prifilege of establishing them in their high schools. Crookston, McIntosh and Thief River Falls are the only three towns allowed to maintain normals in the northwestern section of the state.

The foot ball team plays Crookston next Saturday, East Grand Forks the Saturday following and Red Lake Falls on October 16. These two games will be played away from home. Every game played on the home grounds last season created a dificit in the high school athletic treasury, which the boys could ill afford to carry. It is a matter of regret that a home contest has in the past failed to draw a good crowd, while all neighboring towns succeed in securing a good attendance at their games. The fastest and most brilliant football contest ever played in this part of the state occurred on the home grounds last fall in which the East Grand Forks team was defeated by a score of 18 to 0, their second defeat in four years, but this failed to produce even a flutter of excitement among our blase citizenship. Good, clean high school athletics deserve better support and every person in the city claiming any relationship with the red blooded races ought to be present Saturday and help cheer Thief River Falls on to victory.

So far as can be learned, all of the normal students of last year's class are teaching or are engaged to teach.

The presence of some forms of vegetable life in the soil seems to be a poison to others. For instance, cockleburs in a piece of soil have been found to be very detrimental to a growth of red clover.

The largest apple of which there is authentic record was a specimen of the Wolf river variety exhibited at the national apple show at Spokane last December, which measured seventeen and one-half inches in circumference. It need not be added that it was just as poor in quality as it was large.

The safest as well as most effective method for the disposal of the carcasses of animals that have died of disease is to burn them completely. This may take a bit more time, but it will keep dogs or other scavengers from uncovering and scattering the remains about as a fruitful source of contagion.

According to a London paper, the grouse moors of Scotland yield a revenue in rentals of from $1,000 to $2,500 annually. The practice of letting the moors seems to have started in 1805, when $25 was received for one near Pitlochry, but for twenty or more years after this the revenues amounted to little or nothing.

Recent inspection of a great many fields of tilled crops—corn, potatoes, etc.—seems to indicate without exception that the poorest crops are to be found on the fields which have been given least cultivation and bear the largest and rankest crop of weeds. There's a vital connection here that a good many tillers of the soil ought to be waking up to.

A farsighted landlord we once knew used to hurry up the fall plowing by offering his tenant a premium of so much per acre for all of the plow land that was turned under before the 1st of September. Under this plan the tenant was forehanded, while a whole lot of weeds were kept from seeding and fouling the land for the following year. The plan is one that many another owner might follow with profit.

While an overfeeding of immature corn may not be the direct cause of hog cholera or swine plague, as it is commonly known, it undoubtedly does cause a disordered condition of the system, which makes it easy for disease of any kind to get a hold. Corn is likely to be cheaper and hence more generously fed than last year, and naturally the danger from the source mentioned will be correspondingly increased.

The annual meeting of the National Horticultural society will be held at Council Bluffs, Ia., Nov. 15 to 20. Forty-two states, Canada and Mexico will exhibit their varied horticultural products. Prizes aggregating $35,000 will be awarded in a great many different classes. It is the aim of the directors of the association to make the congress instructive and entertaining to the greatest degree possible. Any desiring to enter vegetables, nuts, fruits or flowers should address the superintendent, F. L. Reed, Council Bluffs, Ia.

Some private and co-operative creameries in Illinois and other dairy states are following a plan which does much to encourage patrons to increase the size of their dairy herds. The plan consists in helping the patron to select good cows and in lending him money with which to buy other cows. One-half of the amount of his subsequent milk checks is withheld until the cows bought are paid for. This plan not only gives the farmer of small means a lift, but is a direct benefit to the creamery whose volume of business is thereby increased. Within reasonable limits this plan would seem to be most excellent.

Fifty-one millions of dollars is given as the extent of the damage to chestnut trees in portions of New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, near New York city, from a bark disease which has been found to be of fungous origin. In Forest park, Brooklyn, alone 16,000 trees have succumbed to the pest. The department of agriculture has made a study of the disease and suggests as means of prevention that all nursery stock shipped be inspected and that all affected trees be cut down and completely burned in the shape of fuel and brush. It is thought that this disease came from Japan in shipments of nursery stock, though the fact has not been fully established.

Radical measures sometimes have to be adopted to stamp out diseases among farm animals. During the recent outbreak of the foot and mouth disease in some of the eastern states the plague was discovered in a herd of 131 cattle near Lasalle, N. Y. As soon as the government inspectors were notified they had a trench dug 10 feet wide, 8 feet deep and 175 feet long. The herd was driven close to the edge of this pit and shot, the bodies toppling over into it or being pushed in and later covered with several feet of earth. Measures of this kind impose a heavy loss on the owner of infected herds, but only in such way can a spread of plagues be prevented.

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone, anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

$8.50 HEDGETHORN PUNCTURE-PROOF SELF-HEALING TIRES A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

FARM ORCHARD AND GARDEN

BY F. E. TRIGG

REGISTER, ROCKFORD, IA.

CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED

[This matter must not be reprinted without special permission.]

OVERPRODUCTION OF APPLES.

The point has been raised by many who have visited sections of the west where large areas are being planted to apple trees under conditions which make possible the production of a maximum quantity of fruit of the highest quality whether so many trees are being set as to result in a serious overproduction and a reduction of present prices to the point where there will be little or nothing left for the grower after necessary expenses and freight charges have been met. The question is one which may and should be taken into account, but does not seem to furnish cause for alarm for a good many years to come. Among some reasons for this attitude may be mentioned the fact that many orchards in New England, Michigan, Missouri, Arkansas and lesser apple states are past their prime either through advanced age, insect and fungous pests or lack of tillage of the soil and are today producing less fruit than in years gone by and will produce less in the future than now. Coupled with this decline of old orchards is a quite limited planting of new trees in the sections mentioned. This means that much of the western planting will be required to take the place of orchards that are now doing business in other sections. Another factor to be taken into consideration is that the highest grade fruit wherever produced never comes into competition with that which is undersized, undercolored, scabby and wormy. It is likely, too, that should there be an enormous increase in the production of high quality apples the well organized fruit growers' associations will take pains to see before that time comes that a market is developed at home or abroad where the surplus can be disposed of at good prices. In fact, this is already being done, a demand having been created for American apples in a number of European and Asiatic countries. A last factor that may be taken into account is that even under the most favorable conditions of climate and soil there will always be many who through lack of knowing how or of forethought and industry will not be able to maintain their orchards or ranches on a profitable basis. Another commendable safeguard will be to set only the best varieties of apples, so that in seasons of heavy crops the fruit produced may be disposed of at remunerative prices.

THE SCHOOLHOUSE WELL.

A reader who lives in a township in which there are no wells on any of the eight or nine school grounds in the area calls attention to the fact that there ought to be wells, made frog and mouse tight, so that the boys and girls would have a convenient and pure water supply and would not have to bother neighbors in the vicinity going after water and often leaving gates unfastened and windmill out of gear. He makes the further suggestion that it would be advantageous all around if the schoolhouse well were located just outside the fence beside the road, so that it could be used not only by the school population, but also by travelers along the highway, who, if a small trough were provided, would find it very convenient for the watering of their horses or in furnishing a drink for themselves. A distinct advantage of this over the usual location would be that with the increased use of the water it would keep fresher and purer and be much less liable to become fouled through disuse during vacation time.

AN OREGON MOSSBACK.

One old mossback who lives in an Oregon fruit valley, whose case was reported to us not long since, sold out a short time ago and moved out of the state because the fruit inspector insisted that he spray his fruit trees. The old codger said he'd be hanged if he'd stay in a state where he couldn't enjoy personal liberty and do as he pleased. It is the discouraging of the type of horticulture that men of this character would follow if left to themselves that is largely responsible for the splendid reputation a number of western states are making as producers of gilt edged fruit. If other central and eastern states would go after this proposition in the same hammer and tongs fashion a long step would be taken toward putting horticulture on a rational basis.

CHINA WAKING UP.

Prospects are certainly brightening in China, as shown in the recent decision of the government to establish agricultural schools in Manchuria, where young men of agricultural tastes may acquaint themselves with better methods of farming. The crops to be grown will be much the same as those produced in the northern part of the United States. Naturally the Chinese government is looking to this country for instructors and has set aside $150,000 for the support of the new school.

The Cuban orange crop of 1908 was a record breaker, aggregating nearly 500,000 crates. The output of pineapples was 1,000,000 crates, and the bulk of it was shipped to New York city.

Any person who does the common work of life which falls to his lot faithfully and well deserves credit as a benefactor of his fellow men just as truly as do those who labor higher up. It is not so much the kind of work as the way in which it is done that makes it worth while.

Goats have lately been used in the Lassen national forest in California for the purpose of denuding strips of land of vegetation to make fire lines. Not only do the goats eat vegetation of almost every description, but they have been known to tear bark loose from good sized trees and strip it up a dozen or more feet.

Venezuela has 200,000 acres devoted to the raising of coffee. The number of plantations is 33,000 and the annual product about 50,000 tons. Argentina, the great wheat granary of South America, exported 86,672,000 bushels of wheat from Jan. 1 to Aug. 1. This is about 32,000,000 more bushels than for the corresponding period last year.

Light clothing and cool drafts of water are just as refreshing for little babies in hot weather as for grown folks, and a lot of their fretfulness and crying during the heated season are very likely due to the fact that their needs in these two particulars are not given the attention they deserve. Babies have feelings the same as old folks, but aren't endowed with capacity to kick up as much disturbance if their wants are disregarded.

A lot has been written and considerably done of late along the line of eradicating tuberculosis from dairy herds for the sake of these animals and the hogs that may follow them. It is about time the babies in town and country homes who are compelled to subsist largely on milk from tuberculous cows had a word said in their behalf. It may be that dollars don't talk so loud for them as for the animals in pen or feed lot, but common decency and humanity should.

According to a bulletin recently issued by the department of agriculture, milk and the products derived therefrom constitute one-sixth of the total food of the average family. In North America this milk is produced almost exclusively by cows, in the hilly districts of Europe by the goat, by the buffalo in India, the llama in South America, the camel in desert countries and the mare in Russia and central Asia. Sheep's milk is used in some countries for making cheese and other purposes, while in arctic regions the milk of reindeers is commonly used for food.

A north Iowa farmer claims to be the only man in the west who is raising thoroughbred Arabian horses. Twenty years ago he brought three colts with him from his native land. Today his herd numbers fifty-two, and ten of them have been selected for ring purposes and will be exhibited at neighboring state fairs. These Arabians are very attractive in appearance, having silver manes and tails and glossy coats of a beautiful buff color. The owner has on his farm, besides stables and quarters for his men, a complete circus equipment for the training of his horses.

Owners of telephone, telegraph and power transmission companies in some sections of the country are reporting considerable damage to poles from the attacks of the common red headed woodpecker, which, with the gradual decrease in number of trees, has come to look upon the poles as a legitimate place for the building of a nest. The excavation for the nest, which is usually three inches in diameter and five or six inches deep, not only weakens the pole by so much, but the nest becomes a point where the rotting process sets in. Attempts which have been made to stop the work of the birds by filling the nest with stones has made a bad matter worse, as they usually proceed to excavate another nest adjacent to the old one and thus enlarge the cavity. A soaking of the poles in creosote has proved quite effective, but this involves a larger expense than most companies are at present willing to stand.

Town health officers should inquire more carefully than is customary into the practice followed by many slaughter house proprietors of hauling the carcasses of animals which have died of one disease or another to the hog pens and allowing the porkers which are to furnish the people of the community with toothsome pork chops and sausages to devour the diseased and often germ laden flesh from the dead animals' bones. This might be all right for Fiji islanders or Patagonians, but it is too much for the stomachs of supposedly civilized Americans, at least when they know of it. Federal authorities have cleaned up the big packing houses. It is about time the same thing were done with the small town slaughter houses by state and local authorities. It doesn't make matters better if this practice is followed only with hogs that are shipped to the big packing centers, as this is merely a transference of the proposition from pork chops and sausage to ham and bacon, which the customer of the local shop eats a few months later.

BY JOHN W. EASTMAN

ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

Governor Eberhardt is going to retain in office all of the men appointed by Gov. Johnson. It is right that he should.

During the past fiscal year the United States patent office did the biggest business in its history. People are still working on perpetual motion machines.

Bob Dunn is to be a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor next year, and this is going to insure a full attendance. Bob's friends and enemies always turn out when he wants anything.

The Red Lake Falls Gazette has it that the Soo is going to build its line through that town in a hurry. It is thought that the line will run through the site selected for the new court house and that is the reason they are delaying the building of this structure.

Little Falls Transcript: How many people are there, who are dissatisfied with the Payne bill, who can auctually tell what its provision are?

Princeton Union: Not one in a thousand. More than that, if each and every satisfied person were supplied with a copy of the law not one in ten could interpret its provisions correctly. The schedules with their per centums and advalorens, their provisos and exceptions, are fearfully made, and we freely confess many of them are Greek to us. Subdivision 265 of section one, however plainly provides for a duty on potatoes of 25 cents per bushel of 60 pounds. Farmers in the potato belt have no kick to make against that item of schedule G.

If fool stories are printed in papers it is because there are fools to read them. Of all the silly, nonsensical, and obviously absurd news stories of recent date, the silliest is that which has appeared in a number of newspapers to the effect that petroleum oil refiners were preparing to make an immitation butter out of crude oil. This story was swallowed up by press associations and newspapers of standing. The superintendent of the Tidewater Oil company in Bayonne, N. J., where the so-called "petroleum butter factory" was to be located, explains that this company had sold land upon which a butter factory is to be erected by a dairy company, the butter to be made as it ordinarly is from cream. The mere fact that an oil company had sold a tract of land for a butter factory gave rise to the preposterous story that petroleum butter was about to be offered to the public. Any chemist with the slightest knowledge of the constituents of mineral oils knows the utter impossibility of producing an edible compound from petroleum. Vaseline is the nearest approach to butter of any petroleum product, and the cost of its production would make it impossible to offer it as a substitute for the creamery's product—Leslie's Weekly.

Soo Surveyors.

The crew of Soo surveyors that arrived here last week augmented by the arrival of four new men and now numbering sixteen are at work running a line south east from here. The crew is in charge of Sid Jones who had charge of a crew on the wheat line survey four years ago. The crew will make this their headquarters until the first of the week when they will move to the crossing at Lost River.

While the present survey is supposed to be only a preliminary one yet it is very likely that the line will be built on the route they lay out. The line as it is now being run leaves the right-of-way about three quarters of a mile south of town and running in a southeasterly direction crosses the P. Medchell and O. Guthier farms entering the town of Garnes at section eighteen. From there the line keeps the same general direction and will very likely cross Lost River in section six of Hill River Township.—Plummer Pioneer.

Supper.

The Ladies Aid of the Synod church will serve a supper Oct. 5th in the basement of the church. It is needless to tell you what kind of a supper. If you have been there before you will come again, the price only 25 cents.

VIEWS OF MR. BACKE

Local Banker Gives His Views in Regard to Building of a Hospital.

Does Not Believe That Time Is Ripe to Start Work on a Hospital.

Citizens and Taxpayers: At the mass meeting held in this city for the purpose of discussing ways and means of building a city hospital, it was apparent from the very first, that there was only one way of getting a hospital, and that was to bond the city for twenty thousand dollars.

It happened that I being one of the two, who opposed this bonding the city for that amount at the present time, and for this reason I was appointed one of a committee to solicit private subscription toward a hospital, (this is as stated in last week's paper) I have not otherwise been notified. At the time of appointing this committee I had left the meeting, and for that reason I think it proper to inform you all, that I at no time have been of the opinion that a private subscription could be obtained for some time to come, so there was no reason to have me appointed except as before stated.

Not long ago the taxpayers were called upon to vote on a bond of $20,000 for the purpose of building an armory and auditorium not to cost more than the bonds called for.

It may not be known to all, but the fact is that the building will cost completed about $40,000.

The first item was to buy a site at a cost of $3,000 instead of buying one for $1,500 just as good. The cost of excavating reached nearly a thousand. The contract for the building calls for $24,500, plumbing and heating about $4,000 and to furnish the building properly another small fortune would be required from the taxpayers.

I for my part thought it was not the time, and entirely unjust to again be trapped into an unprofitable enterprise.

It is a well known fact that a hospital larger than the one we now have would be a good thing, but we are all aware that sewer and water works have to be extended, and more school buildings be erected, unless the people think as a certain doctor stated that a hospital was more needed than a school house.

THE VIEWERS ARE AT WORK

It Will Require Two Months to Assess the Benefits and Damages to Grygla Ditch.

Contract for Construction of This Large Ditch to Be Let in January.

The viewers for the proposed new Grygla ditch, in company with Civil Engineer Hoag, passed through the city Tuesday. As this ditch is going to be over 400 miles in length and there is to be a full benefit to nearly every quarter section of land in the territory, the work of the viewers will not be a hard one and yet it is estimated that it will take over two months to complete the job.

To a representative of the News, Mr. Hoag stated that all of the work would be completed so that the contract can be let about the first of January and that most of the work would be completed next year. The contract is not to be let as a whole to any one firm, but is to be divided into various small jobs. Mr. Hoag says that he expects that there will be fifteen or twenty dredges at work on this job next summer and that after the ditches are completed the settlers up there will never again be troubled with water.

---FINE SUITS FOR---
AUTUMN AND WINTER WEAR

. . . The new suits are here and we believe that when you see them you will agree with us in saying that they are the acme of perfection in tailoring. The new patterns and colorings are amongst the most handsome and attractive we have ever brought to this city, and the styles are finer and better than usual. . . . . .

While the fabrics are largely in the nature of novelties, they are far removed from freakish fads which some people have been trying to force upon the public. We draw a distinct line between freak clothing and desirable novelties.

Some people go to buy a suit—try on the coat and pay their good money—they've been educated to buy that way. We put the vest and trousers on and fit you from heel to collar. If it isn't right in the store it won't be any better when you get home. It must be right or you can't have it from us.

The school house in district No. 73, on the east side of the river in the town of Rocksbury, is to be removed one mile east to a more central location. The contract for the removal of the building was let to Emil Sedlacek of this city, the first of the week.

It is claimed that a new device has been perfected by which a person will be able to see the person at the other end of the telephone line to whom he or she is talking. That will likely be a popular invention and might also have the effect of eliminating a few cuss words, as a gentleman is more guarded when a lady is in sight. Such a device ought to be a boon to the "hello" girl.

Political Notes.

The friends of A. H. Fasel in the First ward announce that he will be a candidate for alderman and Mr. Fasel does not deny the allegation. He is one of the prominent business men of the ward and would make a good alderman.

Nominating petitions must be filed with the city clerk on or before the second Saturday before election.

Ben Christienson announces that he will be a candidate for alderman-at-large. He has served upon the council before and says that he will make a thorough campaign for the office.

Milton Forder will again be a candidate for alderman in the Second as will also Charles Alexander in the Third. At present it does not look as if either will have opposition. M. V. Evenson is undecided as to whether or not he will again run in the third ward, but he is being urged to enter the race.

L. M. Hoag announces positively that he will not again be a candidate for alderman at large. Mr. Hoag has made an excellent alderman and has rendered the city valuable services in the past.

Ed Evenson is again to be a candidate for city treasurer and Lars Backe, who had intended to become a candidate for this office, announces that he will not run against Mr. Evenson. It is not at all likely that Mr. Evenson will have any opposition. Mr. Backe is undecided as to whether or not he will again be a candidate for city clerk, but he says that if he again serves the city in this capacity there will have to be an increase in the present salary.

Winter Millinery just received at Caldwell's. No formal opening.

Traffic Is Heavy.

Travel on the Soo line is exceptionally heavy these days, and especially is this true of the Wheatline. Monday evening when the Wheatline passenger pulled into Thief River Falls, there was hardly standing room in any of the coaches. Most of the passengers were returning harvest hands, and they departed again on the Winnipeg flyer for points south of here. They all had plenty of money and they left considerable of their earnings in Thief River Falls.

WARREN'S GREAT SPEECH BEFORE FEDERAL COURT

Indictment of Capitalism and Its Despotic Institutions.

THE SENTENCE.

Warren was sentenced to pay a fine of $1,500, the cost of the prosecution and to serve six months in the Fort Scott jail.

By GEORGE H. SHOAF.

No court in the history of jurisprudence ever presented a scene more replete with dramatic interest than that witnessed in the federal building at Fort Scott, Kan., Thursday afternoon, July 24, when, in response to Judge Pollock's invitation to show cause why sentence should not be pronounced, Fred D. Warren, editor of the Appeal to Reason, arose and began to speak. The last bit of uncontradicted evidence disclosing the bias and prejudice of the jurors who convicted Warren had been introduced. The last argument in behalf of justice for the defendant had been made by his attorneys. Bone and West of the prosecution had declined to reply to Darrow and Boyle. Judge Pollock had just delivered his decision overruling the motions for an arrest of judgment and a new trial. Everything that could be said and everything that could be done to reverse the processes of the court and snatch victory from defeat had been said and done.

Unconquered Client.

Tense were the feelings of the spectators as Warren faced the court. Instinctively it was realized that something was about to happen, but just what it would be no one could think or say. The benign face of Clarence Darrow, the celebrated lawyer who in a hundred courts has championed labor's cause and whose voice from a thousand platforms has been lifted in behalf of the poor and oppressed, showed concern, as did the faces of his associate attorneys, when it became evident that their defeated but unconquered client was about to initiate action in his own behalf. The government's agents and attorneys looked as if a red flag had been unexpectedly unfolded or a bomb was about to be hurled, and they cringed speechless in their chairs. Judge Pollock himself, his eyes fastened on the figure before him, his countenance plainly revealing the conflicting emotions of his mind, sat as if stricken dumb.

Voice Rang Like a Clarion.

"Yes, your honor, there are some reasons why sentence of the court should not be pronounced."

With his hands on the table before him and his eyes looking straight and fearlessly into those of the court, Warren's voice rang like a clarion as he began a speech as remarkable as it is without a parallel. The unexpectedness of the proceeding and Warren's boldness of utterance astounded Judge Pollock. Once or twice Prosecuting Attorney Bone looked appealingly at the court as if the latter dignitary ought to foreclose on the speaker's remarks, but the court was too preoccupied with amazement to except. To a silenced judge and in the presence of an audience whose very breathing could neither be felt nor heard capitalism's most prominent victim and labor's uncompromising champion proceeded with the uncovering of the causes that had led to his conviction. Never in his life had Judge Pollock listened to a speech like this; never in the history of jurisprudence was there a speech like this made in a federal court.

Situation Dramatic Beyond Words.

Warren represented in the concrete the agony and woe, the blood and tears of the working class of the world. He typified the issue between the ruling class and those who are fighting the age-long war for human emancipation. Through him were voiced the outraged sentiments of men, women and children who in the field, factories and mines do the work of the world and who in some way would protest against the methods by which the wealth their work creates is taken from them and given to those who labor not. Here in this federal court, the strongest bulwark of the system that is responsible for the agony and blood and outraged sentiments, Warren, already convicted and about to receive sentence, faced without hesitation and without a tremor the flesh and blood embodiment of capitalism's mighty power and challenged him to do his worst.

Would Vote For Him For President.

Warren's speech climaxed his defense and clinched it irrefutably in the consciences of his auditors. If there had been any doubt as to the injustice of the prosecution and the animus and origin of it, this doubt rapidly dispelled as the speech proceeded. After sentence was pronounced and the prisoner was admitted to bail pending an appeal John H. Crider, one of the most prominent Republicans in Fort Scott and probably in secret society circles the most influential man in Kansas, who had listened to Warren's address came forward and volunteered to sign his bond. The offer was accepted. Downstairs after adjournment of court a group of men, Democrats and Republicans, united in open indorsement of the speech and unqualifiedly expressed their admiration for the man who made it.

Eloquent Plea For a Free Press and Free Speech.

"If ever that man runs for president he will get my vote," declared one of those who participated in the discussion.

Tribute From a Juror.

"Darrow's argument and Warren's speech put this case in a different light," said R. J. Finley, one of the jurors who voted to convict and who sat through the proceedings of the day. "There is no question as to Warren's ability and sincerity. I am not a Socialist, but as far as I am able to determine I believe Warren is honest and free from criminal intent," Finley declared.

It is difficult to interpret the impression that was made on the mind of the court. Ordinarily convicted prisoners accept sentence in silence. Warren's course petrified with astonishment the court, to whom his remarks were addressed. An age seemed to have elapsed before Pollock recovered sufficiently to proceed. It was very evident that he did not know what to say. Undoubtedly he had made up his mind as to the severity of the sentence, but this speech from the prisoner apparently upset his plans. Now he vibrated between doubt and despair. Warren possibly with a note of defiance, had announced that he did not ask or expect clemency or mercy; that he was not guilty and was not conscious of having committed an offense. The United States district attorney had demanded that the full penalty of the law, five years in the penitentiary and a $5,000 fine, be inflicted.

The Court In Doubt, but Pronounces Sentence.

With halting tones and in a manner plainly denoting the confused condition of his mind, Pollock began the pronouncement of the sentence with an apology in part and an attempt at argument in reply to Warren's speech.

According to the Fort Scott Tribune Warren's impassioned address made a most profound impression.

"The fact that Judge Pollock stated he had given the case weeks and weeks of deliberation and had hardly known what to do shows that Warren may have had some merit in his claim that the government had sanctioned kidnaping. The speech Mr. Warren delivered will be kept as a treasure by many who are with him in this case," declared the Tribune.

Warren's Great Speech.

The speech, which is destined to become immortal in revolutionary literature, is as follows:

I wish to call the attention of the court to the fact that this case is the outgrowth of the kidnaping of three workmen by the agents of the great mining corporations, with the connivance of the state officials of Idaho and Colorado. The kidnaping of these workingmen was acquiesced in by the president and sanctioned by the supreme court of the United States.

In referring to the manner in which these workingmen were taken from their homes as kidnaping I wish it understood that no less distinguished a personage than Justice McKenna of the supreme court of the United States used this term in dissenting from the opinion of his associates. Justice McKenna, after reviewing the facts laid before the supreme court, said:

> In the case at bar the states, through their officers, are the offenders. They by an illegal exertion of power deprived the accused of a constitutional right. * * * Kidnaping is a crime, pure and simple. * * * All of the officers of the law are supposed to be on guard against this. * * * But how is it when the law becomes the kidnaper—when the officers of the law, using the forms and exerting its power, become abductors? This is not a distinction without a difference, another form of the crime of kidnaping, distinguished only from that committed by an individual by circumstances. If a state may say to one within her borders and upon whom her process is served, "I will not inquire how you came here; I must execute my laws and remit you to proceedings against those who have wronged you," may she so plead against her offenses? May she claim that by mere physical presence within her borders an accused person is within her jurisdiction denuded of his constitutional rights, though he has been brought there by her violence? And constitutional rights the accused (the three workingmen I have alluded to) in this case certainly did have, and valuable ones.

Justice McKenna voiced my views and the views of every law abiding citizen on this important matter touching the rights of the individual. But the supreme court declared otherwise and refused to grant the relief asked for by these workingmen and guaranteed to them by the constitution of the United States and by every consideration of fair play and justice.

To Test the Supreme Court.

It was during the heat of this struggle between the Western Federation of Miners and the wealthy Mine Owners' association of the west that I conceived the idea of offering a reward for ex-Governor Taylor, who, as was generally known, was a fugitive from justice from his home state of Kentucky and in hiding in Indiana, protected from the service of requisition by the governor of Indiana, whose position was upheld by Governor Roosevelt of New York and every prominent Republican politician and newspaper in the United States.

Would the supreme court hold to its opinion that kidnaping was not a crime if the victim was a member of the Republican party and a representative of the capitalist class? I did not believe that the $1,000 offered by the Appeal would induce any man to undertake the abduction of Mr. Taylor, as for seven years the state of Kentucky had a standing reward of $100,000 for the capture of the murderers of Governor Goebel, for which crime Taylor had been indicted by the Franklin county grand jury in January, 1900.

Epoch Making as Patrick Henry's Immortal Oration.

Similar to Other Rewards.

But I did expect that the offer of this reward in the manner and with the language used would attract public attention to the kidnaping decision of the supreme court. I felt that if this decision, sanctioning the kidnaping of poor and defenseless workingmen by rich and powerful capitalists, was understood by the American people a wave of protest would sweep the country and force the supreme court to recede from its position, as had been done before, notably in the famous Dred Scott decision, and will undoubtedly be done again.

This Taylor reward was circulated through the mails in a manner in daily use by banks, private detective agencies, anti horse thief associations, sheriffs and marshals. I have here three postal cards mailed by national and state banks offering rewards for the arrest of men whom these banks allege to have committed crime. The card which I offer for the inspection of the court, it will be noted, bears upon the back or outside of the card, in large letters, figures and characters, the following language: "B. B. Bond, produce dealer, wanted for issuing forged bills of lading; $250 reward will be paid by the First National bank, Nashville, Tenn., for his arrest and delivery to Nashville authorities."

First Instance on Record.

It will be observed that this language, to quote this court's decision on our demurrer to the indictment, "is calculated to impress the readers of the language with the thought that Bond was guilty of the commission of some crime for which he would be prosecuted by the Tennessee authorities if captured and returned to them." It can further be said, following the court's line of reasoning, that this language was obviously intended by the First National bank to reflect injuriously upon the character of B. B. Bond and from its terms and the manner and style in which it was displayed on the postal card is calculated to have that effect.

The other cards contain similar language and display. This is characteristic of thousands of cards which daily pass through the mails of the United States, and yet in not a single instance has any effort been made by the government to rid the mails of this objectionable matter and protect those of its citizens who are fugitives from justice.

My arrest and conviction is the first instance on record where a man was prosecuted for attempting to bring to the bar of justice an indicted fugitive charged with the crime of murder.

The Reason Not Hard to Find.

There must be some reason why I alone of the thousands of men who, according to the rule of this court and the opinion of the district attorney and his assistant, have committed substantially the same act should be singled out and marked for prosecution.

The reason is not hard to find. Society today is divided into two classes. On the one side we find the work people—men, women and children who have no means of obtaining a livelihood but by their hard labor. On the other hand we find a relatively small group of men who own the land and the tools which these people must have access to if they are to live. It is the primary if not the sole purpose of the men who own this productive property to obtain as large profits as possible, while on the other hand the work people strive constantly to increase their wages. This creates a class conflict.

The Conflict Began With Civilization.

This conflict began with civilization and has come down under varying forms to this day and will continue with increasing intensity so long as a small group of rich men are permitted to lay upon the masses, to quote from Pope Leo, "a yoke little better than slavery." Discussing the ever present problem of labor and its compensation John Adams in 1770 observed:

> "It is of no consequence by what name you call your people, whether by that of freemen or slaves. In some countries the laboring poor men were called freemen, in others slaves, but the difference was imaginary only. What matters it whether a landlord employing ten laborers on his farm gives them annually as much as will buy the necessaries of life or gives them those necessaries at first hand?"

Coming down to the civil war period, we find that the Charlestown Baptist association in presenting a memorial to the Georgia legislature in 1835 discussing this ever with us problem of labor gave expression to the following conclusion:

> "It amounts in effect to this—whether the operatives of a country shall be bought and sold and themselves become property, as in this state, or whether they shall be hirelings and their labor only become property, as in other states."

Slavery of the Working Class.

It will be seen from these two quotations, clearly reflecting the opinion of the Revolutionary and civil war periods, that the master class recognized no difference between the chattel slave and the wage hireling. In 1865 Karl Marx, the founder of scientific socialism, summed up the labor problem in the following striking sentence:

> "In point of fact, however, whether a man works three days of the week for himself on his own field and three days for nothing on the estate of his lord or whether he works in the factory or workshop six hours daily for himself and six hours daily for his employer, it comes to the same thing."

This surplus value over and above that which is required by the slave, the serf and the wageworker to maintain his physical existence is the portion which the master, the feudal lord and the capitalist have taken by force of arms in the first case, by ownership of land in the second and by ownership of tools and cunningly devised laws and court decisions in the last instance.

The slave master built up a civil and political system which protected his right of property in the bodies of his slaves and the wealth they produced. One does not have to go very far back in the history of this country to find confirmation of this statement. Prior to 1860 the laws enacted by congress and by most of the several states, backed by the decisions of federal and state courts, had for their object the protection of the slave master in his right of ownership of men, women and children. The man who dared raise his voice in protest against the exploitation of the black man was branded as a traitor to his country. If he attempted to speak he was thrown in to jail, and if he attempted to print a newspaper voicing his sentiments his press was destroyed and he was mobbed and murdered.

What was true in the two revolutionary periods which marked the disappearance of a political system based on kingcraft and a political system based on chattel slavery is true today.

Marked For Persecution.

The men and the newspapers that have espoused the cause of men, women and children who work in the fields, factories and mines of this nation are marked for persecution, as were the Revolutionary and abolition editors before them. For ten years as editor of the Appeal to Reason I have been in constant conflict with the ruling class and the men who hope to pick up the crumbs which drop from the tables of the great captains of industry, on whose will employment depends, not alone in the industries, but in the government and municipal service.

Postoffice and Courts Versus Appeal.

The postoffice department was first employed to hamper and harass the Appeal to Reason in its work of education and enlightenment. The most absurd rules and regulations were specially formulated to apply, as Third Assistant Postmaster General Madden wired to the Girard postmaster, "to the Appeal to Reason." In every instance where our right to the mails was questioned the Appeal won a signal victory, because we strictly obeyed the spirit and the letter of the law.

Then the aid of the courts was invoked to accomplish what the postoffice department had failed to do. The courts today, as prior to 1860, are with the owning and ruling class. Daily this fact is becoming more apparent. One has only to refer to the long list of decisions in which the interests of labor and capital are opposed to verify this statement. The blacklist has been legalized and the boycott outlawed. The injunction has been used with telling effect in labor controversies to terrorize and crush the men who work, while it has proved ineffective and of no avail when directed against great capitalist interests, as President Roosevelt pointed out when he was engaged in his battle with the great packing industries.

The people of Missouri in their capacity as sovereign voters recently elected a governor and legislature on a platform demanding relief from railroad extortion. A two cent fare bill was enacted into law. This law was upheld by the state supreme court. The railroads went to the federal courts, which with the stroke of a pen nullified the will of 3,000,000 people. So closely allied has become the federal judiciary of this country to the great corporations that even now there is pending in congress a resolution demanding an investigation of the acts and conduct of the federal judges who have prostituted their high office to the profit of these corporations, three-fourths of which, according to a statement made by Governor Hadley, are either illegally organized or unlawfully conducted.

Fighting Industrial Despotism.

For years the Appeal to Reason has been waging almost single handed a fight against the oppressive and intolerable industrial and political conditions which confront this country. We frankly admit having been unsparing in our criticism of the acts of public officials and the courts of this land. We have dared to tell the truth, and it is because of this that I face this court today a convicted felon in the eyes of thousands of men and women whose respect I covet.

Whence came this prosecution? The Kansas City Journal in November, 1907, editorially stated that the department of justice at the instance of the president of the United States had been instructed to commence proceedings against a Socialist sheet at Girard, Kan. I do not know the Journal's source of information, but am inclined to believe from facts now in my possession that this prosecution of the Appeal to Reason has been directed from the attorney general's office in Washington.

When the Pierson envelope, on which this action is based, was sent to the postoffice inspector of this district from Los Angeles that gentleman turned it over to the district attorney. The district attorney returned the envelope to the postoffice inspector with the opinion that there was no ground for action. The inspector in making report to the department at Washington marked the case "Closed." He later explained to me that this meant that so far as the district of Kansas was concerned no further action would be taken. But soon thereafter word was received from Washington, so the assistant district attorney announced in the presence of this court, that there had been a violation of the law and that the case must be reopened and vigorously prosecuted.

"We Are After the Appeal."

The district attorney's office at Topeka, however, revised its decision after hearing from Washington that there was no ground for action against me. One of my attorneys journeyed to Washington and laid before the department thousands of reward cards similar to the Taylor reward which had been mailed from nearly every city in the Union. When my attorney inquired why the Appeal was singled out for prosecution on this flimsy charge, while all the senders of these other cards, who were equally culpable, were not molested, the representative of the government opened a drawer in his desk and produced an armload of marked copies of the Appeal.

Blue pencil marks designating certain articles in the Appeal indicated that this paper is pretty closely read by high government officials. The government official shrugged his shoulders in reply to Darrow's question and remarked, "We are after the Appeal."

This case has dragged its weary way through this court for over two years, continued from time to time at the instance of the government. I submit from these facts that I am not prosecuted for having violated any federal law, but purely because of my political opinions and my work in behalf of the working class of this nation.

This prosecution is not unexpected to us. As plainly stated by the government official to whom our attorney talked while in Washington, it is evident that secret service agents of the government have been camping on the trail of the Appeal for, lo, these many years.

Is it not pretty conclusive evidence that we have observed religiously the laws and regulations governing the conduct of a newspaper when after ten years of effort the government is able to find only this lone and paltry alleged violation?

Personally I feel proud of this record. I feel no sense of guilt, nor will the world approve this conviction when the truth prevails and the facts are known.

Submitted Copy to Postmaster.

The government's witnesses testified here on the stand that I submitted to them copy of the matter I expected to mail and asked whether in the postmaster's judgment it constituted a violation of the federal law. That official after looking the matter up said it did not, and I want to say here that during the ten years of my connection with the Appeal to Reason I have had frequent occasion to consult with the postmaster at Girard on matters relating to the postal laws, and in no instance was his judgment ever at fault. He assured me that in his judgment the matter I proposed mailing was identical in character with the thousands of postal cards mailed at his office by the sheriff, the marshal and the officers of the Anti Horse Thief association.

In submitting to this court these postal cards mailed by bankers it is not my intention that the government should proceed against these men on the evidence furnished by me. I know these gentlemen are immune from prosecution because they represent the dominant class in society today. The rewards which they offer are for men who have committed crimes against property, and in the prevailing social system the property of the rich is of vastly more consequence than the life and liberty of the poor.

Is Criticism a Crime?

On the other hand, the editor who has espoused the cause of the wage slave today has in the eyes of the ruling class committed a crime against existing institutions for daring to offer a reward for the apprehension of an influential member of the dominant political party.

I have also dared to criticise a decision of the highest judicial tribunal in the United States. Judge West, the assistant district attorney who assisted in my prosecution, in his argument a year ago last November, after presenting his reasons why the demurrer in this action should be overruled, closed his argument in a burst of passion with the statement that "as a matter of fact this literature was sent out for the purpose of bringing into contempt and discredit the supreme court of the United States." Is criticism a crime? And is it for this I am being prosecuted?

Our Colonist Forefathers.

Smarting under the vicious attempt of the English king to prevent the circulation of Revolutionary newspapers during the period preceding the signing of the Declaration of Independence, the first amendment to the new constitution was made to provide for a free press and free speech, always and everywhere recognized as the sustaining pillars of free institutions.

Our colonist forefathers, imbued with the high ideals embodied in their Immortal Declaration, shouldered their guns and shot to death the divine right of kings, and then the cunning enemies of democracy raised in its stead the supreme court, with its many federal arms reaching out into all the states of the Union.

The supreme court has become in fact the reigning monarch of the American people. No measure of relief demanded by the voters of this nation enacted into law by their elected representatives and signed by the president may become operative without its judicial sanction. At the command of the lords of privilege any obnoxious law is promptly declared unconstitutional.

The supreme court of the United States has today more real power over the people than is vested in any monarch of the old world.

The late Senator Hanna boasted that the courts are maintained to buttress property rights. Ex-President Roosevelt denounced a federal judge for his interpretation of the law in the government's prosecution of the beef trust.

President Taft in his Hot Springs (Va.) speech expressed a decided opinion upon the same question in referring to the inability of the poor to cope in the courts with men of wealth. With expressions like these from men of prominence, do you wonder that there is a growing distrust on the part of the poor people of this nation that the courts are against them?

The Courts Ruled by Property.

In the western district of New York of thirty cases decided in favor of injured employees twenty-eight were reversed in favor of the master class by the higher courts. United States District Attorney Sims of Chicago was waging a vigorous fight against the white slave drivers, and when victory was almost within his grasp his hand was paralyzed by a decision of the supreme court, which virtually put an end to the prosecution of that unspeakable infamy. There are property interests involved in the wholesale debauchery of young girls, and these property interests must be safeguarded at whatever cost. As for the girls, they are the daughters of the working class and in point of value are not to be compared to property.

Our modern system of jurisprudence is a survival of mediaeval times, when judges presided by right of ownership of lands and castles, and it will require another political revolution similar to that of 1776 and that of 1860 to abolish this bulwark of special privilege and capitalist exploitation.

Convicted by Jury of Republicans.

I was convicted by a jury composed of partisan Republicans. It was shown by competent evidence introduced in this court today that two of the jurors had expressed hostile and prejudicial sentiments against me. Affidavits herewith filed show that one of the jurors, Mr. Nelson, became deathly sick in the jury room, and he affirms that it was because of this sickness and his fear of death unless medical attention could be secured that he was forced into voting for a conviction. Again it is shown by competent evidence introduced at this hearing that the principal witness for the government, ex-Governor Taylor, made statements which were untrue. He stated that at the time the reward which I offered was circulated through the mails he was not a fugitive from justice nor was there any charge pending against him of a criminal nature in Kentucky. Affidavits, state records and letters signed by Taylor himself, all on file in this court, show that Taylor had been indicted and that for seven years prior to the offer of our reward he had been a fugitive from justice with a price on his head. It is the common practice in all courts that where the defendant can show that a juror in qualifying perjured himself a new trial is granted. Perjured testimony on the part of the prosecuting witness is also ground for a new trial in ordinary cases. Of course I understand that this is not an ordinary case. The whole history of these proceedings shows conclusively that it is not an attempt to secure the ends of justice, but an effort to punish me because of my political views.

No Mercy or Leniency Asked.

In conclusion permit me to say that I am not asking the mercy or leniency of this court. I have committed no crime, and there is festering in my conscience no accusation of guilt, but if my conviction and punishment will serve to rivet public attention upon the abuses which I have tried to point out then I shall feel that I have not suffered this humiliation in vain.

After all, this is the price of human progress. Why should I expect immunity? The courts have ever been and are today the bulwarks of the ruling class. Why should they not punish offenders against that class?

In feudal slavery the courts sustained the feudal lords, in chattel slavery they protected the slave owners, and in wage slavery they defend the industrial masters.

Whoever protests for the sake of justice or in the name of the future is an enemy of society and is persecuted or put to death.

In one of the most eloquent characterizations of history Charles Sumner, tracing the march of the centuries, pointed out that the most infamous crimes against the liberty and progress of the human race had been sanctioned by the so called courts of justice.

Truth Will Triumph in the End.

This case is a mere incident in the mighty struggle of the masses for emancipation. Slowly, painfully, proceeds the struggle of man against the power of Mammon. The past is written in tears and blood. The future is dim and unknown, but the final outcome of this worldwide struggle is not in doubt. Freedom will conquer slavery, truth will prevail over error, justice will triumph over injustice, the light will vanquish the darkness, and humanity, disenthralled, will rise resplendent in the glory of universal brotherhood.

STRIKE WITHOUT VIOLENCE

Latest Advices from Sweden Indicate That Everything Is Quiet and That 100,000 Men Have Returned to Work —Strike Will Result in Much Suffering Among Workmen and Their Families the Coming Winter.

SWEDEN.

One thing that has been characteristic of the great strike is that there has been practically no violence. The latest dispatches state that everything is quiet and that there are at least 100,000 men that have gone back to work. Such a peculiar strike as this has no parallel in the history of modern strikes. There has been a deathlike stillness in Stockholm that has simply astounded the strangers. Men and women have been moving aimlessly about, but there have been no exciting scenes except the demonstration meetings on the outskirts of the city, generally conducted by the young socialists, who have been the real promoters of the strike. Generally these fellows are all agitators and are never known to work. How they are getting their livelihood is a puzzle to many, but they do not appear to be wholly without funds. There will be much suffering among workingmen and their families this winter. They will not have anything to purchase fuel with and a good many will suffer much from the cold weather. The amount in wages that the laboring men have lost is estimated to be about $250,000 a day. On the other hand this sum represents much reduction in favor of the employers. Still it must be conceded that the prolonged suspension of factory work entails in some industries considerable loss, which becomes the greater the longer the strike lasts. Not inconsiderate savings have been made by the prohibition of the sale of beer and spirits of all kinds while the strike was in progress. Some profess to believe that the economic activities generally throughout Sweden and the country's relation to foreign trade will not materially be affected by the strike, but there also are many who share a different view and think that Sweden's loss will aggregate into the millions. No matter from what viewpoint considered the strike has been an unfortunate one and especially is this the case so far as the strikers are concerned, for they will face a hard winter. The women and the children are the ones who are innocently made to suffer for this seemingly unbolstered strike.

An unusual thing happened up in Orno, last Sunday when the regular pastor of the church there took suddenly ill early in the morning. The question now came up as to who should take his place on the pulpit, for there were many people who had come to attend the services. There was a theatrical director present who volunteered to preach and the pastor consented to his taking the pulpit. He preached a sermon the like of which had never before been heard of in that community. His applications, which he took direct from the text of the day, were highly practical and after the sermon was through many members of the great congregation came up to congratulate him. The gentleman who preached the sermon was Director August Falck, who has for years been popular in theatrical circles in Sweden.

During the past summer the summer resorts have proven very popular, owing to the fact that so many people left the city on account of the strike. Men doing clerical work were in many instances thrown out of employment and they betook themselves to friends out in the summer resort districts and there have been as many as fifteen and a dozen occupying only a small cottage. A great many of the innkeepers and hotel men have been compelled to do a credit business during the summer and that they will have a job to collect their bills goes without saying.

A report current in Sweden states that the Norwegian Nobel committee will award the Nobel peace prize this year to Count Leo Tolstoi. It is stated on good authority that the famous author had fully intended to visit Stockholm this summer in spite of the fact that he is eighty-one years old, but that he did not do so because the peace conference in Stockholm had to be postponed on account of the strike. Whether he will attend the postponed peace meeting in Stockholm remains to be seen.

King Gustaf of Sweden has officially recognized Dr. Cook as the discoverer of the north pole. Minister Egan, at Copenhagen, has informed the state department that the king, through the Swedish minister at Copenhagen, has congratulated the government of the United States on the occasion of Dr. Cook's discovery.

The men who were arrested at the Nya Kungsholm's bridge the other night have confessed that they were not followers of Hinke Bergegren, but that they were the disciplines of Hjalmar Branting.

The German socialists have sent the Swedish strikers a sum of money amounting to 433,063 crowns. This sum has, we understand, been distributed among the strikers and their families.

Owing to the decrease in the Swedish tourist traffic the country will lose in the neighborhood of 3,000,000 crowns this year. The strike has been directly responsible for this.

George Branting, a son of the revolutionary leader, Hjalmar Branting, has petitioned the Swedish government to be relieved from military service next summer. He has for a number of years been a member of the grenadiers at Vaxholm.

NORWAY.

East and west Norway have now been connected by the Christiania and Bergen railway. But the railway itself, if we are to place any belief in prevailing reports, is very poorly "connected." Beginning at the east end of the line the rails are strong enough to carry the heaviest engines. Next comes a stretch of light rails, then heavy rails, and, finally, light rails near the western terminus. The result is far more interesting than economical. The light rails cannot carry the heavy engines needed in certain sections and the rule is that four different engines must be used for every through train. Much time is thus lost in changing engines three different times. The only remedy is to put heavy rails on the whole line. One reason why heavy engines are necessary is that the rails are wet and slippery in the tunnels through the mountains, thus rendering traffic exceeding slow and dangerous.

The Aftenposten (Christiania) says in a recent issue: "Two hundred and seventy-three young men who should have reported for military duty in Gudbrandsdalen have emigrated from the country. Judging from this standpoint more than one-third of the young men who were born in 1887 and who are still alive today, have turned their backs on their native land. Within the district there are, therefore, at present only 510 young men available for military service. In Lom and Skiaakor the number of men who have emigrated exceeds by far the number that are now available for military service. This is indeed an unfortunate condition and the country is thus being sapped of its youthful strength and power."

Norway is progressing along nicely so far as dairy interests are concerned. The milk output is increasing from year to year and the best methods are being used. The country has at the present time 44,000 "saters" places where the stock is kept during the warm season for pasturing purposes. It is estimated that the milk produced at the Norwegian saters in one season exceeds 16,000,000 gallons and about $1,250,000 worth of cheese and butter made at the saters reach the market. This is certainly a fine showing and evinces that the Norwegians have hit upon the right kind of an industry in the farming districts of Norway.

A large number of Norwegian strikers in Stockholm have been sent back to Norway by the Swedish authorities. The Norwegian authorities are watching developments very closely in Sweden and as soon as any of the disturbers head for Norway for the purpose of starting trouble they will be shown out of the country.

Bjornson's "When the Vine's in Bloom" will be rendered for the first time at the National theater during the last week in September. It is reported by critics to be an exceptionally forceful play and people are anxious to see it.

The first "ryper" (a rare bird in Norway) of the season are commanding a price of a crown and a half a piece in Christiania. They are exceedingly delicious and are much sought after by people who are fond of game.

Miss Beatrice Gjertsen, the celebrated Norwegian-American singer, has created a furore in musical circles in Weimar, Germany, where she has been taking the leading role in "Tanneheuser" recently.

Queen Alexandra and Princess Victoria were visitors at the Royal palace in Christiania last month and a series of entertainments and garden parties were given in their honor by Queen Maud and King Haakon.

Andreas Stang has sold the "Prestobacken" and "Bjornsholm" to his son for a sum of 150,000 crowns. This is one of the finest estates in Norway.

DENMARK.

Sigurd Pattursson, a Danish journalist, who is rather a great adventurer, was sent some time ago by a Copenhagen paper to Arabia, where he was going to furnish some readable and exciting stuff for the paper that had engaged him. He did not have to wait long for trouble. He went to visit at a missionary station in the interior of the country, where he found a Danish missionary in charge of the station. In going to find the station he started out afoot from an inland village, but he had not gone very far before he was attacked by a horde of Beduins, with whom he fought for more than half an hour before they succeeded in overpowering him. He was very ill treated, but finally a party of white men came to his rescue and he was given his freedom. Pattursen says that he has had quite enough of Arabia and is not anxious to hobnob with the Beduins any more. Yet his stuff has been exceedingly interesting to Danish papers, so from that standpoint he certainly made good all right.

Old Prince Hans, a brother of the late King Christian, who is now eighty four years old, is in poor health and will not, according to his physicians, be able to live very much longer. He is suffering from gall stones and his physicians do not believe that he at this time could stand to go through an operation.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

The tax rate for the purpose of raising revenue for the state treasury, to be levied this year, will be about 1 mill, perhaps less. This is the lowest that it has been in many years. Last year it was a mill and a half and the year before a mill and seven-tenths. The decrease this year is made possible partly by the increase of $10,000,000 in the personal property valuation in the state, partly by the increase of nearly $30,000,000 in the iron ore assessments and partly by the increased revenues from railroad gross earnings taxes, inheritance taxes and other special taxes.

The officials of the Soo Railway company will extend their line into Bemidji, provided the people there will raise $30,000 with which to purchase the right of way. It was only after much persuasion that the Soo people agreed to deviate from their air line survey between Plummer and Moose Lake and enter Bemidji.

Major Ebenezer A. Rice, the only surviving officer of the Fifth Minnesota infantry in the Civil war, a pioneer resident of the state and a former commandant at Fort Snelling, celebrated his ninetieth birthday at the home of his daughter in Minneapolis last week.

The quarantine recently placed upon eighty young women students of Hamline university on account of the presence of diphtheria in the school has been raised. Three young women are in the hospital suffering from the disease.

The twenty-first annual convention of the Loyal Order of Moose was held in St. Paul last week. Baltimore was selected for next year's convention.

It is expected that Frank B. Kellogg will soon announce himself formally as a candidate to succeed Moses E. Clapp in the United States senate.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Esther Rosengren, an employe in the kitchen of Donaldson's tea rooms at Minneapolis, was fatally injured when caught between the floor and the gates of the elevator that runs between the sixth and fifth floors in connection with the kitchen. The elevator descended, crushing her head. She died in the police ambulance on the way to St. Barnabas hospital.

While Frank W. Smith, residing near Milroy, was elevating grain from the basement of his barn to the third floor, with an elevator holding thirty bushels, a piece of the machinery broke, letting the loaded box fall thirty feet, striking him on the head and tearing his scalp loose and making him unconscious. He lived eight days.

A. H. Bjoin, eldest brother of O. H. and Thomas Bjoin of Crookston, blew out his brains with a 38-caliber revolver in a room in the loft of O. H. Bjoin's big livery barn in that city, in a corner of which he slept on a cot. He was wealthy, but very peculiar.

William Antilla, while cleaning what he supposed was an empty shotgun at his home in the town of Newton, Otter Tail county, accidentally discharged it and a portion of the load struck his daughter Mamie, a girl of fourteen. She may not recover.

Peter Frost, a young man who resided in the town of Cosmos, Meeker county, was instantly killed as the result of falling from the hay loft in his father's barn. He held a pitchfork in his hand and when he fell one of the tines entered his brain.

Elmer Regan of Winona is dead as the result of injuries received while taking a ride on a Milwaukee and St. Paul train at Wabasha. The train cut off one of his legs below the knee and the other foot at the ankle. He was twenty years of age.

With his head impaled on a stool projection which had punctured an artery in his temple Patrick McCall, a laborer, was found dead at the bottom of the stairs leading to the lodging rooms of Martin Holmberg at Minneapolis.

Henry Baber and George Ingals, accused of holding up the Wayzata State bank and taking $325, changed their pleas to guilty when called before Judge Andrew Holt in the district court at Minneapolis.

In jumping off of a moving work car at St. Paul Antonio Tarlesso, an Italian laborer in the employ of the Twin City Rapid Transit company, was thrown under the wheels and instantly killed.

J. C. Jobe, a moving picture show proprietor at Rochester, fell into the orchestra pit from the stage after turning out the lights and died within an hour.

Thomas Hueston, a logger, was drowned at Alden lake, near Duluth, after a daring race on the part of his fellow workmen to save him.

Nels G. Johnson, owner of a bicycle repair shop in Minneapolis, killed himself by hanging following his arrest for drunkenness.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Truman M. Smith, who started in business in St. Paul in 1851, was president of a bank and later a commission merchant there, is dead. Mr. Smith was born in Danby, Vt., June 19, 1825.

C. A. Zimmerman, a pioneer business man of St. Paul, dropped dead at the railroad station at Mound, Lake Minnetonka, while on his way from his residence to his place of business.

BODY LAID TO REST

Remains of Governor Johnson of Minnesota Interred.

BURIED BESIDE HIS MOTHER

Last Sad Rites Take Place in the City of His Birth.

St. Peter, Minn., Sept. 24.—All that was mortal of the late Governor Johnson has been laid to rest in Green Hill cemetery here, the city of his birth, beside the bodies of his father and mother and four sisters. Thousands of people from all over the state, including state, county and municipal officials, attended the obsequies. Governor Johnson's death had been regarded as a personal loss by nearly every resident of this city, where he had lived the greater part of his life, and the outward signs of mourning were everywhere.

At stations all along the road from St. Paul the funeral cortege was reviewed with the utmost deference. At Shakopee, Belle Plaine and other places the whole town was at the station. School children, with flags pointed downward, lined the street on each side of the train, while small boys and gray haired men stood with bared heads as the governor's body was hurried towards its resting place.

The train arrived here at 1:45 p. m. The funeral cortege, escorted by state militia and representatives of state and civic organizations, proceeded to the Presbyterian church, where the body lay in state and was viewed by hundreds of citizens of St. Peter for an hour and a half before the religious services were held. Rev. E. O. Clarke read the services and delivered the sermon, using the text: "Know ye not that a prince and a great man has fallen this day." Brief services were held at the cemetery and the local company of the national guard fired a salute as the body was lowered into the grave.

VAST CROWDS VIEW CORTEGE

Body of Governor Johnson Removed From Capitol to Train.

St. Paul, Sept. 24.—Preceded by a band of 100 pieces playing a funeral march, ten companies of infantry in full dress uniform with arms reversed, three batteries of artillery, the guns and caissons draped in black, and followed by carriages bearing representatives of the official and civil departments of the city and state the hearse carrying the body of the late Governor Johnson left the state capitol for the Union depot, where trains were taken for St. Peter.

All along the route the streets were packed with humanity eager to bid a last farewell to the governor. And, as the hearse passed by, tears stole down many a cheek and some women turned away sobbing aloud.

At the Union depot another tremendous crowd had gathered. From the hearse to the train the militia formed in double lines and stood at "present arms" while the casket was borne to the baggage car and placed inside. The interior of the car had been transformed into a bower of beauty with the magnificent floral tributes sent by friends and admirers.

M'CANN GUILTY OF GRAFTING

Chicago Police Inspector Convicted by Jury.

Chicago, Sept. 24.—Police Inspector Edward McCann, charged with "grafting," was found guilty by a jury in Judge Barnes' court. Sentence was not pronounced and will not be until after the hearing of arguments for a new trial. The law provides an indeterminate sentence in prison.

The charges against the inspector, in charge of the Des Plaines street district, were the most sensational which have been aimed against a police official in years. State's Attorney Wayman charged that "graft" aggregating many thousands of dollars had been collected from disorderly houses in return for "protection."

ONLY ONE ESCAPES BULLETS

Gang of Nineteen Russian Prisoners Makes Break for Liberty.

Osh, Asiatic Russia, Sept. 24.—A group of nineteen prisoners attempted to escape from the local jail. While walking out for exercise they attacked their wardens, wounding five, and then made a break for liberty. The remaining wardens summoned a military guard, who fired on the fleeing men. Nine were killed, nine others were wounded and one prisoner got away.

IN FIGHT FOR LOWER RATES

Nebraska Supreme Court Upholds Cut in Express Charges.

Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 25.—In the first attempt in the United States to regulate express rates the supreme court of Nebraska upheld the Sibley act, which made a flat cut of 25 per cent in express rates in Nebraska. The law has been in operation sixteen months under injunction. The contentions of the state are upheld in every respect.

FOREIGN NEWS.

The British steamer Harlow, from Newport News June 14 for Port Natal and Manila, reports that on July 27, while 180 miles from Durban, she passed a steamer afire. The vessel in question, whose name it was impossible to make out, was shortly afterwards destroyed by an explosion. It is supposed that this steamer was the missing British steamer Waratah, which, with 300 persons on board, has not been heard from since July 26.

It is generally believed at Madrid that the complications which have arisen between Spain and Mulai Hafid, the sultan of Morocco, are likely to result in a Spanish-Moroccan war, that is, a war between Spain and the forces of the sultan of Morocco in distinction to the present fighting, which is limited to the Moorish tribesmen inhabiting the Riff country.

The Spanish forces in Morocco, according to the latest dispatches received at Madrid, were eminently successful in turning Mount Guruga and surrounding the ferocious Beni-Sicar tribesmen. The government is publishing broadcast accounts of many thrilling episodes of the fighting.

Captain Ferber, an officer of the French army, was killed near Boulogne while testing an aeroplane. While in the air the machine turned completely over and then dashed to the ground. Captain Ferber was crushed to death by the motor.

Rumors that the revenue cutter Sora had been captured by Moro pirates were proven unfounded and great apprehension was relieved by the receipt at Manila of news of the safe arrival of the cutter at Sandakan, North Borneo.

Three men were guillotined at Valence, France, for a series of atrocious crimes in the department of Drome. A great crowd witnessed the executions and applauded wildly every time the knife fell.

The French dirigible military balloon Republique exploded in the air near Moulins, France, and was completely wrecked. The four army officers on board were killed.

More than ten lives were lost and property worth $2,000,000 was destroyed in the cyclone which recently swept over the province of Pinar del Rio, Cuba.

Disastrous floods have occurred in many parts of Spain. Great damage was caused in Valencia, San Sebastian, Gijon, Santander and Malaga.

A phenomenal rain of meteors, filling the skies over Honolulu, caused much excitement and some alarm among certain people.

Torrential rains have caused the loss of 100 lives and the destruction of 500 houses at Homs, a town of Northern Syria.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

With the list of dead from the recent tropical hurricane in the South well above 100 every indication points to a much larger increase of the number of perished. Many small sloops and launches are lying wrecked on the gulf shores of Louisiana and Mississippi and there seems to be little doubt but that at least some of their occupants were lost.

In a dense fog at Des Moines Conductor William L. Keser and Motorman Peter McCourty were killed and a score of passengers seriously injured by a Perry interurban car crashing head on into a Highland Park street car.

Two women were killed, another was fatally hurt and three men and a woman were seriously injured in an accident at Seattle when an automobile went through a trestle.

One person was burned to death, another instantly killed and a third seriously burned in an automobile wreck at Americus, Ga.

BIG DAMS BREAK

Disaster Causes Heavy Damage at Fergus Falls.

ELECTRIC LIGHT PLANT GONE

Had Been Installed Recently at Cost of $60,000.

Two hundred thousand dollars in property loss was caused at Fergus Falls by the breaking of several power dams in the Otter Tail river and two men narrowly escaped death.

The first dam to go out put the water works and electric light system out of business. These plants had been completed only last fall, the dam and machinery at the electric light plant costing $60,000. It is a complete loss. The two men at work in the electric light station rushed up the bank and had just reached a point of safety when the huge dam was lifted bodily from its foundations and tipped over, together with the power house and all of the electrical machinery.

Following the breaking of this dam the water came down with a roar, taking the Kirk dam, owned by private parties, and spreading out over the lowlands. Debris lodged against the pile bridge on Mount Faith avenue and the structure was soon swept away.

In the heart of the city a few small buildings were washed away. Basements were flooded in some parts of the business district and loss in goods will amount to thousands of dollars. The flood also washed out part of the Wright dam, which furnished power to two large flour mills and an electrical power plant, which supplies power for a number of factories and other industries.

NEW GOVERNOR SWORN IN

A. O. Eberhart Takes Oath of Office at St. Paul.

Adolph O. Eberhart of Mankato is now governor of the state of Minnesota.

According to the constitution his executive connection followed the death of Governor Johnson. Officially his tenure dates from the time when the oath of office was administered by Chief Justice C. M. Start at the state capitol.

GOVERNOR EBERHART.

The installation of the new governor was without ceremony or incident. Mr. Eberhart, himself pale as a ghost, apparently was keenly sensible of the great responsibilities he had inherited.

DIES IN SAVING HER SISTER

Bride of Less Than a Week Fatally Burned.

Mrs. John Moran of West Duluth, a bride of less than a week, was so horribly burned that she died about twelve hours later in St. Mary's hospital at Duluth. She was trying to save the life of her younger sister, Teresa Murphy, who had overturned a lighted lamp she was trying to place in a wall bracket and was in danger from the flames of the resulting explosion. Her sister escaped unharmed, but in carrying the lamp outside Mrs. Moran's clothing was ignited.

Mentioned for Private Secretary.

John A. Diamond, formerly a resident of Mankato but now of Minneapolis, is a likely looking possibility for secretary to Adolph O. Eberhart, the new state executive. Another possible successor to Mr. Day is W. W. Rich, custodian of the St. Paul federal building, who has been mentioned in that connection.

Governor Johnson Left Will.

It has been ascertained that the late Governor John A. Johnson left a will after all and that his estate probably will aggregate $25,000. The will was executed in May, 1907, and to his wife, Elenore Johnson, the governor bequeathed all the real and personal property belonging to him at the time of his death.

SICK HEADACHE CURES.

How to Relieve This Most Distressing Form of Illness.

Sick headache, while not dangerous, is one of the most disagreeable forms of illness. Some women are subject to it at such frequent intervals that they are incapacitated for several days at a time.

Unless the headache is known to come from some functional disorder it can generally be traced to impaired digestion or a sluggish liver. These must be treated in the interims of the headaches, as at the time nothing but alleviating remedies are possible.

A treatment that is often successful is to abstain from red meats for a time and to be careful about taking foods that ferment easily. One man who had doctored for years for sick headaches was cured by his wife seeing to it that he drank a cup of hot water with a half teaspoonful of salt in it as soon as he arose in the morning.

A half lemon in a glass of cold water taken night and morning is another remedy that has proved helpful to many.

During the attack rest and quiet are imperative. Lie down in a darkened room, drink quantities of hot water and apply either a hot water bottle or an ice bag to the temples and the base of the brain.

Cloths rung out of hot witch hazel often bring quick relief. Headache cologne if rubbed on the temples in time acts as a preventive, while some sufferers are helped by taking a cathartic at the first symptom.

In severe cases five or ten minutes' treatment with an electric battery is invaluable. This is better than massage, as the pressure is sometimes too strong when the headache is bad.

In the first stages of sick headache it can often be averted by taking abdominal and neck exercises and by putting a mustard plaster over the stomach.

How to Make Kitchen Aprons.

To the woman who does her own work there is great satisfaction in a neat, well made apron, and such a necessary article may be easily and quickly made at home and prove much more attractive than the ready made ones. An admirable apron is cut with a panel front that extends to the bust and fitted side gores that are finished with a band of buttons around the waist. A bias band around the neck is slightly shaped and buttoned to the panel front, but may be slipped on over the head without unbuttoning. There is a shaped pocket at the side, and if one is desired on the front at the bust it may be added. Denims and percales in solid colors or checked ginghams are usually chosen for work aprons, but for more elaborate ones dotted or crossbarred muslins are very dainty and launder well. The latter may be touched up with lace edged ruffles put on with beading through which colored ribbons are run, pockets set on with fine featherstitching or embroidery, and instead of the plain belt about the waist ribbon strings may be substituted.

How to Clean White Leather Shoes.

Soft white leather shoes can be cleaned in gasoline, and when not too badly soiled they clean nicely with almost any white powder. Pique or linen shoes should be washed, but often if merely dusty they can be cleaned with white chalk or flour. The regular white shoe polish can be used on them. A white polish is made with whiting and water, made medium thick and applied with a cloth. Rub the shoes free from dry powder after they have dried. Chamois bootees clean nicest in rather strong ammonia water. They should be washed in a suds with ammonia in it and rinsed in ammonia water and wiped dry with a towel. Do not dry chamois near artificial heat.

How to Overcome Cooking Odors.

A volatile oil rich in sulphur is contained in onions, turnips and cabbage. When these vegetables are boiled this oil spreads over the surface of the water and sends its fumes to the far corners of the house. If the vegetables are soaked in salted water for an hour before cooking the trouble will be less. If they are kept at the boiling point for three-quarters of an hour, but not allowed to boil, they will become tender, yet their odor will not permeate the house. If boiling for a short time is preferred as a method of cooking, a crust of very hard bread dropped into the water for ten minutes will absorb most of the oil as it rises, when the crust may be removed.

How to Get Rid of Ants.

To get rid of ants in a kitchen use on the floor over which they have to pass a spray composed of coal oil, ninety-five parts, and crystals of carbolic acid, five parts; also spray their nest if it can be found. Persist in this treatment and they will leave the place. Do not get the spray on articles of food. The spray must be exceedingly fine. Several hand sprayers are on the market and are ordinarily used in distributing disinfectants. The vapor from this solution is fatal to the ants.

How to Prevent Rusting.

It is better to use wooden pegs in bathrooms or kitchens, where damp towels or cloths are apt to be hung; otherwise the linen may rust from the iron. If iron hooks are already in place and it is not convenient to change them, give them a coat of white enamel paint. It prevents danger of rusting and is much less unsightly against the paper. If the linen has already been rusted it may be removed by rubbing with lemon juice and salt.

TIPS ON SANDWICHES.

How to Make Them Appetizing With Little Trouble.

The housewife who learns the art of making sandwiches is always well fortified against problems when serving an informal luncheon to guests. Close grained bread should be used, for coarse bread will crumble. And bread baked in round tins is preferable to that cut into slices and cut with a biscuit cutter, since the baked edges preserve the shape. Moist fillings should be laid between lettuce leaves, and by buttering the bread the moisture cannot penetrate it, making it soggy. Melted butter can be used if it is not soft enough to spread. A salmon sandwich is a tempting article of food and should be half mixed with chopped boiled egg and very thin slices of olives and pickles. The wise hostess will make two different kinds of sandwiches, some with the mixture moistened with vinegar or lemon juice, others without, for many persons cannot take acids. Practically all meat sandwiches are extremely rich, and strong condiments are noticeable in the filling, especially mustard and catchup. While white meat makes a delicate sandwich, yet the darker meats, mixed with mayonnaise and other relishes, are more appetizing in every way.

When hot sandwiches are served at a noonday luncheon at home the contents of the sandwiches are placed between the layers of bread and fried, or the bread is toasted and covered with a cooked meat filling, then covered with buttered toast and served hot. Peanuts mixed with mayonnaise and sliced egg make a good sandwich. They make a fruit sandwich which is well liked by those who are fond of fruit and bread. The filling consists of chopped dates, figs, lemon juice and ground nuts, lightly mixed with tart jelly. The bread is buttered for this. Candied fruits are often used, but often the sandwich is a bread cake, more of the angel food cake variety, filled with fruits and moistened with cherry juice or the liquor from preserved pineapple or peaches.

How to Wash Windows.

Windows should never be washed while the sun shines directly on them, for this is sure to cause streaks to appear on them. Of course the glass may be wiped dry as soon as it is washed, but this is twice the work, since one must rub until the glass is perfectly dry. This is not necessary if the sun is not shining on the windows, for it does not add anything to the appearance of the windows when finished. If the glass is badly soiled and it is necessary to apply a good deal of water to remove the dust and stains, it is better to wash with plenty of water and then let the glass dry and then sponge the window off again. This will remove all the streaks left by the first washing. Should the glass become too dry before you return to finish the drying it may be sponged over again with the sponge wrung dry out of hot water. Always let the window stand for a few minutes after washing it before drying it and it will dry much easier and in but half the time.

How to Clean Jewelry.

Small articles of jewelry, especially the silver kind, will be difficult to clean in the hands of an inexperienced person, since dull silver is more difficult to restore to its former beauty than gold. The best method is to immerse the brooch, ring or pin in a solution of cyanide of potash, procurable at any drug store. Do not let the liquid touch the fingers. Let remain in the liquid for two minutes, remove and wash in hot soapsuds. This will be sufficient to restore the brilliancy of the metal. The best method of cleaning chain bracelets or necklaces of gold is to make a paste of ammonia and whiting and rub this into the tiny links with a soft brush, afterward washing the pieces in soft water and polishing with a chamois.

How to Bake Cookies.

If your family hankers after small cakes it will be found to be a paying investment to have special baking sheets made. Have your tinner cut flat pieces of sheet iron with edges turned up about a quarter of an inch or less. These should just fit the oven, but must not be so tight as to stick. Two or three of such sheets will suffice for a good sized baking, and there is no time lost scraping pans to regrease for a second lot. The flat sides make it easier to slip a knife under and slip the cake from the pan. For chocolate drops or cookies buttered papers can be used on the sheets.

How to Pad an Ironing Board.

The next time the blanket on your ironing board wears out and you must hunt a new one to replace it try substituting newspapers. Choose thick Sunday editions, the uncolored sections, and tack to the board so that the sheets lie smoothly and of any desired thickness. Cover with muslin in the usual way. Newspapers not only have the merit of being more easily put on and causing your board to be more even, but they can be quickly and easily replaced at no cost.

How to Make a Nail Hold.

Where a wall is so soft and loose that a nail driven into it for a picture or bracket will not bear the weight of the latter it may be easily remedied. Mix a little plaster of paris in a teacup with some water. Scoop out a small hole in the wall with a screwdriver, fill it with the plaster and then insert the nail gently. It will set quite hard in a minute or so, and the nail will then be perfectly secure.

A Narrow Escape.

Edgar N. Bayliss, a merchant of Robinsonville, Del., wrote: "About two years ago I was thin and sick, and coughed all the time and if I did not have consumption, it was near to it. I commenced using Foley's Honey and Tar, and it stopped my cough, and I am now entirely well, and have gained twenty-eight pounds, all due to the good results from taking Foley's Honey and Tar."

VOL. XXVI. THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1909 NUMBER 41

GIVES HINTS OF SOO PLANS

Annual Report Indicates Through Service from Chicago to the Coast.

New Thief River Falls-Duluth Cut-off to Make Shortest Route Possible.

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 1.—The completion of the Soo yard tracks and freight station at East Seventh and Neill streets, together with the 600 foot tunnel which has been under way since last year, is expected by Janurry 1, according to the annual report of the company. President E. Pennington gives some interesting information regarding the new terminals acquired, new work under way and acquisition of the Wisconsin Central, which shows how great has become the invasion of this subsidiary line of the Canadian Pacific into United States territory.

In connection with the Wisconsin Central road, Mr. Pennington has this to say:

"By virtue of this lease the Soo line secured entrance to the cities of Chicago and Milwaukee, and in connection with the Canadian Pacific, makes possible through trains from Chicago to Vancouver, Spokane, Seattle, and North Pacific coast points." This would seem to indicate that the Soo eventually will be running through trains between Chicago and the Pacific coast.

The Wisconsin central had under construction a line into Superior and Duluth, and had acquired terminals in both cities. This line will be completed this fall, and will provide the Soo line with the shortest route between Chicago and Duluth.

Construction of a line from Moose Lake, (a point on the Brooten-Duluth line), to Thief River Falls, Minn., a distance of 200 miles, is under way. This line runs through some of the best farming and timber lands in the northern part of the state, and when completed will provide the Soo line with the shortest route from Winnipeg to Chicago. This may also be equivalent of a proposed plan of the Soo for consumation.

The gross earnings, while not equal to those of 1907, nevertheless show the substantial increase of $1,160,232.04 over 1908. The gross earnings for the fiscal year ending June 30 last aggregated $12,609,299.17, of which $8,622,167.84 was for freight and 2,947,875.36 for passenger. The freight earnings for 1908 amounted to $7,828,851.60 and the passenger to $2,031,221.84.

The operating expenses were 56.3 per cent of the gross earnings, compared with 63 per cent for the preceeding year. An increase of $1,275,820.54 is shown in the net earnings and $532,775.49 in the surplus for the year.

Gives Blood in Vain.

P. M. Waters, station agent of the Great Northern road at Conway, N. D., was buried there Saturday, but he might be living had the strength of his son. Michael, aged 21, been able to stand the loss of more than a quart of blood, which was taken from his father's viens on the latter's deathbed.

Mr. Waters, his son and the latter's bride attended the fair at Seattle. In a street car wreck in which twenty were hurt, Mr. Waters suffered the fracture of both legs in two places. Three amputations were preformed and when his strength had left him after the third operation, because of the loss of blood, the son calmy told the surgeon that he would supply what blood his father needed to regain his strength.

The surgeons accepted this offer. When they had removed a quart of the young man's blood and transmitted it to the father's viens the young man's bride protested, because she could see her husband getting weak. The aged man died soon after. The son was scarcely able to make the trip back to Conway with the body.—Minneapolis Journal.

Last Half Must Be Rece'd Soon.

The last half of real estate taxes must be paid before the first of November to avoid penalty. The People's State Bank has a complete list of Northern Red Lake and Eastern Marshall counties and you can pay your tax at this bank if you so desire, and thus save yourself time and trouble.

Centralizers on the Run.

It will be gratifying to the farmers of the state who have been pounding long and long for the local creamery to know that there has been less cream shipped to the centralizers from Minnesota the past year than for the year previous. This is not surprising, for the creameries have paid on the average more money per pound for butterfat than have the centralizers. Farmers are beginning to study the situation, and they find that wherever there is a good creamery in operation the centralizers pay more for cream. But when they find a point where the creamery is not running they pay as they see fit. Some of the local buttermakers are getting on to this, and they are keeping their patrons informed as to what the centralizers are doing. Does this not indicate that when the creamery is knocked out there will be a a different situation, and the Kansas prices will prevail in Minnesota? Another and very significant thing that gives proof of the fact that the local creameries are giving the centralizers a hard chase is the application of the centralizers to the Central Freight Association asking to have the rate on butter in less than carloads lots raised 15c per hundred. They want every advantage, and the Minnesota Dairyman wants to put up to the farmers in this state that now is the time to stand by the local creamery. Everybody knows that the Northwestern Dairyman published at St. Paul, was started in the interest of the centralizers and it never contains a line to encourage the local creamery, but has page after page devoted to how they have failed or should fail. This sheet is being sent free of charge to the farmers all over the Northwest in the hope of making friends of the central plants.—Minnesota Dairymen.

Buys Valuable Property.

Mayor Hamre closed a deal last week with G. Amundson whereby he becomes the owner of the property at the corner of LaBree avenue and Second street occupied at present by the Westine saloon and Rolland Bros. meat market. While the buildings have little value the location is one of the best in the city and Mr. Hamre paid a large consideration for the property. It is his intention to remove the present building next spring and erect a modern business block on this site.

WILL GRADE THIS FALL

Work on New Soo Extensions to Duluth to Be Commenced This Week.

Halvorson Bros. of Plummer, Take Contract for Grading First Five Miles.

(From the Plummer Pioneer.)

Mr. A. McDougall, representing Foley Bros., acompanied by Thomas Higgins, another railroad contractor, spent Monday and Tuesday here looking over the country thru which the new line will run Foley Bros. have the contract for all the grading on the new line and they have sublet the first twenty-five miles at this end to Mr. Higgins. Mr. McDougall stated that grading would start as soon as the survey was finished and would be rushed as fast as possible as trains are to be running by the first of June.

Their equipment will arrive next week and the Carlson building has been rented for office quarters. They are subleting as much of the work as possible as they will be taxed to their utmost to get the grading done in time. Halverson Bros., the Plummer contractors have taken the contract for the first five miles out from here from Mr. Higgins and will start work as soon as they can get things in shape. Mr. McDougall returned here Friday to see about subleting more of the work and from here he went to Thief River Falls to see contractors there.

As this will be the headquarters for the contractors, several hundred men will be paid off here thru the winter. This means that Plummer will see some lively times during the next six months and just watch her grow next summer.

Minnesota Farmers' Institute Circular Number 16.

Barnyard manure is undoubtedly one of the most valuable by products of the farm. It is almost an absolute necessity on the farm if the soil is to be maintained at a high state of productivity. At a conservative estimate, six to ten loads of barnyard manure applied to a cornfield, the corn crop followed by a grain crop and seeded to grass, left one or two years to grass, then plowed and sown to grain, will produce enough more during the four or five years following the application of the manure to return from $2 to $3 per ton on the manure applied.

It is essential, if crops are to be removed year after year carrying with them a part of the plant food stored in the soil, that some steps be taken to replace the plant food removed. Manure not only adds plant food directly to the soil, put it also aids in liberating portions of the mineral plant foods, as potash and phosphoric acid, that are in the soil in an available form.

The three elements of plant food liable to become exhausted in most soils are nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash, nitrogen may be easily supplied to the soil by growing clover and other legume crops. Manure adds nitrogen and potash, and some phosphoric acid, but its chief function in regard to the two latter elements is to assist in liberating the stores of these elements locked in the soil. Phosphoric acid and potash are found in most Minnesota soils in quantities sufficient to produce a hundred or more ordinary crops. Plant food that is soluble, that is dissolves in water as sugar will, can not remain in the soil in large quantities because it is carried out by water flowing through the ground. Hence, it is found in an unsoluble form in the soil, and the problem of the farmer is to make this plant soluble while the crops are growing and can use it. Barnyard manure and other vegetable matter when decaying gives off an acid which acts on the surface of soil particles and aids in dissolving small amounts of plant food.

Considering the great value of barnyard manure and the need of it to enrich the partially depleted soils and supply the vegetable matter rapidly used up by corn and grain crops, it seems that more care should be exercised to save in the best possible way the millions of dollars worth of this valuable by-product produced every year in Minnesota.

It has been amply proved by experiment that the greatest value is obtained from manure if it is applied directly to the field as soon as it is made. If left in piles about the barn it decomposes and much of its value is lost and is leached out by rains. By applying directly to the field spreading it, very little decomposition takes place until it is worked into the soil. Then practically all of the value is retained by the soil and the additional benefit of decomposition in dissolving mineral plant food is secured.

Hon. Donald Robertson of Argyle connected pleasure with business during a brief visit to Roseau the fore part of the week. Altho he did not make this visit for any political purpose, he stated to some of his intimate friends that he would seek re-election to the legislature. Mr. Robertson's record in the House is good. Last winter he was a strong factor and at times important questions were determined according to the stand he assumed. He served on several committees that considered mighty measures, where he never truckled to the interests, but was always awake to what he considered beneficial to the public.—Roseau Region.

School Notes.

The September reports for the grades are marked low purposely. This marking works no injustice to any child, as it is uniform throughout the city, and, for obvious reasons, which space forbids reciting, is preferable to a higher standing for September, the first month of the school year.

Music and drawing are being systematically taught in every grade in the city. Music alone is presented in the high school on account of lack of teachers and room.

The high school enrolls Soo students from Donaldson on the north to Mahnomen on the south; while from the Great Northern line enrollment cards show every town from St. Hilaire to Roseau represented. Nearly all the adjoining rural sections furnish one or more students. Three widely removed points lead in the number of young people they send to the high school. They are as follows: Newfolden; John Ihle, Millie Ihle, Olava Sollom, Milda Shefveland, Gunhild Sollom, Martha Bjorneses, Olga Bjorneses; St. Hilaire: Neil Dahl, Andy Dahl, Edwin Dahl, Selma Hoff, Gina Finstad; Kuchnel, on the reservation: Dena Wold, Stella Arndt, Gardo McMahon.

The September high school enrollment for last year was 110; this year, the same month shows 148 regularly enrolled, and six more students entered high this week.

The high school football team played a draw with Crookston high last Saturday, the score standing 5 to 5 at the close. Much disorder prevailed thruout the contest and the crowd seriously interfered with the plays. This always works to the advantage of the home team, and, as a result, Crookston won a touchdown when they could not have done so had the spectators kept off the field.

Fosston, the best team the locals met last year, will try conclusions with the boys on the home grounds here next Saturday afternoon. The contest will be fast and worth going to see. Unless the public support the boys they will fail to meet expenses and will be forced to play all their future games in other cities. With good weather a large crowd should attend.

The classes had become so large in high school that the work was partially reorganized last week. The seating plan was also changed to an alphabetical arrangement of the students by years in high. The state high school board suggests 20 as the maximum number of pupils for efficient class work in high school; some of the local classes number over 40.

It has been suggested by some that the best way to overcome the crowded condition in the high school is to refuse to enroll any more nonresident students. This cannot be done, as the 200 state high schools are by law compelled to receive all children qualified to enter same. This works no injustice to local taxpayers, as the state aids each high school annually by a gift of $1750 and Thief River Falls also receives $750 per year for the maintenance of the normal department. These are in addition to the state apportionment of about $5 for each student who attends the school for 40 days during the year.

Young Man Drowned.

H. O. Koefod, who was formerly manager of the A. L. Himle store in this city but is at present a traveling salesman on the road, was in the city Tuesday and while here received a telegram to the effect that his brother, M. Koefod, assistant cashier of the Security State Bank of Spooner, had been drowned in the Rainy river on Sunday afternoon. The body was recovered on Monday and on Tuesday passed through the city on the Great Northern passenger for Ashby, Minn., to be buried. Mr. Koefod spent about a year in this city a few years ago and was quite well known to a number of the residents here.

Farmer Hines Insane.

Humbolt, Sask., Sept. 27.—Farmer Hines, president of the Farmer's Railway Company which has a charter for a line of railway between Humbolt and Melfort, is reported to have gone violently insane. He has been engaged recently in laying out townsites north of Humbolt. Farmer Hines was in an asylum in the United States some years ago for a while but recovered and was given his liberty. He is now at a farmer's house in the Lake Lenoir district and steps are being taken to have him removed to an asylum. In regard to the future of the Farmers' Railway it is stated that a meeting of the directors will likely be held at once and a new president elected.

CHOICE MISCELLANY

G. B. Shaw's Command of Italian.

George Bernard Shaw is a man of varied acquirements, but a knowledge of Italian is not among them. A report became circulated, however, to the effect that the author of "Man and Superman" spoke Italian fluently and led to his being interviewed recently by a representative of the Giornale d'Italia. Mr. Shaw disclaimed the knowledge with which he had been credited and explained amusingly how the legend arose.

"Awhile ago," he said, "I was in Milan with a party of English folk. We were dining at a restaurant, and our waiter knew no language other than his own. When the moment came to pay, we were unable to make him understand that we wanted not one bill, but twenty-four separate ones. My friends insisted that I must know Italian, so to act as interpreter I racked my memory for chips from the language of Dante, but in vain. All of a sudden a line from the opera 'The Huguenots' flashed to the brain—'Ognuno per se; per tutti il cielo.' (Every man for himself and heaven for all.) I declaimed it. The army of waiters were doubled up with laughter, my friends applauded wildly, and my fame as an Italian scholar has been on the increase ever since."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A Rest For the Philadelphian.

The Philadelphian was talking.

"I am an old fashioned man," he said. "I detest the modern innovations. Everything is high speed, high speed. We go at breakneck pace over the ground, through the water, even in the air. The trend of invention seems solely to annihilate space and distance. We are living our lives too fast."

Here was the New Yorker's opportunity to gibe at the proverbial slowness of Philadelphia, and he was quick to grasp it.

"What you want to do," he began, "is to get away from Slowville. Come over to the big town once in awhile and see the sights."

"I frequently do," replied the Philadelphian. "It is only a two hours' trip to New York, and I often run over just to take a ride in your horse cars. It is the most restful thing in the world for me to ride in a horse car again. The sensation carries me back to the days long ago when we had them in Philadelphia. Now, do you know"—

But the New Yorker had flown.—New York Times.

Policing London's Streets.

There are fewer mounted men in the London police in proportion to the force than in New York, and it is no criticism of the London police to say that neither the men nor the mounts appeared to me as good or attractive looking as those we have, nor are they used as freely or as advantageously, if I may be permitted to say it, as in New York.

It requires vigilance and activity on the part of the pedestrian to cross London streets in safety. Indeed, in many respects they are even more dangerous than those of New York, and to this condition the swarming omnibuses contribute generously. The taxicab is rapidly replacing the hansom and the four wheeled vehicle. To my great surprise this vehicle is run through the crowded streets at a comparatively high rate of speed, and as there are a great number of them I am astonished that there are not more accidents.—William McAdoo in Century.

A Loyal Valet.

The Duke of Connaught has always been very popular in his military capacity. The servants in his household adore him. Soon after he first took up his command at Dublin some few years ago his valet came to him, asking for a fortnight's leave. The duke noticed that he gave no reason, but granted him permission. Exactly eleven days after the man returned, and then the duke demanded his reason for wishing a holiday. "I wanted to have a fight, sir," was the reply, "and I knew I would get badly marked. But I'm all right now again." The duke immediately became interested, but it was a long time before he elicited the fact that the valet had been fighting a man who had referred to the duke as a "feather bed" soldier.—Argonaut.

His Old Tie.

M. Fallieres is one of those people who hate to be photographed. On his election to the presidency of the French republic the ordeal was not to be avoided, and he submitted to it. The photographer's suggestion, however, that he should put on a more fashionable tie did not meet with his approval.

"What!" he exclaimed. "Change my tie! Change the tie that I have worn for thirty years! Never! I would rather not be photographed at all."

The cravat to which the president has so long been attached is a huge butterfly bow slung round his neck by a piece of elastic.

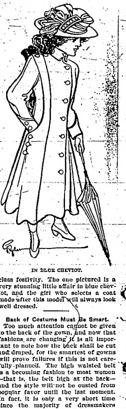
Intoxicated Children.

The official reporter to the alcohol commission in Budapest states that in Hungary mothers often give brandy to their children to check their crying and that in communities where this beverage is unusually cheap some children receive it regularly for breakfast. In hardly any of the schools is there a pupil who is a total abstainer, and in some cases, it is said, members of the first and second elementary classes have been known to come to school in such a state of intoxication that they were unable to attend to their lessons.

WOMAN AND FASHION

Coat For the Schoolgirl.

Every girl who contemplates going away to school this fall will require a serviceable coat to wear on cold or stormy days or to cover up her pretty evening dress when going to some class festivity. The one pictured is a very stunning little affair in blue cheviot, and the girl who selects a coat made after this model will always look well dressed.



IN BLUE CHEVIOT.

Back of Costume Must Be Smart.

Too much attention cannot be given to the back of the gown, and now that fashions are changing it is all important to note how the back shall be cut and draped, for the smartest of gowns will prove failures if this is not carefully planned. The high waisted belt is a becoming fashion to most women—that is, the belt high at the back—and the style will not be ousted from popular favor until the last moment. In fact, it is only a very short time since the majority of dressmakers have realized how becoming it is and have striven to carry it out correctly.

Lower and lower is the waist line dropping, and the line of the back is at the moment in the exaggerated rendering absurdly grotesque. Some of the latest models show a pointed long waist line at the back, below which the material of the skirt is gathered on a cord. It is a fashion that would make the most beautiful and graceful woman look awkward and ugly, but it is being attempted, and the only hope is that a radical modification will be demanded.

For the Trotteur Frock.

For the tailored suit—the smart trotteur frock this autumn—the dull finished materials will undoubtedly hold first place. Crape surfaced serge will probably be the most worn material that one will see where well gowned women congregate. Homespuns—a rougher material than crape serge—with a perceptible hair weave on the surface are being shown both here and abroad. There is some talk of the revival of zibeline, a material on the order of homespun, only more so. Bedford cord is another familiar fabric among the new arrivals. It is lighter in weight than the old time version—a cotele weave, they call it abroad. It is very good looking, and so is its prototype, ottoman cloth, a woolen material with a slightly raised rib. It looks a little like the cote de cheval, or "side of a horse," that is one of the materials which they have been using in Paris lately. The new fall material, however, is heavier and more closely woven than that of the summer.

The Widening Shoulders.

Everywhere one sees some manner of drapery that will give width to the shoulders. Fichus have returned. Bretelles are extraordinarily wide and swing well over the arm seam.

Draperies that were recently old fashioned are now used on the smartest gowns. The entire effort seems to be to hide the armhole, when last winter just the reverse was true.

Old fashioned handkerchief draperies of soft muslin, lace edged, are placed at a point in the back, brought over the shoulders and down to the bust, where they are crossed and then tucked into the belt.

The general lines in clothes seem to be drapery above the waist and below the hips, almost at the knees. Between the space is snugly fitted.

The Trend of Fashion.

Those who follow the trend of fashion cannot fail to note the gradual coming into favor of yellow for day wear and of green for evening; also the substitution of pink for white net in the making of the little chemisette that is still universal for the afternoon frock. And apropos of the chemisette it is well to remember that the secondary and lower chemisette of chiffon matching the color of the frock is still considered a very decided advantage in preventing a certain crudeness in having the colored fabric coming right on to the fine white or pale pink chemisette.

GOOD FROM THE START

Fifty-five years ago Gund's Beers were made in a log brewery and brewed in a six-gallon kettle. The superior grade of barley grown about this then sparsely settled region was the chief attraction that drew this famous German brewmaster to La Crosse. Now it is the heart of the world's finest barley growing belt and the cream of every barley crop comes to his brewery, from which combined with the finest hops grown in Old Bohemia, is brewed. Instead of a log brewery today, there stands a mammoth model 20th century plant operated and lighted by electricity to which visitors are always welcome.

It is impossible to brew a beer of a higher quality than Peerless. You should see that it is always in your home. Telephone us today for a case of Peerless, the beer of matchless flavor.

How to Remove Rust From Steel.

To remove rust from steel dissolve a quarter of an ounce of camphor gum in nearly half a pound of lard. When the mixture is melted and blended take off the scum, and when it begins to thicken add enough black lead to give a deep iron color. Rub the ornaments with the mixture and leave them for a day and night; then polish them with a soft cloth and a brush that will go into the crevices and apertures. Another remedy for cut steel that is not badly rusted is fine emery powder mixed with vaseline or paraffin. This is rubbed thoroughly into the steel work, and then putty powder is applied with oil and rubbed off with a soft cloth. To prevent cut steel ornaments from rusting it is a good idea to rub them occasionally with vaseline.

How to Travel Without Fatigue.

The secret of traveling without fatigue is to abandon thoughts of amusement and to conserve the energies. Do not let your nerves get the upper hand of you. Refrain as much as possible from conversation, for in the noise of travel talking soon becomes tiring. Avoid reading, for the use of the eyes while the train is in motion seems to induce sick headaches and nausea. All this seems to say that you will have an uninteresting and tiresome journey, but if your trip is a short one isn't this worth while if you can reach your destination bright eyed and with an undaunted spirit, ready to enter gayly into anything that is expected of you?

How to Scatter a Threatened Boil.

A French doctor has had great success with scattering boils by applying at the first sign of inflammation compresses wet with equal parts of tincture of arnica, tincture of iodine and spirits of camphor. Continue until the trouble seems to be passed. If with the compresses one drinks sulphur water or red clover blossom tea it will help to scatter the boils and overcome the tendency.

A REGENERATED COTTON FARM.

During the past four or five years the department of agriculture at Washington has issued bulletins giving account of some of the best managed farms of different types to be found in the country with the idea that such practical object lessons would be beneficial to other farmers not meeting with so large a measure of success. The plan has seemed to be a decided success, and much interest has been manifested in the published bulletins. The latest to be put out by the department is farmers' bulletin No. 364, which gives an account of a profitable cotton farm in South Carolina. Seven year ago, when the present owner took possession of this piece of land, it was a played out, rundown proposition, a type of scores to be found in the cotton belt, producing but five to eight bushels of corn or 300 pounds of seed cotton per acre. The methods adopted for its regeneration were a deep and thorough cultivation of the soil, the use of barnyard manure and some commercial fertilizers, the rotation of crops and the exercise of industry and good judgment on the part of the owner. The farm contains 132 acres, only half of which is devoted to crops. The first year the new methods were tried one and one-half bales of cotton and thirty-seven bushels of corn were produced per acre. At present the owner gets a yield of two and one-quarter bales of cotton, eighty-five bushels of corn and eighty bushels of oats per acre. He keeps twenty-four head of native cattle, mainly for the manure, though they give him a small profit besides. From a discouraging and bankrupt proposition this farm has been brought to the point where it yields a large income and a handsome profit. The bulletin, which may be had by writing one's representative or senator or to the department at Washington, should be in the hands of every cotton state farmer who is not making the most of his agricultural opportunities. It will give him light.

TIME TO WAKE UP.

It is becoming more apparent every day to those who have a thought for the future welfare of our varied and extensive horticultural interests that congress should take up at an early date serious consideration of laws which will secure a stringent and thorough inspection of fruits and all kinds of nursery stock brought into the country or shipped from state to state. Measures of this kind have been before congress at previous sessions, but somehow the nurseryman has seemed to have a bigger pull than the enormous fruit growing interests of the country. It's time this thing was turned about and the large class who suffer from the shipment of diseased nursery stock were given a hearing. These people have representatives at Washington; but, as in a good many other instances, it is the "other fellow," the special interest chap, whose claims are first considered. To show the need of the enactment of a law of the character referred to, there may be cited from many instances the importation last year on pear and apple seedlings from France of numerous nests of the brown tailed moths, the worst insect pest known, and the scattering of it all over the country. Much the same thing took place in the case of the European scale, resembling the San Jose scale, which was likewise scattered broadcast. These are cases in which an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure and costs but an infinitesimal part as much. A number of states have stringent inspection regulations, but these only effect a partial relief. Such laws should be made nation wide.

OPENINGS FOR HUSTLERS.

Opportunities for securing cheap land that has real value are about gone. Henceforth the energies of those who do not go to Canada or elsewhere will have to be devoted to a better handling of lands already under cultivation or the restoration of those which have been reduced to bankruptcy through long continued soil robbery. While there would be discouragements at the start, it would seem that along this line there are many good openings in eastern and southern states for any man who has the grit and intelligence necessary to succeed in a pioneer proposition. The regeneration mentioned can be effected through a more thorough cultivation of the soil, the use of natural and commercial fertilizers, the adoption of a crop rotation which should include one of the legumes—clover, alfalfa, field peas or beans—and a change from the selling of the raw products of the farm to marketing the finished products in the shape of beef, mutton, pork, poultry, dairy products, etc. Many a farm in the sections mentioned is being made over by the adoption of these methods, and hundreds of others may be if the right man gets hold of them.

The chief drawback with the best hired men that one can get is that they are likely to possess brains and energy enough so that just as soon as possible they like to go into business on their own hook.

While it is not an infallible sign, it is usually the case that the fewest weeds are found on the farms which are best and most profitably managed, as the strength of soil consumed in producing them cannot be utilized by growing crops.

If the young pigs are weak boned and break down on the way to market or before, it is pretty good evidence that the ration given them has not had enough bone forming material in it. This is just as necessary as the fat and flesh forming elements and may be provided by feeding the pigs wood or cob charcoal and ashes during the growing period.

The temper and disposition of the cow are largely determined by the care she receives as a heifer. This is brought to mind by a fine little Jersey heifer we know of that was bothered by some thoughtless little girls. She has sharp horns and now makes for any girl of the same size who happens to come near her. A bad habit has been formed, and the horns will have to come off.

Argentina exports more beef to the United Kingdom than does the United States, and no small part of her ability to do this lies in the 9,000,000 acres of alfalfa which at present furnish much of the forage for her beef cattle. It takes from one to two acres of the legume to carry a mature steer through the year. The best steers raised are sold for export and fetch the grower about $50 per head.

For two or three years past sheepmen of the southwest have sustained some loss from what is styled by the Mexicans "pingue," an ailment resulting from the eating of the rubber plant or weed. While little systematic study has been given the disease, a ranger on the Carson national forest reserve in New Mexico has tried drenches of hot water and salt with very good success, the drenches being given every hour until the animals showed improvement. Speedy relief followed the application of the remedy, which, to say the least, is cheap and harmless.

It is frequently stated by those opposed to the tuberculin test as a means of ridding dairy herds of tuberculosis that if the tuberculin is injected into the system of an animal not affected it will contract the disease as a consequence. This misconception seems to overlook the fact that the culture which is used in making the test is thoroughly and completely sterilized before it is used, making a contraction of the disease in this manner by a healthy animal an impossibility. Moreover, the extensive use of the tuberculin in testing hundreds of dairy herds gives practical proof that healthy animals do not contract the disease in the manner suggested.

The farmers' wives in a section of the small grain belt this year are on a strike in the matter of furnishing sumptuous spreads for from fifteen to twenty thrashing hands and declare that hereafter thrashing crews that come to their places will have to bring along their own mess tent and cook. It's a wonder this strike hasn't come sooner, as in good conscience the average farmer's wife has enough to do in the line of routine duties without being swamped with cooking for thrashers. A feature that has made a bad matter worse in the past is the fact that there has been a bit of rivalry between the housewives of some localities to bear the reputation of preparing the most elaborate fare.

Not all real estate agents are liars, but enough are so given to exaggerating that it is a pretty good idea for the land seeker before tying up his hard earned money in a proposition to inspect very thoroughly the piece he contemplates buying. This should include digging down several feet with a spade to ascertain exactly what the subsoil is, whether soil at all or only gravel and stone, and whether the water comes too near to the surface. This procedure may be deemed "fussy" by some, but it is likely to save a good deal of fruitless "fussing" later on. If the land in question were a gift such minute examination of what lies beneath the surface would doubtless be in poor taste, but not so if it is received in exchange for good hard money.

The Wisconsin and Minnesota experiment stations, in co-operation with the department of agriculture, are this season conducting a series of experiments in the northern parts of the states with a view to finding out what are the cheapest as well as the most effective methods of removing the stumpage from cut over lands, many of which at present, owing to the difficulty of getting rid of the stumps, are not being readily taken up by settlers for agricultural purposes. Statistics will also be collected from firms at present engaged in clearing land, and the gist of the findings and the results of new experiments will be later embodied in a bulletin. This clearing of the land after it has been lumbered is an expensive as well as a mighty prosy job, and if methods can be discovered by which it can be done any easier the efforts of these investigators will be well worth while.

NOTES FROM BEVERLY

[Special Correspondence.]

If the president has been exercising his powers of observation and study of human beings since he came to Beverly he is convinced that not every tradition holds good when it is at home. There is an old, old story that the people of New England are so thrifty that they cannot enjoy themselves, and this is followed up by the further statement that they cannot separate themselves from a dollar without undergoing great pain.

Judging by what has happened in and around Beverly, these stories are gross libels on the people of Massachusetts.

Not Fond of Money.

First of all, there are the two old ladies who own a strip of ground which lies between the summer home of H. C. Frick, the millionaire, and the waters of Beverly bay. Unless a summer home has frontage on the water in these parts the owner is not exactly the thing. Neighbors look upon him as a sort of social scalawag. Therefore Mr. Frick made up his mind to buy the land between him and the sea.

"I will give you $1,000,000 for that land," he said to the two old ladies.

They went home and thought the matter over. The next day they sent Mr. Frick a note. It said:

"Your kind offer is declined. If we had $1,000,000 we would not know what to do with it."

Thriftiness Not Apparent.

There is a hotel keeper in this town who cares even less than did the two old ladies near the Frick estate about real money. Since the president came to Beverly there has been a rush to the hotels of the town by tourists who want to see the Taft cottage. Prices have gone up, and the hotel proprietors have been in clover.

When two young men went to one of the proprietors and asked for a room he said:

"I have a single room with a single bed, and I have another room with two single beds in it, but that room has been taken by a fellow."

"Move the spare bed into the other room which now has only one bed," was suggested.

"No," replied the host of the hotel; "it's too warm to lug beds around now. Besides, I don't want to disturb the furniture."

All of which was another great blow to New England thrift.

The President's Guards.

Since President Taft arrived in Beverly he has been closely guarded by eight secret service men. All day and all night long these guards are at his home, one in front, the other in the rear of the house. The chief guard here is James Sloan.

The president is perfectly willing to be guarded, unlike President Roosevelt, who often carried a revolver himself and kept assassins away by the reputation he had for aggressiveness and fight.

One of the men with Mr. Taft said that the worst scare he has yet had was on the president's recent trip through the south. In Richmond the president was to speak, and over 15,000 negroes were there to see him. The president's automobile got into the middle of the crowd, which became almost frantically boisterous. The negroes crowded up against it, shouting to each other. The guards, the only white men in the crowd, were jostled about and gradually forced to form a little cordon around the president. Then way was made for the machine, and it gradually worked its way out of the crowd.

Sloan Not a Rough Rider.

Secret Service Agent James Sloan is not, as is popularly supposed, a rough rider. He is a native of Danville, Ill., Uncle Joe Cannon's home town. The keen witted, stalwart little bodyguard of the president was brought up right across the street from the home of the speaker. He used to be a shouter for Uncle Joe, but not since Uncle Joe showed his teeth to President Roosevelt. Sloan was T. R.'s bodyguard for seven years. He idolized the strenuous president, and the latter thought well of his loyal protector.

Marshal For Uncle Sam.

Sloan's trip with the president on the latter's western and southern journey will probably be about the last big piece of work he will do in the secret service, as he has been picked by Taft for United States marshal for one of the Illinois districts. He will assume the duties of this office about Dec. 1.

"I presume that people have got the impression that I was a rough rider from the fact that while Mr. Roosevelt was president I attended seven of the reunions of the famous command and became intimately acquainted with many of the members of the regiment. They used to address me as 'Comrade,' and I have had many good times with the men of Roosevelt's old regiment," said Sloan the other day.

Taft Likes Newspaper Men.

Mr. Taft is always glad to see newspaper men, and with those in whom he has confidence has no hesitancy in talking freely about public affairs and the policies of his administration. He has a rule, however, which most newspaper men observe—he is not to be quoted directly on important public questions in his offhand talks. When he desires to be quoted one of his secretaries gives out a typewritten statement.

The president finds time to run over the leading papers and keeps pretty well informed of public opinion by reading the news and editorial columns of a half dozen of the big papers of the country.

It is probable that if Dr. Cook could have brought the north pole home with him Peary would have insisted that it was a counterfeit pole.

Gov. Eberhardt will appoint Ralph Wheelock, of Minneapolis, as his private secretary. Mr. Wheelock will be personally acceptable to the Republicans of Minnesota and will make an efficient secretary for the governor. He will be of little value in building up any political machine for the governor, however.

An interesting fact about Governor Eberhardt is that his name was originally Olson, says the Brainard Dispatch. But there were in Mankato, where he lived, half a dozen or more Adolph Olsons, and, as a result, there were many instances of confusion of identity, not the least of these being errors in the delivery of important mail. So when the future state official was married he asked the court to permit him to take the name of his wife, a petition that was granted and since then he has been Adolph O. Eberhardt.

Red Lake Falls Man Injured.

Crookston, Minn., Oct. 1.—Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock Edward Brouillett, wheat buyer for the Crookston Milling company, was probably fatally injured and, but for his remarkable strength and nerve, would have been dead before his plight was discovered. He had gone to the cupola of the mill for some reason, and a half hour afterwards, when a farmer who had been waiting to have his grain weighed made complaint to the head miller, the latter started on a trip of investigation and finally found Brouillet caught in the elevator belt, with his left arm broken near the wrist, and in a fainting condition. The head miller cut the belt and the injured man was taken to St. Vincent's hospital, where it is feared he cannot recover.

When found he had his feet braced, and with almost superhuman strength had managed to stop the belt, though the pully was revolving under such a strain that the shaft was bent. Had he lost consciousness his body would have been hurled around the shaft and his life beaten out in a moment. He fainted as soon as released by the head miller who slashed the belt in two. Brouillett came from Red Lake Falls two years ago and has a wife and several children here.

First to File.

Ed Wilcox left Tuesday for International Falls where he will spend a week or ten days looking over some timber land near that city. Before leaving Mr. Wilcox made arrangements for the circulating of a petition which will place his name upon the city ticket as a candidate for mayor of Thief River Falls. Being the first candidate to file for this office, Mr. Wilcox's name will head the list, which is considered by some to be an advantage.

Notice of Foreclosure Sale

Whereas, default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by Amos Heuer and Augusta Heuer, his wife, of Red Lake county, Minnesota, as mortgagors, to Peter Klene, of Dubuque, Iowa, as mortgagee, upon and covering the following described real estate situate in the county of Red Lake in the state of Minnesota, to-wit:

The southeast quarter of section seven, township one-hundred fifty-two, north, range forty-five, west of the fifth principal meridian and containing one-hundred sixty acres according to the government survey.

Which said mortgage bears date September 9, 1904, and was recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for said Red Lake county on October 8, 1904, at two o'clock p. m., in Book 14, of Mortgages at page 470.

Whereas, there is due upon said mortgage at the date of this notice for principal and interest, the sum of one thousand nine hundred one dollars and ninety cents, and no action has been instituted to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now therefore notice is hereby given that under and pursuant to the power of sale therein contained, and the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the real property therein described will be sold by the sheriff of the county of Red Lake in the state of Minnesota, at public auction for cash at the front door of the court house in the city of Red Lake Falls, in said Red Lake county, on Saturday, November 20, 1909, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to pay the amount which shall then be due upon said mortgage and the costs of foreclosure thereof, including an attorney's fee of seventy-five dollars, therein provided for in case of foreclosure thereof.

Dated October 1, 1909.

---FINE SUITS FOR---

AUTUMN AND WINTER WEAR

. . . The new suits are here and we believe that when you see them you will agree with us in saying that they are the acme of perfection in tailoring. The new patterns and colorings are amongst the most handsome and attractive we have ever brought to this city, and the styles are finer and better than usual.

While the fabrics are largely in the nature of novelties, they are far removed from freakish fads which some people have been trying to force upon the public. We draw a distinct line between freak clothing and desirable novelties.

Some people go to buy a suit—try on the coat and pay their good money—they've been educated to buy that way. We put the vest and trousers on and fit you from heel to collar. If it isn't right in the store it won't be any better when you get home. It must be right or you can't have it from us.

The tax levy for state revenue purposes is to be exactly 1 mill. This announcement was made Tuesday by State Auditor Iverson. It follows the report of the state tax commissioners on the total valuation in the state. Last year the tax rate was 1.5. It has been as low as 1 mill only once in the history of the state. The low rate this year is due to higher assessments and the ruling of the supreme court that the pork barrel was unconstitutional. The latter called for an expenditure of $300,000 a year. The expense of operating the state machinery will be considerably reduced as a result of the decision.

J. J. Sutton has an 80 acre field of flint corn that is fully matured and ripe. The ears have eight rows and the corn is filled to the end ten inches long. There is no question of doubt left in the minds of agriculturists but that Marshall county can produce corn as good, if not better than either Iowa or Illinois and it is no longer an experiment, but the coming crop of this country.—Argyle Banner.

The Hendrum Review states that the butter manufactured by the Hendrum and Perley creameries is affected by the condition of cream cans used by the the patrons of those creameries. The cans have been in use from five to seven years and as a result the butter has a "metallic" taste which is caused by the rusty cream cans. The Review states that the creamery inspector is expected to arrive and look into the matter and will undoubtedly condemn all the old cans.

It is unfortunate that there is not some way of getting the mail order houses to contribute their share of taxes for the state or county government, school and road expenses. Merchants are heavy taxpayers and there is at least that much discrimination between them and the mail order houses. Besides, the home merchant contributes liberally to the churches and charities and invests his surplus in improvements which increase the taxable property. His goods are inspected before bought, and if they are found defective after the sale he must make good for them. The tariff protects the trusts from foreign competition, but there is no protection for the country merchant from the mail order house except the good sense of the buyer in building up the community.—Buffalo Journal.

An unusual accident happened on the farm of August Wendorf near Hewitt one night last week. A gallon syrup pail about half full of milk was left outside the house. During the night one of Mr. Wendorff's cows found the pail, and in an effort to get the milk, got her nose so far into the pail that she could neither get it out, or get air. In the morning the cow was found dead, having smothered.

IS THE G. N. SPARRING?

Bagley People Think That the Great American Railway Is the Great Northern.

Believe That Road Is to Be Built from Thief River Falls to Bagley.

The following special from Bagley will be of much local interest, inasmuch as the people of this vicinity never had any faith in the survey made from this city southeast by the so-called Great American Railway company:

Bagley, Oct. 4.—A rumor which will not down, and which apparently has some foundation, is that the line surveyed from Thief River Falls to Weme postoffice, in Clearwater county, by a large party of engineers, under the name of the Great American Railroad company, is in reality a Great Northern survey.

The line, from all indications, will connect with the Great Northern at either Ebro or Bagley and pass just south of the Soo, cutting off all of the best territory in Clearwater, northern Polk and Red Lake counties.

What gives color to the rumor is the fact that the route selected has the very best grade, is run in such shape as to cut off all the best farming country from the Soo, and the further fact that the engineers, now that they have run and staked out their line through the richest portions of these counties, are quietly resting at their camps and watching the route selected by the Soo through Clearwater county, with the intention, apparently, of continuing their survey in this county in the manner best suited to get the best territory with the building of the least number of miles.

Should the Soo people build their line sixteen to eighteen miles north of Bagley, the proposed new line will no doubt connect with the Great Northern at Ebro, but should they build twelve miles north of Bagley, the line will then be run direct to Bagley, shutting off the richest farming country in the county from the Soo.

This party of surveyors have been in the field for the past six weeks, but have been doing their work so quietly, and in such an unobtrusive way, that they attracted but very little attention.

A County Fair of His Own.

Daniel Shaw's real estate office resembles a county fair these days, and illustrates the productiveness of the soil of this section.

A squash, which weighs 115 pounds, raised by J. S. Brown, the gardener, who lives two miles east of the city, is the center of attraction. All who have seen it say that it is the largest squash ever raised in Minnesota or anywhere else for that matter and it certainly looks it.

The spot light is also on some potato vines taken from Peter Newman's garden. These vines are eleven feet in length and Pete says that they grow over a big hill of potatoes.

There is also some fine corn grown by D. P. O'Neill, but good corn is a common thing in this section, although Mr. O'Neill raises one of the best varities.

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone, anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the usual retail prices.

$8.50 HEDGETHORN PUNCTURE-PROOF SELF-HEALING TIRES A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. Sixty thousand pairs sold last year. Over two hundred thousand pairs now in use.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

DISFIGURING SCARS.

How to Prevent Them After Being Burned or Wounded.

Scars are mainly the result of careless treatment, and once formed there are no instructions to be given to the amateur for their removal. A good surgeon will be able at least to restore a moderate amount of sightliness, even though he cannot wholly eradicate the scar. But when a wound has been received, if it is likely to leave a scar and one cannot strictly adhere to all given rules and advice, it should at once be put under the care of a skillful surgeon. If he is all that is desired, there will be scarcely a mark to tell of the accident unless the wound is unusually deep. Care must be taken not to draw the edges of the surrounding tissues out of shape. When the wound is dressed it positively must be bathed and the raw and bleeding edges should be cleansed from all particles of dust and dirt or any foreign matter, says the Brooklyn Eagle.

The reason that oily and creamy remedies are used is that any application that is of a greasy nature soothes the surrounding tender cuticle. Masks and bandages exclude the air and protect the wound from drying too quickly. If this should happen, it may be noticed that the skin becomes dry and shriveled, surely resulting in a scar, however small. If the skin is kept soft and elastic it stands to reason that these disfiguring contractions will to a certain extent lose something of their tension and in that way become less noticeable. Even after the wound has apparently healed and all bandages may be removed a soothing lotion should be used quite frequently, about three or four times daily, and plentifully at night, especially if the unfortunate one has received burns upon the face, arms or hands, because upon the exposed parts of the body the scar would be more noticeable and unsightly.

A lotion which is very soothing and may be used for such purpose is composed of four ounces of filtered rainwater or rosewater and one dram of rectified spirits, one dram of tannin and two drams of glycerin. Agitate thoroughly and apply. One will be thoroughly rewarded for patience and persistence in using these applications, especially after a severe burn, as then the tissues will have been deprived of their fatty substance by the extreme heat and will need nourishment.

How to Slip Rubber Plants.

When a rubber plant has grown too large to be convenient it can be slipped and the slips planted, and they should then grow into fine, healthy plants. Some persons use earth for the slipping process, but a famous florist says that for those who live in a city or town the sponge method is better. A large sponge of the very cheapest quality can be bought and cut into small pieces, or the bits of sponge one can get as cheap as 5 and 10 cents will do equally well. Next one must get young, healthy shoots and up near the tip of the tree make an incision in the stalk, not cutting it the whole way through. The rind or skin should be intact. Then the sponge should be wet and tied over the incision. This must be kept moist constantly. In a short time little hairlike roots will be thrown out of the sponge, and when these look fairly strong the branch should be severed below the sponge and the new plant potted, sponge and all. A shady place at first and afterward a sunny one will best suit the young plants.

How to Keep Silverware Bright.

Here is a good homemade liquid for keeping silver clean. It is a great help to every one who has tried it:

Make a strong alum water and skim off all the particles that will not dissolve. To this add shavings of pure white soap. Let them dissolve and bottle it. After the silver has been cleaned with whitening or any other soap or liquid that comes for that purpose rub each piece with a clean bit of cheesecloth soaked with this alum water. It adds luster and keeps the silver clean for quite some time. If it is found that any silver spoon or cup has been stained by medicine or egg, dip a cloth in sulphuric acid, rub the stained part until it disappears, then wash the piece in soap and water.

How to Soothe Tired Feet.

People who must stand at their work all day should wear very comfortable shoes with broad soles, well fitting arches, and proper heels. This is the only possible way of being comfortable under the circumstances. It is well also to wear high shoes, buttoned or laced closely around the ankles, which are apt to swell from the long strain of standing. The feet should be given a hot bath every night, as well as a morning bath, when they should be scrubbed with a stiff brush. A soothing bath for tired feet is warm water with a little baking soda or borax dissolved in it. A vigorous rub with alcohol is also good. Another soothing application is to rub the feet with a piece of lemon.

How to Fasten Hair Bows.

Little girls often have their hair "bobbed," and the mothers or nurses who must tie on the large bows are often perplexed as to how to fasten these large ribbons to the small wisp of hair. Here is a very good arrangement which overcomes the difficulty and at the same time preserves the ornamental bow without necessitating retying it each day. Make the large bow and sew a strip of about baby ribbon of the same color underneath. Wind the narrow ribbon around the hair several times, tie in a tight bowknot and it will hold nicely.

FITS OF PURE ANGER.

How to Know and Check This Dangerous Tendency.

There is many a young mother who admires secretly the little outbursts of anger that baby gives vent to and thinks they are funny and cute until by the time the child is two or three years old she awakes to the sad realization that her baby has grown into a willful and spoiled child who is thought anything but lovable and cute by other people. She then begins to see what lack of discipline has done for the baby. Every mother, out of justice to the child as well as to herself, should check these outbursts of anger when the child first shows an inclination to indulge in them. But when the mother finds that the outbursts have taken a firm hold on the child and seem to occur periodically she should set about the tedious task of overcoming them.

The little one should be punished, but her will must not be broken by repeated "spankings," for these seldom fail to give the child a moody, sulky disposition. It takes times and patience to effect a cure. The best cure for these fits of anger is to shut the child in a room by itself whenever they occur. A particularly successful method of making a naughty child good is to divert its attention from unpleasant things. Children often have as much to make them irritable and cross as a grown person, and when a mother notices that a child is fretful it takes but a minute to find an unused toy or a new book or to suggest a new and interesting occupation that will brighten the child's mood and prevent an outburst of anger before the child can be aware of its existence.

How to Make a Lily Pond.

Aquatic plants for the home garden are not grown as much as they should be. Amateurs who hesitate for fear of failure are wrong, for water lilies require far less care than tender budding plants and are less expensive. Any swampy or boggy ground can easily be converted into an aquatic garden. Flowering shrubs, trees and ferns will grow luxuriantly near a pond. When you decide on the location of your pond, which should be at the lowest point of the garden, dig out the soil from eighteen inches to three feet deep, depending on the severity of the winters in your locality. The lilies must be planted deep enough to prevent them freezing. An inexpensive way to make the pond hold water is to line it with common clay. Cover the bottom and sides of the pond with this clay three or four inches thick and beat firmly until solid and even. The best method is to plant the water lilies in boxes or tubs. Use very rich soil, as coarse as possible. Rough pieces of sod and lumps of earth should be mixed in. Boxes holding five or six cubic feet will accommodate strong growing plants, and others holding half that much will be large enough for the weaker growing plants. If the pond is large the soil may be placed on the bottom and the plants set out in it, but in smaller ponds under this method the roots of the stronger plants will quickly cover the bottom, crowding out the weaker.

How to Make a Yoke Fit Right.

Often a dress is ruined by the fit of the yoke. It hitches or rides in a way that is as uncomfortable as it is unsightly. The easiest way to remedy this defect is to have the yoke made on a fitted lawn lining which buttons around the waist. This should have a horizontal seam run just about the bust line to take in an extra fullness. If the lining seems too warm or is too much trouble to make, the yoke can be attached to a sort of harness made with a belt of tape to which are joined vertical straps attached to the bottom of the yoke. Even easier is it to sew short tabs of tape or muslin to the bottom of the yoke. These can be securely pinned to the corset without tearing the yoke itself. It is a good idea to fasten the smallest sized safety pins to these tabs so that they are always in readiness.

How to Reseat Old Chairs.

If you have old rush bottom or cane seated chairs and do not want to go to the expense of having them recaned try making a seat for them at home. Cut away carefully the caning and nail strips of girthing tightly across the opening. Cover with a piece of fine fiber matting or burlap, just the shape of the seat, but a half inch larger. Turn in the edges all around and nail to the chair with brass headed tacks for studding. If the woodwork has grown shabby buy a preparation that quickly removes and softens the varnish and scrape with pieces of glass. The chair can then be done up with any desired stain.

How to Put Stamps on Letters.

"Most people don't know how to put a stamp on a letter," said a postoffice official. "They moisten the stamp, taking off a certain amount of the mucilage by the process and making it hard to stick. The proper way is to moisten the tip of the envelope where the stamp is to go, then press on the stamp. The paper should not be soaked, just moistened on the surface, however. That stamp will never drop off in the mail bag."

How to Taper the Fingers.

Most women in trying to make their fingers more tapering will stroke them from the base to the tip. A well known manicurist has said that the process should be reversed. Clasp the tip of each finger between the thumb and first finger of the opposite hand and stroke firmly but gently backward from the tip, as when working on a glove.

WORLD'S IRON ORE SUPPLY

Swedish Expert Estimates It at 9,250,000 Tons—International Geological Congress Will Meet In Stockholm Next Year and Its Main Task Will Be to Test These Figures—Estimate on the Demand for Iron During the Next Ten Years.

SWEDEN.

A Swedish expert estimates the world's iron ore supply at 9,250,000 tons. To test this figure thoroughly will be the main task of the international geological congress, which is to meet at Stockholm next year. Another expert estimates the world's demand for iron during the next ten years at 60,000,000 tons a year, which means from 150,000,000 to 180,000,000 tons of ore. Ore containing less than 20 per cent of pure iron is not regarded as worth smelting. It is therefore only the ore fields yielding more than 20 per cent of the metal that enter the calculation. The largest of these, that of Kirunavara-Luossavara in Sweden, contains, according to the latest estimates, from 600,000,000 to 800,000,000 tons of ore, which would be sufficient to cover the world's needs for barely five years.

The number of Swedish emigrants who have emigrated via Stockholm, Gothenburg and Malmohus, were during the first eight months of the present year not less than 10,024. This figure shows a tremendous increase over last year, when there were only 4,370 persons who emigrated. The officials of the government are not a little worried over the situation, and the anti-emigration society, which has been working so zealously during the past year find that their work in this direction has proven to be of no avail whatsoever.

The great field maneuvers in Norrland, which threatened to be discontinued owing to the strike, have been in progress for a week or more in the presence of King Gustaf. Great preparations were made for these field maneuvers, which are the greatest that have ever been held in the country. The war play purports to prevent an attack from a supposed enemy in the east. The army is under command of General Torpadie. Russia, France, England and the United States are represented by expert army officers.

In making his church visitations Bishop Billings lately instructed the pastors to keep a record of the leading events which transpire in their parishes. These records are to be kept as historical facts for future historians. In this way the ministers become historians and the archives of the parishes repositories of historical information. The plan has met with general approval among the clergy throughout the entire country.

The following are the oldest ministers in Sweden at present and they have grown to a ripe old age: Rev. E. J. Segerstedt, of Tornsfall, is ninety-one years old; Rev. P. Brandell, of Nordingo, has completed his ninetieth year, and E. J. Nordling, of Njurunda, completed his eighty-ninth year last February. Besides these there are fifty-nine ordained ministers who have passed their eightieth year.

Betty Carlsson, a woman aged forty-five years, committed suicide by hanging herself the other day. Owing to the strike she lost her position at the Rorstrand Glass factory some time ago and she brooded over the loss of her position so much that she decided to end her life. This is only one of the many cases of suicide that can be traced direct to the unfortunate strike.

From Berlin comes a dispatch stating that the metal workers, in session there, have decided to send the Swedish strikers $150,000 and will continue to send more funds as time goes on. They sent words of encouragement to their fellow workmen and fully approve of their course.

Real estate owners held a big meeting in Stockholm last week to adopt measures to relieve the distressing situation among renters. Rents have been very high in the capital city and not half of the tenants have been able to pay up.

Stockholm's oldest inhabitant at present is Miss Johanna Berns, who celebrated her 101st birthday the other day. She is still in excellent health and is in possession of all her mental faculties.

An unknown persons has donated 5,000 crowns to the Stockholm police force, whose position has indeed been a very trying one during the big strike.

A bomb was exploded a week ago last Monday under an electric railway car, but fortunately no damage was done and no lives were lost.

Nearly 100 employes who have the past ten years been employed by the Stockholm Electric company have emigrated to America.

The Messenger Boys' association, which was organized in Stockholm by Hinke Bergegren, has been dissolved.

NORWAY.

Baron Wedel-Jarlsberg, for a number of years a chamberlain in the Vatican at Rome, died in Switzerland the other day. He was a son of Baron Herman Wedel-Jarlsberg and was born in 1852, became a lieutenant in the Norwegian army in 1879 and was during the same year appointed a chamberlain at the royal court. Then the Catholics got a hold of him and in 1881 he accepted Catholicism and was later on appointed a chamberlain to the pope. He married a Danish baroness, Baroness Rosenorn-Lehn. Because the nobility ceased to be recognized in Norway after the year 1821 there was good reason for the Wedel-Jarlsbergs to seek other countries, but they have always, even in Norway, persisted in keeping their title.

In spite of the most strenuous work on the part of the Anti-Emigration society emigration from Norway is increasing at an alarming rate. It is greater this year than for any period previous, except during the heavy emigration years of the '80s. From Jan. 1 to June 1 there were 9,986 persons who left the country for foreign parts. Last year there were during the same period only 4,836 persons who emigrated. The emigration problem is by far the most important before the country now, but there seems to be no way of checking it, in spite of the most determined efforts.

Missionary Skrefrud, the well known Norwegian foreign missionary, who is the father of the Santal mission, has been unable to attend to his work recently on account of ill health. According to the latest reports his condition is alarming. He is still able to understand all that is said to him, but he has lost his speech. Missionary Bodding, who was born in Norway, but who is also highly respected in Denmark, has taken charge of the Santal mission work. He is assisted by Mrs. Borreson, who has grown old in the mission work, but whose health is still excellent.

One day last month the storthing spent a whole forenoon discussing whether or not the "garddrang" (hired man) at the Basto School Home should have his wages raised from 480 crowns to 800 crowns per year. The young man had petitioned the storthing that he speculated on taking unto himself a better half, and this finally appealed to the majority so that he got the increase in wages. But this took a whole forenoon for the storthing to decide, all of which proves that they take their time in that distinguished body.

F. Herman Gade, Norwegian consul in Chicago, is at present in Christiania for the purpose of probating the estate of his late father, Gerhart Gade, former American consul general in Norway. Carl E. Fays has been appointed acting consul during the absence of Mr. Gade. Olaf Bernts has been appointed secretary of the Norwegian consulate to succeed Lieutenant Rudolph Blom of the Norwegian navy, who returned to Norway to enter the consular service at a German post.

The imports of liquors from Germany is steadily on the increase. This is bothering the farmers of the southern section of the country not a little, for they do not know what to do with their potatoes, as it does not pay to turn them into whisky. It would seem that there could be some other market created for the humble potato in Norway, but as they are shipping in their liquor from Norway, the farmers might as well have turned their potatoes into whisky.

Colonel J. W. Munthe, formerly of the Norwegian army, has become a general in the Chinese army. He is at present enjoying a visit to Norway. He has resided in China for many years and has become, leaving looks aside, a full fledged Chinaman.

DENMARK.

Alberti's divorced wife recently married Professor Bendix, with whom she was married prior to marrying Alberti. She was first married to a prominent farmer who died a few years afterwards, leaving her a considerable fortune. Then she married her present husband, Professor Bendix, but was divorced from him and then married Alberti. As soon as Alberti had been placed under arrest for wholesale swindleries she secured a divorce from him and remarried her formed husband. She, is therefore, a very much married woman.

J. C. Christensen continues to be very unpopular in all sections of the country. His return to the cabinet was resented by the people at large, because his connection with the Alberti scandal has not been definitely settled. The sentiment became so strong that more than 15,000 people took part in an antiChristensen demonstration in Copenhagen. They are still clamoring to have him ousted, but as yet the king has not signified his intention of so doing.

The Nordenskiold Greenland expedition returned to Copenhagen last month. The program of the expedition was carried through to the slightest detail, and there have been some splendid results. Some very fine collections were procured and much data was gathered by the members of the expedition regarding the natives and their customs.

There are not many Scandinavians who are aware of the fact that Count Holstein-Ledroberg is a Catholic. It is a singular thing that this is the first time since the reformation that a Catholic has occupied such an exalted position in so strongly Lutheran a country as Denmark.

Gerda Johansen, the actress, whose popular appearances at the Dagmar theater were at one time the talk of the town, died the other day, shortly before she was to have been married to an electrician of Malmo.

The Swedish congregation in Copenhagen has adopted the final plans for its new church edifice, which will cost $45,000 to $70,000.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

The Ferguson block, an eight-story office building in the heart of Pittsburg's financial and business district, was wrecked by an explosion. At least sixty persons were injured, about half that number being young women stenographers in the building, who were either injured by the explosion directly or hurt in escaping from the building.

Six men were killed and a dozen seriously injured by an outbound Panhandle passenger train crashing into the rear end of a Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul stock train at Chicago. The victims were stockmen, five of the dead being from North Dakota and the sixth from Montana.

Herbert H. Lyttle, one of the best known professional automobile racers in the country, was dangerously hurt and his mechanician, James Bates, was fatally injured in the Long Island stock car races near Riverhead, L. I. Bates died a short time after the accident.

Terrified by Black Hand stories 1,000 children stampeded in a Polish parochial school in Jersey City when fireworks were set off in the street and made a mad rush for the doors. Fourteen were crushed, one so seriously that death probably will result.

The steamer City of Erie, from Cleveland, ran down a schooner hailing from a Canadian port off Erie, Pa. The schooner sank and three of her crew, two men and a woman, went down with her.

Miss Blanche Lord, aged forty, was killed; her housekeeper, Mrs. Mitchell, painfully bruised and the latter's eleven-year-old daughter seriously injured in an automobile accident near St. Paul.

A slight earthquake was felt through Southeastern Missouri, Southern and Central Illinois and Indiana and Western Kentucky. So far as has been learned little or no damage resulted.

Parker Norton, owner of the Mineola Press, and Edward Baker, proprietor of Mineola garage, were instantly killed in an automobile accident near Mineola, L. I.

At least eight men were killed and five perhaps fatally injured in a gas explosion in coal mine No. 4 of the Northwestern Improvement company near Roslyn, Wash.

Two men were killed and eight other passengers were seriously injured, three of them probably fatally, in a street car accident at Pittsburg.

Four persons were instantly killed and three others injured in a collision between a freight train and a hand car one mile west of Edgar, Wis.

Near Stettler, Alberta, the wife of a farmer named Frank Grover and their two children lost their lives in a prairie fire.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

Twenty-five thousand men of arms marched past the massed representatives and special envoys of thirty-seven nations at New York while 2,000,000 citizens, seated in grandstands or standing along Fifth avenue, shouted themselves hoarse in cheers. The great military parade was the climax of the Hudson-Fulton celebration.

With singular unanimity and almost unparalleled harmony the Massachusetts Democracy in convention at Boston named its state ticket, headed by former State Senator James H. Valley of Watertown for governor, and adopted a platform of party principles.

Through streets ablaze with bunting and lined with the greatest crowd ever gathered in New York thoroughfares a parade of 20,000 men and fifty-four floats passed before the envoys of twenty-one nations participating in the Hudson-Fulton celebration.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Announcement is made that the Canadian Northern railroad has secured the controlling interest in the Duluth and Northern Minnesota road and that its northern line will be extended to connect with the Canadian Northern at Gunflint, in Cook county, thus giving the Canadian Northern a through line over its own trackage between Port Arthur, Ont., the Canadian head of the lakes, and Duluth.

Notices have been sent to the county auditors by State Auditor Iverson directing them to make the tax levy for state purposes for the coming year 2.8 mills. Last year it was 3.33 mills. The decrease is due partly to the wiping out of the $600,000 road and bridge bill, partly to the increased valuation of personal property and partly to the increased revenues from special taxes.

According to reports made to the secretary of the Duluth board of trade more grain was received at the Head of the Lakes in forty-eight hours recently than was ever delivered at any grain terminal market in the world in the same space of time. The shipments consisted of 2,248 cars, or 2,225,000 bushels, roughly estimated.

A total of 15,850,000 pounds of binder twine was sold by the state prison at Stillwater during the harvest season just closed. Of this amount 1,954,000 pounds were sold outside the state under the law passed two years ago permitting the sale of prison twine to other states.

A notable guest at the coming convention of the Congregationalist Brotherhood, to meet in Minneapolis Oct. 14 to 17, will be Booker T. Washington, the negro educator. He will make an address at the banquet to be given the evening of Oct. 17.

The Winona Independent Telephone company has passed into the control of the Northwestern company. The absorbing company comes into control of approximately 500 miles of connecting lines in Southern Minnesota and in Wisconsin.

It cost Minneapolis $8,255 to entertain President Taft. The Commercial club, which had charge of the affair, reports that the committee's receipts were $185 in excess of the expenses. The big banquet at the Auditorium cost $5,527.30.

Infantile paralysis is epidemic in Proctor, a village near Duluth and yard and shop headquarters of the Duluth, Missabe and Northern road. More than forty cases have been reported and the schools are closed in consequence.

Governor Eberhart has received an invitation from Governor Harmon of Ohio to attend the national good roads convention in Columbus Oct. 26 to 29 and also to select three delegates to represent the state at the convention.

Ore shipments from Two Harbors for September were 1,600,000 tons, the greatest September shipments in the history of that port. The season's shipments will also be larger than in 1907, the banner year.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Reynold, the nine-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Erickson of Red Wing, was buried under tons of sand as the result of a cavein in a street where a sewer is being constructed. The body was not discovered until two hours after the accident. The boy was playing in the pit.

Earnest Brodine was killed near Montevideo. He had been in town attending the county fair and it is thought that he boarded a freight train to ride out to his work. In some manner he fell between the cars and his body was horribly mangled.

Louis Sempson, aged thirty-four, is dead at Crookston as the result of a fall from the top of a refrigerator car, his legs and arms being crushed by the wheels. He was a car inspector and a switch engine bumped into the car, knocking him off.

William Wilson, twenty-three years old, had his right arm torn off and was cut about the face while working in the C. A. Smith Lumber company mill at Minneapolis.

Harry Erickson, a son of Thomas Erickson, walked into a discarded well on his father's farm near Pipestone and was dead when taken out several hours afterwards.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Mrs. Marian Ward Ingersoll, formerly of St. Paul and widow of the late D. W. Ingersoll, died at the home of her daughter in Pasadena, Cal. Mrs. Ingersoll, who was eighty-seven years of age, came to Minnesota to teach in the state university in its early days.

Ernest F. Hilgedick, eighty-six years old, a pioneer of Minnesota, is dead at his old homestead at Minneapolis. Mr. Hilgedick homesteaded the property in 1872 and lived in St. Paul many years before that.

Miss B. Evelyn Weston, for a quarter of a century principal of Monroe school, Minneapolis, is dead. Miss Weston retired from the principalship in 1904 and has been in poor health since.

Armand Albrecht, a well known St. Paul attorney, active for many years in the affairs of the city, is dead, aged forty-one.

WOMAN DIES IN AUTO WRECK

Another Painfully Injured and Child Badly Hurt.

Miss Blanche Lord, a resident of Minneapolis, was killed, her housekeeper, Mrs. Mitchell, was painfully bruised and Gertrude Mitchell, eleven years old, the daughter of Mrs. Mitchell, sustained a broken hip when a large touring car in which they were riding was wrecked on the White Bear road. Miss Lord, who was forty years old, and who once lived in St. Paul, died on the way to a St. Paul hospital, to which she was being brought in an automobile owned by George Koehler, which happened along shortly after the accident. Mrs. Mitchell and the little girl also were picked up by a passing machine and taken to the same hospital.

While going at a good gait, Miss Lord's chauffeur, a negro, Doll E. Ware, turned out of the road to avoid an approaching farmer's wagon. The machine ran into a ditch and two wheels were wrenched off. Miss Lord, in the meantime, became frightened and tried to leap from the car. Her dress caught on the machine and she fell beneath the running gear. In this position she was dragged for several feet. Farmers who came to the rescue had to cut away some of her clothing to extricate her.

APPOINTED BY EBERHART

Commission to Take Charge of Johnson Monument Fund.

The John A. Johnson memorial monument took a new phase and a fresh impetus was given the work through the appointing of the monument commission by Governor Eberhart.

The selection of the commission means that the work of collecting the funds will speedily become centralized and that there will be a beginning of the permanent plans which will involve not only the collection of the necessary money but also the further work of deciding upon the monument which will follow.

President C. D. O'Brien of the commission soon will issue the call for the first meeting and will set it at the earliest date which will allow the members from a distance to be present. It is expected that the commission will organize by selecting a secretary and treasurer and will at once take charge of all funds and assume general direction of the work.

SILVER SERVICE FOR WARSHIP

Gift From the State Presented to Battleship Minnesota.

The state of Minnesota honored herself and the battleship which bears her name in the presentation of a magnificent silver service of twenty-six pieces and a stand of colors.

The event came at the New York city end of the Hudson-Fulton celebration, with a large number of Minnesotans still in the city. To the number of more than 300 they gathered on the afterpart of the upper deck to take part in the ceremonies.

The silver service is the gift of the state of Minnesota to the battleship and cost $10,000, which was appropriated by the legislature.

Special Commissioners A. H. Stem of St. Paul, D. J. Calhoun of Minneapolis and J. Harry Lewis of St. Paul turned it over to the ship in person.

Miss Rose Schaller, daughter of ex-Senator Schaller of Hastings, who christened the Minnesota when she was launched three years ago, made the formal presentation speech.

St. Paul Woman a Suicide.

Mrs. Anna Struck committed suicide at St. Paul by firing two shots into her brain. The first bullet was not fatal, and she fired a second into her right ear. The woman fell on the floor of her bedroom, where she was afterwards found dead by a neighbor. Mrs. Struck is said to have been in poor health for some time, and this made her melancholy and despondent.

Well Known Pioneer Dead.

Judge D. A. J. Baker, eighty-seven years old, is dead at the home of his daughter at Minneapolis. He had been ill about a month. Judge Baker was a pioneer settler in Minnesota, coming to this state in 1849 from Maine, where he was born and received his education, fitting himself for the profession of a lawyer.

Yeggmen Rob Ticket Office.

Yeggmen blew the safe in the ticket office of the Chicago Great Western railroad station at Minneapolis, securing $600. They made a clean getaway. The robbery occurred shortly after the night watchman had visited the office and while he was at the far end of the railroad yards.

Bad News Fatal to Woman.

Told by a physician that her seven-year-old son was dying of diphtheria Mrs. Margaret Ebert of Minneapolis fell back unconscious and died two hours before the burial of the child. Physicians say she died of apoplexy, the stroke superinduced by the shock that her child was dying.

Banker Kills Himself.

C. D. Rutherford, a well known banker, postmaster and real estate man at Floodwood, near Duluth, committed suicide at that village. He shot himself with a revolver. He leaves a wife and family. No cause for his act is known.

Shoots Creditor and Himself.

William Cuija shot Jacob Leinonen at Tower and then put an end to his own life. Leinonen is not expected to live. The two men quarreled about a bill which Cuija owed for board at Leinonen's boarding house.

WHEELOCK NAMED

Selected by Governor Eberhart as Private Secretary.

SUCCEEDS FRANK A. DAY

New Appointee a Minneapolis Newspaper Man.

Ralph W. Wheelock of Minneapolis will succeed Frank A. Day of Fairmont as private secretary to Governor Eberhart. The appointment has been announced by the new executive.

In addition to taking on the official duties of private secretary to Governor Eberhart the appointment means that Mr. Wheelock will become sponsor and caretaker of Governor Eberhart's desire to succeed himself and may succeed to the chairmanship of the Republican state central committee. In doing so he would only follow in the footsteps of Frank A. Day, who is at the head of the opposite party.

Mr. Wheelock came to Minneapolis from South Dakota, where he conducted a newspaper in the early boom days of that state. He has worked on Twin City papers for the past ten years and has been more or less identified with Minneapolis politics.

FIRE ADJOINING THEATER

Patrons of St. Paul Opera House Never Knew of Affair.

Fire that broke out on the fourth floor of the Chicago Great Western building adjoining the Metropolitan theater at St. Paul was put out while the audience sat tranquilly in their seats unaware of the danger.

A probable panic was averted by the presence of mind and quick action of the theater employes, Patrolman William Zachow and the fire department.

Officer Zachow saw smoke issuing from the windows of the office building. He quickly turned in the alarm and then warned the theater officials. A man was placed at each exit, the doors of the theater closed and the orchestra quietly told to play its loudest.

When the firemen arrived a few minutes later they carried chemicals up the stairway leading through the lobby without disturbing the people inside.

The fire was found to be among some paper on the fourth floor and was extinguished with slight loss.

STUDENTS SAVE TWO WOMEN

Take Them Safely From a Burning Fraternity Lodge.

Two members of the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity at the University of Minnesota were severely burned, the matron and a maid were overcome with smoke when a fire gutted the fraternity lodge at night. The two undergraduates, who were severely although not dangerously burned, received their injuries in rescuing the matron and the maid.

The third floor of the house was gutted and the loss will be $1,000 on the dwelling and $600 on the contents. It is believed that the fire started from a match which was dropped in a closet.

The injured are Harold L. Downing, Minneapolis, severely burned about head and neck; Ralph J. Barke, Fergus Falls, painfully burned about head, neck and hands.

The matron and maid were overcome with smoke, but were revived after they had been assisted from the house. In saving them, Downing and Barke ran a gauntlet of flame in the upper hallway.

TAKES HIS LIFE IN ILLINOIS

Ill Health Causes Minnesota Man to Commit Suicide.

W. H. Bentley, aged seventy-five, a well known resident of Osakis, this state, was found dead in his room at Jacksonville, Ill., with a bullet in his temple. He left a note which said:

"I am tired of living, sick all the time. You will find $1,257 in my book. Bury me here. What money you don't need send with my pocketbook to L. D. Bentley, Osakis, Minn."

The money was found, with cards showing he was a member of the Imperial council, Ancient Order of Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, Osman temple, St. Paul; Grand Meadow lodge, A. F. and A. M., and High Forest lodge No. 85, Osakis, Minn.

St. Paul Man Asphyxiated.

While searching for the source of escaping gas at St. Paul H. F. Pelton, superintendent of distribution for the St. Paul Gas Light company, discovered the dead body of Emil F. Willy in an underground excavation leading from Willy's new house to a gas main. Willy accidentally tapped the main and was asphyxiated.

Little Boy Hangs Himself.

While playing horse with a noose about his neck on the veranda of the home of his parents in Proctor, near Duluth, the little five-year-old son of A. R. Buchner fell off the edge of the porch and hanged himself. He was unable to make an outcry. The mother found the child dead a few minutes later.

AUSTRALIAN DINGOS.

Treacherous and Destructive Animals That Can Feign Death.

There are some who believe, though the evidence seems against them, that certain of the wild dogs, like the Australian dingo—"yellow dog dingo, always hungry, dusty in the sun"—are reversions to the wild state of a race once tame, just as the pariah dogs of various countries have traveled half the road toward becoming wild animals again.

As one sees the dingo here in the gardens it looks not merely like a domesticated dog, but like a dog of a distinctly engaging and amicable kind. The dingo's character belies its gentle looks. "Quarrelsome, sly and treacherous," an Australian naturalist has called it. So sly is it that, according to Mr. Beddard in "The Cambridge Natural History," it feigns death "with such persistence that an individual has been known to be partly flayed before moving" and so treacherous that in the days when dingos were more commonly kept as pets by the colonists than, as a result of bitter experience, is the case today it was no unusual thing for the dog which had been brought up with every tenderness from puppyhood to turn suddenly on its master or mistress, or, what was more frequent, when left in temporary charge of an empty house to seize the opportunity to raid the sheepfold or the poultry runs.

On such occasions it "ravens" even as the wolf, killing not to satisfy its hunger, but in the unrestrainable fury of a brute instinct, so that, given time enough, it will not leave one fowl or one sheep alive. That it does not need much time, moreover, is shown by the statement of Thomas Ward that "one dingo in the course of a few hours has been known to destroy several score of sheep." For its fighting ability the same authority declares it to be a match for most domestic dogs of double its size.

When wild it hunts in packs, which are said sometimes to include as many as a hundred individuals, though from six to a dozen is the common number, and the only Australian animal which it is uncertain if the pack can ever pull down is (in spite of Mr. Kipling) the "old man" kangaroo.—London Times.

Fall colds are quickly cured by Foley's Honey and Tar, the great throat and lung remedy. The genuine contains no harmful drugs. A. Bjerkhoel.

PLANKED BEEFSTEAK.

How to Prepare and Serve This Tasty and Appetizing Dish.

To plank a beefsteak the first important step is to select your plank. This should be of hard wood, well seasoned, preferably of live oak, hickory, cedar or cherry, and it can be made to order of a size to fit your oven, or you can buy a good one at the house furnishing stores costing from 50 cents up, according to size. One that is used for fish should not be used for meat, as the fish plank should not be washed, simply scraped each time after using, and its flavor will impregnate the meat. If you have a homemade plank you can use galvanized wire tacks to hold the steak in place, but the purchased ones have a wire attachment for this purpose, and some of them have also grooves to hold the juices of the article that is being cooked.

For planking a sirloin or porterhouse steak is usually selected. It should be cut thick and be of the best quality. If you desire your steak well done it must first be placed on a broiler and broiled both sides, one side being better done than the other. Then fasten the well cooked side to the plank, which should have been heated in the oven until sizzling hot. Finish the broiling under a gas flame or before a broiling fire of coals. For rare or medium done steak fasten raw on the hot plank—hot enough to char it at once.

When broiled to suit the taste sprinkle with salt, pepper and a little paprika, dot with bits of butter and set on the opened oven door while you trim with the various vegetables. These should be all ready so as to lose no time. There should be hot mashed creamy potatoes that can be piped around the edges of the plank, using a pastry tube, or the potato can be mounted into little rosettes at either end or equidistant. Between these arrange little mounds of tiny boiled and well seasoned onions, well seasoned peas, carrots or cauliflower. Fill in open spaces with bits of parsley or watercress or surround the potato with a wreath of the green. A lemon cup filled with maitre d'hotel butter can be placed at either end of the plank if desired. Mushrooms often appear as a part of the garnish, and from the meat juice caught in the broiler or from beef stock a well seasoned sauce may be made to be passed when serving the meat. Of course the steak is sent to the table on the plank, setting it on a large salver or tray.

How to Clean Wall Paper.

To clean wall paper use the following recipe: Ten cents' worth of liquid ammonia, 10 cents' worth of oil of sassafras, one teaspoonful (even full) of soda, two teaspoonfuls (even full) of salt and one quart of cold water. Mix the cold water with the ingredients, then add white flour until it is thick enough to drop from a spoon. Put in a covered pail, set in a kettle of boiling water and cook until done, stirring often. If it does not stick to the hands when cool it is done. Remove from the pail and divide into "loaves," working each piece awhile in the hand. Take out only what is needed, leaving the rest covered in the pail to prevent the ammonia from evaporating. Rub the wall with a loaf, working the dirt into the dough. When very dirty, exchange for a clean loaf. This removes dirt and grease magically and leaves old paper as good as new when used carefully.

THIEF RIVER WON GAME

Local High School Team Defeats Fosston Foot Ball Players Saturday.

Game Was an Exciting One Although the Attendance Was Not Very Large.

Last Saturday, at the fair grounds, the local high school football team met and defeated the high school boys from Fosston, their strongest opponents of last year, by a score of ten to six. Thief River Falls succeeded in making two touch-downs in the first half of the game, the first being made by Jacobson, the second by Capt. Johnson.

In the early part of the last half, one of the players of the Fosston team, thru a sensational high catch of a forward pass made by Thief River Falls, was successful in making a touch-down and a goal kick, which resulted in a score of six for the visitors. The climax of the game was reached, when, with about a minute to play, and with the ball in their possession, Fosston fought desparately to gain the remaining yard which would win for them the game. This did seem comparatively easy, but, at the end of three downs, they still found themselves a yard from the goal. The ball was then delivered to Thief River Falls, who forced it back a few yards when time was up and the game ended.

The weather was favorable for the players as it was cold. It was too cold, however, for the spectators and not a very large crowd was in attendance.

Henry Hermanson and Herman Pederson left last Saturday evening for points in South Dakota and will register on the Standing Rock and Cheyenne reservations while absent.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Melgaard of Warren, spent Sunday in the city, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Melgaard.

G. N. Relinquishes Franchise.

Through the efforts of Mayor Hamre and City Attorney Halvorson, the Great Northern Railway company has been induced to relinquish its franchise to street between the Moylan and Ramstad properties known as the triangle. Many citizens have long desired to secure this property for the city for park purposes, but owing to the fact that the Great Northern had the right to operate its railroad upon this street made the matter impossible.

An Old Land Mark Gone.

Carl Eig has torn down the old house on the Shoston farm at Highlanding and has erected a large and substantial frame granery in place of it. The old house was built by the Indians a good many years before the opening of the eleven townships and could give some interesting history, if the old logs could talk.—Sunbeam.

First Frost on Monday.

Monday, Oct. 11, this section was visited by the first frost that killed vegetation. There had been a slight frost about the middle of September, but it did no actual damage.

Goes to Red Lake Saturday.

The high school football team goes down to Red Lake Falls on Saturday and plays a game with the high school team of that city. The game promises to be an interesting one and quite a number of the high school students are figuring upon going down.

She Was Pleasantly Surprised.

Miss H. E. Bell, Wausau, Wis., writes "Before I commenced to take Foley's Kidney Pills I had severe pains in my back, could not sleep, and was greatly troubled with headache. The first few doses of Foley's Kidney Pills gave me relief and two bottles cured me. The quick results surprised me, and I can honestly recommend them." A. Bjerkhoel.

Considerable complaint has been made to Chief of Police Lang that small boys are breaking a number of windows with sling shots. The chief desires to warn the boys to stop this or arrests will be made.

Give the Middle Horse a Show.

A farmer plowing with three horses hitched all abreast, noticed that the middle horse became tired and exhausted long before either of his mates. As the animal was the equal in every way of the other two, he was puzzled as to the cause of this horse's not being able to stand the same amount of work. He finally observed, however, that as they drew the plow along, the three horses held their noses close together with the result that the middle horse had to breathe the expired air from his fellows. The farmer then procured a long "jockey" stick, which he fastened to the bits of the outside horses. His device worked perfectly; for, givin his rightful share of good, fresh air, the middle horse was able to do the same amount of work, and with no greater fatigue than his fellows. Many persons are like the middle horse; they do not get their rightful share of fresh, pure air, and this is why they are not able to perform as much work.—Ex.

Work Started.

C. H. Martz, who is the civil engineer in charge of the proposed new ditches to be built in the towns of Highlanding and Star, arrived in the city last week and went out to do the surveying. It is going to take Mr. Martz from two to three weeks to complete this work, but he expects to have everything ready so that the contract can be let in January and the ditch will be built next summer. Mr. Martz believes in building a deep ditch and those that have been built under his supervision in this county are said to be the best in the country.

Drying Potatoes.

Drying potatoes to take care of overproduction during any season is the subject of a report by Vice Consul Burrel of Magdeburg, in which he states that several potato-drying plants are operating in various sections in Germany. Such factories are increasing, due partly to the advancing price of grain, but are believed to be important factors in equalizing the returns from the potato industry from year to year. To produce 220 pounds of of dried potatoes 830 pounds of potatoes are required, and the dried product is stated to be worth $3.80 to $4.80.—Ex.

GOOD LAND NEAR HOME

Eastern Marshall County Getting Many New Settlers These Days.

Allen W. Clark Writes a Fergus Falls Friend of Our Wonderful Progress.

The following taken from Wheelock's Weekly, one of the leading newspapers of Fergus Falls, will be of much local interest:

There is a tremendous amount of unused land in northern Minnesota, fertile, and destined to support a large population, which is being slighted in favor of much poorer land farther west. The opening of reservations, the efforts of the land agencies and of the railroads all result in inducing settlers to pass by Minnesota. The land seekers thus spend more money, and acquire poorer holdings than they would do if they would look closer at home.

Just now the opening of the Mud River ditches in the Thief River Falls neighborhood is putting good land into condition for farming operations. A letter from an actual settler of Marshall county, A. W. Clark, to his friend, J. C. Wilson of this city, contains some good points about the development, and is written in such vivacious style that all readers will enjoy it. Mr. Clark writes:

"Dear Jim.—There is a good claim all clear of timber or brush, lying direct on the big ditch half a mile east of Groby's in 29. It can be all broke up just as soon as the ditch is in. This is only 1½ miles from the Rollis school house. Now look at Miss ——'s quarter: She borrowed $50 and hired 50 acres broke. This year she put it all in flax and raised a good crop, 12 to 15 bushels per acre—enough to pay for the whole shooting match. And only think of a fool woman, an old maid, too, doing this! And fellows running around starving and turning socialists! It's enough to make a man hunt for the meat axe.

"The settlers are talking of holding a meeting to appoint a committee to keep Mr. Hoag from draining Lake Superior through the Mud lake ditch. He is an enthusiast. Well, there are some chances floating around here.

"I have about 100 shocks to cut yet and dad Elliott says it will go 40 bushels. Oh, I can give you a job all right, husking corn. I don't know whether to put my money all in a bank or buy a trust. Never had so much feed in all my life. Can't get enough lumber to build corn cribs without tearing down houses. The whole blamed country has gone into conniptions over the fact we can raise good, ripe corn here. And clover! Old John Haugen is cutting his third crop off that bog land and it will go three tons to the acre. It's just like finding money to get a quarter of this swamp land under the homestead laws. That's what. A young man, floating round, is just foolish if he don't get him a home right here. Good roads and ditches are all we need to make this better land than where you live. Wow, but it is a wonder people do not find things flying right under their noses instead of running off 1000 miles chasing a jack-a-ma-lantern!

"Well I can put two bushels of corn in the shock every 15 minutes, and I guess I'd better be at it, even if it is Sunday. In the venacular, so long."

The Dead Town.

A town that has never anything to do in a public way is on the road to the cemetery. Any citizen who will do nothing for his own town is helping to dig the grave. A man that knocks the town furnishes the coffin. The man who is so selfish as to have no time from his business to give to the city affairs is making the shroud. The man who will not advertise is driving the hearse. The man who is always pulling from any public enterprise throws boquets on the grave. The man who is so stingy as to be howling hard times is preaching the funeral, singing the doxology, and thus the town lies buried from all sorrow and care.—Ex.

Coming This Way.

Senator A. D. Stephens has closed the deal for the sale of 12,000 acres of land to three gentlemen from Spokane Falls, who are of the opinion that the Red River Valley offers greater opportunities than the West. They will move here at once and will put practically all the land under cultivation. Many who have left here for the west would return if they were financially able. The tide is turning this way and within a few years the price of Red River Valley land will be far above what it is now. Crookston Press.

Dragged by Hand Car.

Theodore Quigley, mud boss on the Great Northern section at Red Lake Falls, was quite seriously injured Thursday afternoon. He fell between the rails in front of a hand car that was in motion and the gearing of the car caught him and dragged him quite a distance. In consequence there are several bad cuts and bruises on his body, though no permanent injuries will result.—Crookston Times.

State Apportionment.

State Superintendent C. G. Schultz has given out the annual October apportionment of the state school fund. His report shows that 286,433 pupils attended school for a period of forty days in six months ending July last. For each pupil the state will pay the counties $3.00 and a total of $1,159,308 will be distributed. Last year the distribution was on a basis of $2.70 for each 381,074 pupil.

Tobacco culture promises to develope into an important industry in Otter Tail county in the near future. The D. S. B. The company will put in fifty acres next season, and if the crop proves equally profitable, a large number of others will follow the example.

Going Into the Woods.

A large number of laboring men are being taken into the north country, these days, to work in the logging camps that are being established for the preliminary work of laying out roads, etc., which has commenced in earnest before the actual winter's work is on. A large number of the laboring men who have been working in the harvest and threshing fields of the Dakotas are returning this way, and the supply of men is more nearly equaling the demand than has been the case for some time past.

CITIZENS STATE BANK
THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN.

WHO WAS THE THIEF?

By F. A. MITCHEL.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

Adrian Markham, paying teller of the Tenth National bank, was called from his window to the cashier's desk. When he returned a package of bills amounting to $20,000, that had lain on the shelf before him, was gone.

Markham could not at first believe the testimony of his eyes. He had not been absent three minutes. No such package could have been taken out through the bars that protected his window. No one had been in his inclosure with him, and the door of the cage had been closed and fastened by a spring lock. It seemed to the teller that some one of his faculties had suddenly deserted him. But, no; the package had been there before he left the window, and it was not there now. He looked about the cage for it, though he knew full well exactly where it had been left, and nothing except some live being could have removed it. Satisfied that the money had really been taken, he rushed into the president's office and frantically reported the loss.

The president turned in his swinging chair and fixed a scrutinizing glance upon the teller. Convinced that the man's troubled appearance was not feigned, he said:

"Keep a cool head, Mr. Markham. It will help you to recall minutely circumstances pertaining to the case. Who were inside the counters with you when the money was taken?"

Markham gave the names of five employees, all of whom had been and were then busily engaged. "None of them would or could have committed the theft," he said.

The president called the cashier into his office, and after a few moments' conversation the three men went to the cage and inspected it with a view to ascertaining how it would be possible for any one to take the bills. But one weak point appeared. The cage was not covered, and there was a possibility that some one might have stood on a projection of the woodwork outside the frame and have withdrawn the bills. But he could not have reached the bills with his arm and would not have been likely to avoid being seen by some one inside the inclosure, though all but his arm would be screened by the woodwork, which was in all eight feet high.

The party examined the mahogany frame outside the cage and found the imprint of some small square substance, probably the head of a nail or tack. That this imprint had been freshly made was evident, for when examined under a microscope its edges were found to be sharp and not smoothed away as they would have been after a time.

The books of the bank were examined by an expert accountant, and it was discovered that each man's accounts were correct. No one had been concealing a loss. The president was disposed to exonerate Markham, but at a meeting of the directors it was decided to "lay him off." Markham received the information of this action with a crushing sensation.

The case was reported to a prominent detective agency, with instructions to work in two directions. They were to consider the imprint on the woodwork and to establish a close surveillance over every employee. The only information given them as to those who were in the bank outside of the inclosure was that a man dressed rather shabbily had presented a check on another bank at the receiving teller's window. He had appeared to be stupid when the teller told him that he had got into the wrong bank and asked a number of irrelevant questions. So far as could be determined that man was the only person in the bank outside the inclosure at the time he presented his check.

One morning not long after the theft a detective employed on the case was passing through the lobby of a cheap hotel. A man sat in an armchair, tapping the heel of his boot with a cane. The detective heard the cane strike some metallic substance. It occurred to him to ask the hotel clerk who the man was and was told he belonged to a circus company visiting the town, the members of which were stopping at the hotel.

Past experience on other complicated cases which had come under his personal observation and the record of crimes as recorded at headquarters made him suspicious of this man. Desperate characters join shows by reason of their opportunity for theft.

A combination of thoughts flashed in upon the detective's brain. He saw a possible solution to the bank theft. Taking a big risk, he had the man arrested. Upon examination a tack was found in the heel of the man's boot the head of which exactly corresponded with the imprint on the woodwork at the bank.

Of course the man was indignant at his arrest and threatened the detective with all the vengeance the law would give him. The receiving teller at the bank looked at the prisoner, but could not say whether he was the man who presented a check on another bank or not. A hunt through the suspect's room revealed nothing. A search warrant was procured that would enable a constable to go through the circus tent and properties, but after every article had been overhauled nothing had been discovered.

Before giving up the matter the detective resolved to rip up the mattress on which the prisoner slept. There he found the package of stolen money intact.

The exonerated paying teller when informed of the solution exclaimed:

"None but an acrobat could have done it!"

FATE INTERVENED.

By WILLARD K. FIFEN.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

"Well, well, Cuthbert! Who'd ever have expected to see you here? Isn't it funny what meetings there are in this world? Last time we met was at San Francisco. You were going to sail the next morning for Manila. Everything in this world is arranged by fate. But the most singular feature of all is that I've got a message for you. Are you married?"

"No."

"How's that?"

"Fate."

"How has fate kept you from marrying?"

"Chucked in a contemptible incident the evening of the day I parted from you at San Francisco."

"What incident?"

"Come in to the club and I'll tell you."

"When I parted from you that day I went to my quarters, donned evening dress—I never wear a uniform off duty—put on a pair of new patent leather shoes—stiffest things in the world; they might as well be made of cast iron—and went to dine at the quarters of my commanding officer, then Colonel, now General, Chatterton.

"The situation was this: I had been proposed as a husband to Margery Chatterton, the general's daughter, by a skillful matchmaker and had been accepted. When the matter was proposed to me the proposer didn't know that the first moment I saw Miss Chatterton I remarked to myself, 'That's the woman of all others I want for my wife!' You can understand, then, how easy it was for me to be steered into that particular matrimonial hive. The arrangement having been perfected, our mutual friend warned me not to make a botch of it by hurrying, but preface my proposal by a proper amount of courting. Instead of being stayed I should have been hurried, for, while I had found no difficulty when at West Point in making any number of sham proposals, when it came to the real thing I was ready to sojer with the most backward man in the army. I put the matter off till the dinner I have mentioned came round, when, sitting at table, I was handed a telegraphic order direct from Washington to sail on a ship leaving the next morning for Manila.

"I read the dispatch to the company, and of course it created a flutter in the breast of Miss Chatterton, distinctly visible on her countenance. Here I was ordered away, and the expected proposal had not been made. Mrs. Chatterton, who was dead set for the match, as soon as coffee was served said that if I didn't care to smoke I might join 'the ladies' in the library. I knew very well that by 'the ladies' she meant Margery, and I said that I would join them as soon as I had drunk my coffee.

"I would have left the dining room with them had it not been for the fact that, sitting so long in one position, my feet had become swollen, and the inelastic patent leather had held them as in a vise. I had slipped off the shoe that hurt me most, and when the ladies arose from the table I rose, too, and stood in one shoe. The general and the adjutant, who was of the party, remained, and when the ladies had gone I felt (with my feet) under the table for the missing shoe. I could not find it. While I was trying the general said to his adjutant, 'We must settle Swinton's case before you go,' and to me: 'I trust you'll excuse us, captain. We've got an important matter on hand that we must tackle.'

"I was mighty glad to excuse them, and as soon as they were gone I got down under the table to hunt for the shoe. While I was there the door opened, and I heard Miss Chatterton exclaim:

"'Well, I declare!'

"I put it to you as a man, could I crawl out from under the table and in one shoe face the girl who was awaiting my proposal? I knew very well that, hearing the men go out, she had come in to sit with me while I sipped my coffee, intending then to guide me to a place where we would be alone together. I lay still as a mouse for a moment, when I heard the dining room door close and knew that I was again alone.

"It was evident to me that I must lose no time in getting my shoe, find Miss Chatterton and give her a satisfactory explanation as to where I had been when she had entered the dining room. But in the first place I couldn't find the shoe, and in the second I couldn't invent an excuse. It occurred to me that if I could get away undetected I would have a whole night to make up a plausible story, return in the morning before sailing, account for my conduct and do the job. A window opened on to the veranda, and"—

"Why in the world didn't you walk right into the presence of the girl and tell her the whole story?"

"Why d[illegible] you say something I don't know? I've asked myself that question a million times since."

"Why didn't you go back the next morning?"

"Ship sailed two hours ahead of time. The only thing I've been able to do [illegible] to let the matter go by default. But how did you know I didn't go back? And what's the message you have for me?"

"Well, at Manila [illegible] told the story to Jones of the [illegible] Sixteenth —. Jones told his wife, his wife told mine, and mine [illegible] friend of Miss Chatterton [illegible]. Miss Chatterton [illegible] never marry any [illegible]. That's the message."

"[illegible]! I'll attend to the matter at once."

HUMOR OF THE HOUR

Strategy.

The peddler paused at the door of the wayside cottage.

"Lady," he said, tipping his hat, "could I sell you a self revolving rolling pin?"

"No!" snapped the angular woman in the blue sunbonnet. "I wouldn't take it if you gave it to me."

"How about an educated rat trap?"

"Don't want it at any price."

"Well, I guess I'd better be goin', ma'am."

"Hold on a minute. What is that you have in the package?"

"Why, that's the Gem celebrated wrinkle remover."

"Huh! Wonder you didn't ask me to buy that."

"Oh, no, madam. I know a lady with such an exquisite complexion as you have would never need a wrinkle remover."

"Tee-hee! You men are awful. I guess I'll buy that wrinkle remover as a souvenir of a perfect gentleman, and—let's see—you might give me the rat trap and the rolling pin too."—Chicago News.

Speed Measurement.

"What is the charge against this man?" asked the judge.

"Violating the speed laws with his motorcar," answered the policeman.

"How do you know he was violating the speed law?"

"There was a trolley car on one side of his auto and a big delivery wagon on the other. They were going in the same direction he was, and he nearly kept up with them."—Washington Star.

Guilt Revealed.

"Johnny, do you smoke cigarettes?"

"I d-d-do a l-l-little, sir," stammered Johnny, paling beneath the tan of the baseball field.

The boss fixed him with his eagle eye.

"Then gimme one," he said. "I left mine on the bureau."—St. Paul Dispatch.

Main Light With Him.

"They are still talking about the sun's light dying out," some one said to Brother Williams, and his comment was brief and expressive:

"Dat ain't a-worryin' me at all. De main question with me is, When is my own light gwine out?"—Atlanta Constitution.

Affinities?

"It certainly seems poetically appropriate," says the man with the rectangular ears.

"What does?" asks the man with the peeling nose.

"That a man with hay fever should marry a grass widow."—Chicago Post.

The Reason.

Knicker—Why does he keep so many servants, do you know?

Becker—He got one girl because it was so lonely for his wife, and another because it was lonely for the cook, and a third because it was lonely for the cook and waitress.—Judge.

Habit From the Dungeon.

Convicts who were forced to drag about a ball and chain at the galleys could often be detected when released by their habit of trailing one foot after the other. John Boyle O'Reilly, condemned to convict life in Australia for his Fenian sympathies, had also in after years a habit which told a like sad story. One who knows him said:

When walking abstractedly and mechanically he always went a short distance and then retraced his steps, no matter how wide a stretch he had before him. It was always three paces forward, turn and three paces back, exactly like the restless turning of a lion in a cage. One day I asked him, "Boyle, what was the length of your cell when you were in prison—how many paces?"

"Three," he said. "Why do you ask?"

"Because when you are absentminded you always walk three paces forward and then retrace your steps."

A CONVINCING DEMONSTRATION.

A reader of these notes living at Leraysville, Pa., sends us a clipping giving a brief summary of the potato spraying experiments which have been conducted by the experiment station at Burlington, Vt., during the past eighteen years. The showing is such an excellent one that potato raisers will be glad to hear about it. Thorough spraying with the bordeaux mixture, blue vitriol, lime and water made up in the 5-5-50 recipe twice yielded 67 per cent more and spraying three times yielded 141 per cent more than the unsprayed. During the eighteen years that the station has used the bordeaux mixture there has been an average increase of 62 per cent, or 112 bushels, per acre. The lowest increase in yield was 20 per cent and the highest 215 per cent in seasons when there was much dampness. The varieties experimented with were the White Star, Polaris, Green Mountain and Delaware, and these when unsprayed yielded from 54 to 267 bushels per acre under least and most favorable conditions, while sprayed the returns varied from 133 bushels to 380 bushels per acre. These figures should be scanned twice by the fellow who pretends to raise potatoes on a commercial scale, and even for the home garden the precaution is well worth while.

A SURE HOG CHOLERA CURE.

Experiments which have been conducted by experts in animal disease at the Kansas City stockyards with a view to giving the new serum cure for hog cholera a still further test seem to prove beyond doubt that it is both effective and reliable. At the beginning of the test, which extended for thirty days, thirty-five hogs were placed in an isolated pen, twenty-two of which were inoculated with serum, four with virulent cholera blood and the nine remaining given no treatment at all. During the period all the hogs which were not vaccinated with the serum died, while the twenty-two that had been inoculated did not contract the disease at all, but were alive and healthy at the close. In order to give the new cure the severest test the treated hogs were subjected to the most aggravated type of exposure, hogs that had died of the disease being left in the pens for periods of two or three days. Dr. I. R. Baker, chief of the government inspection department at Kansas City, had the work in charge and in conjunction with his assistants will shortly make a full report of the experiments to the department of agriculture, which will in turn give the matter still further publicity.

SOMETHING TO WORK FOR.

A scad of young fellows don't fare any better than they do in a financial way because they spend every cent they earn just as fast as it comes into their hands. The outcome of this is that, saving nothing, they have nothing ahead toward which to strive and naturally feel unprepared to tackle any business proposition requiring capital or to make definite plans to have a home of their own, both of which influences would tend to have a steadying and uplifting influence on their lives. The average young fellow, plugging along alone without any well defined object in life, often has spells when he questions whether the mere feeding and clothing of himself is really worth while, and in too many cases his doubt would seem to be justifiable. It is only when he gets to working for something or somebody outside of himself that life has zest and meaning. A savings fund laid aside for some definite purpose, perhaps the starting of a home or the helping of some friend or relative in need, is a boon which thousands of young fellows ought to avail themselves of. The start may be hard, but the rest is easy. The second hundred dollars is often easier saved than the first ten.

THE NEED OF SHADE.

During the hot weather of July and August this year there appeared in some of the central western states accounts of cattle in pasture being killed by the intense heat. In most cases where such losses were reported there was no shelter for the stock from the glaring rays of the sun. In one instance all of a herd of twenty-three died, while in another some fifteen perished, the animals when found being piled up one upon another in an effort to reach a mere patch of shade hardly sufficient for a single animal. Losses of this type would seem to suggest the wisdom of providing shade of some kind in the pasture lot so that on especially hot days the stock may find refreshing shelter there. Where a grove is not available shelters of some kind should be erected, which may be left open on two or three sides so as to permit of a good circulation of air. This item is too late to help out any this year, but it may serve as a reminder for next.

The hazelnuts which the children gathered this fall will taste mighty good by the winter fire.

Good management on the farm as well as in the home consists as much in knowing what to let go as in what to do—in other words, in the power of discrimination.

Just why it is so we have never seen explained, but fruit that is grown on sandy land seems to develop a brighter color at maturity. In selecting an orchard site it is therefore well to keep this point in mind.

A British abortion remedy that is said to be very effective consists in giving animals subject to this ailment two drams of pure carbolic acid well diluted in water in soft feed every other night during each alternate fortnight during pregnancy.

Better a little dirt on the kitchen floor and a bright smile for the tired and hungry husband when he comes in from a hard day's work in the field than floors white as scrub brush and elbow grease can make them and a cross and irritable wife with the back ache.

In a good many years' experience in the feeding of silage there has been virtually no evidence forthcoming that it is in any way injurious as a feed for cattle. More than this, it is relished by the other farm animals, and all seem to thrive when it constitutes a portion of the regular ration.

Before the hot fires of the early winter are started in heater or furnace it is a good idea to inspect the flues and see if the brick and plaster are substantial enough to last until spring without repairing. It is an easy matter to overlook because it is quite out of sight, yet an important one notwithstanding this fact.

The highest price paid for beeves on the Chicago market this season was $8.30 for a bunch of native steers weighing 1,600 pounds and finished for the market at Bloomington, Ill. This means that a single animal of this weight cashed its owner $137.80. In the words of the hapless little negro in the comic supplement, "This makes a noise like prosperity."

There seems to be a pretty well settled opinion that while seed corn will retain its vitality if buried in an oat bin it will not do so if the ears are hung over the bin above the oats. The reason for this seems to be that in the first place the ear is kept quite dry, its moisture being absorbed by the oats, while in the second instance it gathers enough moisture so that hard freezes kill the germ.

The fellow who puts off the securing of his seed corn until he is afield with a husking wagon the latter part of November or December may be trusting Providence for a good stand of corn next season, but has mighty little ground on which to base any such confidence. In this as in some other familiar experiences the Lord helps those who stir around and do most to help themselves.

While a chicken will roost on most any old thing, from the edge of a barrel to the reel of a reaper, a glance at the shape of the foot when it clutches a support shows that to be comfortable the roost ought to be nearly round. While straight and even poles about two inches in diameter with the knots trimmed smooth will do nicely if one can get them, a pine 2 by 2 with the corners rounded off makes an excellent perch.

Oranges grown in some portions of Mexico are infested with maggots, the larvae of flies which lay their eggs in the skin of the growing orange and hatch by the time the fruit is ripe and have a fine time in the pulp of the orange until they emerge as fully developed flies. For this reason California, with her immense orange growing interests, has placed an embargo on Mexican oranges as well as nursery stock, so much is a spread of this pest feared. The maggot is white in color and is from a third to half an inch long.

Washington rated agriculture as one of the noblest and most useful of pursuits in a day when the methods followed were crude and the results attained meager. Today it occupies a still more exalted position and in a very true sense furnishes the means whereby we are able to subsist as a nation. The time is fast approaching, if not already here, when an increasing number of the brightest boys and girls of the land will look to agriculture and horticulture in their general and special fields as callings which they may enter with ample equipment of intelligence and energy, knowing that in return for the same effort necessary for success in professional, business or clerical pursuits they will reap a generous and substantial reward. The conditions to be found in rural life may and ought to be healthful, wholesome and uplifting—nay, even inspiring—if the right spirit is brought to its activities. Notwithstanding the progress made in the past fifteen years, there is as yet but a meager showing of the possibilities of the highest and best type of agriculture. It is the one great field of effort, tremendously wide and roomy, which has not yet been exploited and exhausted. The door of opportunity swings wide for those who would enter it, promising a type of life, though fraught with hard toil and some discouragements, at once the most health giving and independent of those pursuits which young men and women are entering today.

At the rate which automobile accidents are chronicled it begins to look as though the old saw "The fools are not all dead yet" would soon be untrue.

Cows and clover in some form are the two best agencies known for resting and regenerating tired and worn-out soils. Many realize this truth; a good many ought to.

It is fair to assume that work horses enjoy a frequent and refreshing drink of cool water just as much as workmen do. If they were remembered in this way there would be fewer of them giving out on hot days during harvest.

As a rule, the most beautiful colored autumn leaves are noticed those falls when heavy freezes hold off till late, the varied colors which the leaves of different trees take on being in way of a chemical change, the result of a natural ripening process.

Many a grower of produce comes to grief by rising to the bait of a little higher price offered by an unknown firm and shipping stuff which represents the best part of a season's work on which no account of sales is ever given and for which no pay is ever received. It is much better to play safe at somewhat lower price levels.

There is little excuse for the farm animal being afflicted with vermin or scab when there are so many effective dips and disinfectants on the market. Dipping tanks which will do for hogs, sheep and calves are on sale at most any agricultural implement house and are quite inexpensive. For larger cattle disinfectants may be applied in the form of a spray.

A flock of hens is doubtless better off from the standpoint of health if they sleep out of doors in pleasant weather in the same way that folks are if they sleep in the open air or in tents instead of in stuffy bedrooms. The hens may dislike being ejected from the henhouse for the first few nights, but they will soon become accustomed to the outdoor perch.

If the money which is annually spent by farmers in mining and other wildcat and blue sky enterprises were put into the purchase of better machinery, the installing of dairies and the hiring of more help to give the acres worked a more intensive tillage, more profit would be forthcoming from these improvements in a single season than from the aforesaid investments in a lifetime.

In latitudes where the winters are forbidding and tend to keep folks closely housed during the winter months it is a sensible thing to be out of doors during the fall and early winter as much as possible in order to store up vitality and energy, to bear the more rigorous outdoor air of the colder months. Every chance that offers should be improved to breathe this fine, crisp, life giving air that is so characteristic these October and November days.

The designations "nigh" and "off" used in referring to the left and right hand animals of a team came into use because of the fact that the driver of the pioneer ox team used to stand when driving to the left of the left hand animal so he could wield a whip in his right hand, which was nearest the team. The customary position of the driver of a team of horses is on the right instead of the left side of the seat, with the result that the nigh horse is the one farthest from him and the off horse the one nearest.

According to figures which have been compiled by the Canadian forestry department, there is in the Dominion a total of 1,500,000 square miles of standing timber, but notwithstanding this enormous reserve there were set out in 1908 under the direction of the department 3,000,000 young trees to take the place of those felled, while a total of 10,000,000 little trees have been set out during the past few years. It would have been well for this country had a like policy been inaugurated when its timber resources were considered inexhaustible.

A good number of farmers in the vicinity in which the writer lives this year attended big state fairs in company with their good wives. This is the proper system—a practice which many another man might adopt with both pleasure and profit to those concerned. From the very nature of the case family and household cares tie a woman at home closely, and for this reason special pains should be taken to see that now and then at least she is given a change which will put a new element into her life and make more endurable the humdrum work of every day. In all too many instances the farmer's wife has too little recreation and too few outings, either because the man of the house is so selfish that he won't let her step off the place or so much of a tightwad that he does not allow her the money to dress neatly or to spend on a trip that she might like to take. Any woman who does the work that falls to a woman's lot to do on the average farm should receive just as much credit for its successful operation as her husband, who cares for the stock and tills the fields. On this basis she is entitled to outings as much as her husband and to the wherewithal that she may enjoy them.

GOOD FROM THE START

Fifty-five years ago Gund's Beers were made in a log brewery and brewed in a six-gallon kettle. The superior grade of barley grown about this then sparsely settled region was the chief attraction that drew this famous German brewmaster to La Crosse. Now it is the heart of the world's finest barley growing belt and the cream of every barley crop comes to his brewery, from which combined with the finest hops grown in Old Bohemia, is brewed. Instead of a log brewery today, there stands a mammoth model 20th century plant operated and lighted by electricity to which visitors are always welcome.

It is impossible to brew a beer of a higher quality than Peerless. You should see that it is always in your home. Telephone us today for a case of Peerless, the beer of matchless flavor.

J. Pierpont Morgan has tried to buy a royal castle in Italy and failed, although he offered $5,000,000 for it, the Italian government claiming that no foreigner should be permitted to own the historic pile. In order to overcome the difficulty Mr. Morgan might buy Italy and thus cease to be a foreigner in that country.

The Youth's Companion for Sept. contains an article from the pen of the late Gov. John A. Johnson written in his raciest vein. The governor knew all the ups and downs of a country editor's life. He gave the following: "The story is told that soon after Chief Justice Chase assumed the gubernatorial chair in Ohio he issued his proclamation appointing a Thanksgiving day. To be sure of being orthodox, the governor composed his proclamation almost entirely from the Bible, which he did not recognize as quotations, assuming that every one would recognize and admire the fitness of the words, as well as his taste in selection. The proclamation meeting the eye of a Democratic editor he pounced upon it at once, and declared that he had read it before. He could not say exactly where, but he would take his oath that it was a downright plagiarism from beginning to end. That would have been a pretty fair joke, but the next day a Republican editor came out valiently in defense of the governor, pronounced the charge libelous, and challenged any man living to produce one single line of the proclamation that had appeared in print before.—Osakis Review.

Work Commenced.

Work of grading on the Thief River Falls-Duluth line of the Soo was started this week at Plummer and will be continued until it freezes up. The Soo now has a large crew of men working on the right-of-way and expects to have all of the grading done before it freezes up this fall. Just as soon as the frost goes out of the ground in the spring, the steel will be laid and next year's crop will be hauled to Duluth over the new line.

Bad Fire at Greenbush.

The livery stable of A. Hartel at Greenbush was burned to the ground Monday night and two unknown men and eight horses, together with the entire contents of the barn were consumed by the flames.

Just how the fire started is not known, but it is thought that the two unknown men who lost their lives in the fire in some way started the blaze. It is thought that they were homesteaders returning from the harvest fields.

Installment Plan Dressing.

"Clothes for the year furnished on the installment plan" is the novel offer about to be made, it is said, to the women customers of a smart London house. The plan of the shopkeeper is to agree with a client upon a sum which shall cover that client's expenditure for dress for the next twelve months. The customer binds herself to buy everything from that shop, and the shop undertakes to supply her with what she requires. The payments are to be made monthly in advance. This plan was evolved not out of a desire to save the women customers trouble, but because the firm had begun to despair of ever getting them to pay their bills.

A Great Horse.

Jumbo, a horse owned by a Savin Rock shipbuilder, is said to be the largest horse in Connecticut and it would no doubt be safe to say the largest in New England. He is nearly seven feet high and weighs 1,700 pounds. He is a most powerful animal and has dragged with apparent ease a two ton load. With the children he is a great favorite. It costs a good deal to feed him, as he has the almost incredible quantity of eight pecks of oats at each meal and makes away with over 200 pounds of hay every week. His shoes are of unusual size and weigh four pounds each.—Boston Budget.

The Price of Peace.

The announcement that France is going to spend three milliards of francs for new ships of war—that is to say, for peace—reminds us how prices have gone up since 1871. In that year France bought peace of Bismarck for one milliard. And a milliard, furthermore, was deemed in that day a fairly stiff figure—the thrifty French more than hinted that Bismarck had driven a sharp bargain, whereas on the occasion of the present purchase the nation is reported as quite in a glow of delight.—Puck.

Vulcan.

Vulcan was discovered in 1859, only to be effectively obliterated from the planetary system fifty years later. Leverrier, who acted as godfather to the new addition, calculated a path and found that the planet revolved around the sun in about twenty days. Yet other observers failed ever to see the planet, and now Professor Campbell announces that the eclipse observations of recent years prove almost conclusively that the existence of such a body is a practical impossibility.—Argonaut.

--FINE SUITS FOR---

AUTUMN AND WINTER WEAR

... The new suits are here and we believe that when you see them you will agree with us in saying that they are the acme of perfection in tailoring. The new patterns and colorings are amongst the most handsome and attractive we have ever brought to this city, and the styles are finer and better than usual. . . . .

While the fabrics are largely in the nature of novelties, they are far removed from freakish fads which some people have been trying to force upon the public. We draw a distinct line between freak clothing and desirable novelties.

Some people go to buy a suit—try on the coat and pay their good money—they've been educated to buy that way. We put the vest and trousers on and fit you from heel to collar. If it isn't right in the store it won't be any better when you get home. It must be right or you can't have it from us.

KORSTAD'S

CLOTHING AND SHOES.

School Notes.

The football team, though on an average much lighter than Fosston, succeeded in winning handsomely from their old antagonists last Saturday by a score of 10 to 6. Coach Richardson's generalship and instruction are fast rounding the boys into championship form. The team will play Red Lake Falls high school next Saturday at the county seat.

The high school enrollment to date is 162.

Drinking water for the schools is secured from drive wells in the school basement and no rubbish or filth is permitted to collect in any of the three rooms. The water is kept in each school room in covered earthen jars, each of which is supplied with a faucet. These vessels are emptied by the janitor or a teacher every evening immediately following dismissal, and they are washed once a week with hot water. Waste pails are provided for all the jars, into which the children throw in used drinking water. So far as possible, the pupils are urged to supply themselves with individual drinking cups. These precautions make the water as free from contamination as it is possible to have it where modern drinking fountains and city water are not supplied.

Weekly fire drills are held in all the buildings. Last Thursday the eight rooms in the Knox were emptied in thirty seconds.

Mr. Walz, state truant officer and deputy labor inspector for this district, has, for a week past, been investigating child labor conditions in this city. The factory and compulsory school laws enacted by the last legislature are most stringent, and parents, teachers and boards of education have little choice but to observe and obey them when the state officials put them in operation. No sane person will deny the value of the new laws and all who have any interest in the school children will encourage the officers in the performance of their duties. Where satisfactory reasons are given for the child's absence from school the state officers grant permits for a certain period. Mr. Walz will make frequent visits to Thief River Falls hereafter.

The Knox outhouses were enlarged and repaired two weeks ago and are fit now to care for the large enrollment in that building.

Suggestions, which will tend to increase the efficiency of the school system in any part and make it more valuable for the pupils, are invited from any quarter by the school administration. Every person, no matter how humble, has an equal right and interest in the school with all others and the views of such are eagerly sought and will be put in operation if they promise the least improvement or advancement. The superintendent is never too busy to listen to suggestions, and even to criticisms and complaints, street corner gossip about teachers and schools will never result in anything but harm and disaster.

There is some excellent football material in the high school which cannot be utilized this season. Several students from the country who entered late are striving to make up lost work and are thus unable to practice for the team. All football players are compelled to have their studies in a satisfactory state before they are eligible for the game.

THE MAN WHO SWORE

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

When it became known in the village that George White and Edith Smith were engaged to be married almost everybody said that it was a good match. George was what they termed a model young man, who had just started in the grocery business, and Edith was a schoolteacher and liked by all. The pair were congratulated on all sides, and there was but one doubting Thomas. That was Edith's Uncle John, who was at the home on a visit. When she asked him for his opinion he waited a moment before putting the query:

"Does this young man of yours swear?"

"No, of course not! He never uttered an oath in his life!" was the somewhat indignant reply.

"When he gets mad does he kick things?"

"But he doesn't get mad."

"If he woke up some morning to find the gate open and a hog in the garden would he scramble for a club and try to kill that hog?"

"I don't think so. I think he would drive the animal out without making any fuss about it."

"Then don't marry him."

"Why, Uncle John, how you talk!"

"Don't marry him. My dear, I am sixty-five years old. I have been observing human nature for the last fifty years. There are heaps of good men in this world, but they are men not made of putty. Things vex 'em. Other things make 'em mad. They swear. They kick. They break things. Sometimes they fight."

"And such men drive their wives from home," commented the niece.

"Such men don't do anything of the sort. It's the other kind. They don't swear at their wives, but at the weather, at hogs and oxen, at the ax flying off the handle, at a barrel of cider rolling over 'em as they are getting it down cellar. It's the smooth, placid man who does the harm. Find him and you'll find a nagger. Find him and you'll find a sneerer, a husband that can cut and humiliate and smile at the same time."

"Uncle John, you've got it all wrong. You are one of the best men in the world, and I never heard you swear."

"Neither did your Aunt Mary. Leastwise, I never swore at her. And yet I swore. Lord, gal, there have been times when I made the shingles in the barn fairly smoke. I've been so mad that I wanted to do murder, but swearing saved me from it. Ten minutes of ripping things up the back quieted me down. One time I hid $200 in cash in the pocket of an old coat. Along came a tramp, and your aunt gave him the garment. I didn't know it for a week. Did I chop her up with the ax? No. I went out behind the barn and jumped up and down and swore; I pounded the barn; I dug up the sile; I broke limbs off a pear tree. In half an hour I was back in the house kissing Mary's tears away and telling her not to mind."

The marriage took place, and six months later there was a separation. The husband could and did gibe and sneer and find fault and do it as placidly as a goose pond. He never lost his temper, and his face wore a smile, but he made home a sort of hell. The young wife went to the village where Uncle John lived, while the husband remained at home. People said it was her fault—all but the uncle. He said:

"I told you so. It's only a separation thus far, and there's hopes you may get together again. Let me run things this time."

Edith secured a place in the telephone office, and almost the first voice she heard over the wire after being in charge was that of her husband. He also recognized hers, but they treated each other as strangers.

One day the "Hello, central!" was followed by the announcement:

"Say, Edith, people here are saying that we ought to make up."

"Yes?"

"They say it's too bad that we couldn't get along better."

"Yes?"

"They say I ought to be the first one to make advances, and so I'm going to tell you that I wish you'd come back."

"Who is this speaking?"

"Why, George, of course."

"And you want me to come back?"

"Yes."

"Have you learned to swear yet?"

"What a question! No, of course not!"

"Then we won't talk further. Good-by."

He was hurt, and he waited a week before calling her up again to ask:

"Well, Edith, what do you think?"

"Can you swear yet?"

"But what has that got to do with"—

"Everything. When you can swear, fling axes and break down trees I'll talk to you. I want you to make yourself all over."

This time he waited two weeks. Then the message came:

"Edith, listen to this: ——! ——! ——! ——! —— ——?"

"Yes, dear."

"And to the way I'm breaking boxes and throwing tomato cans around the store."

"I hear, George."

"Today I have licked three tramps, discharged my clerk, kicked in the head of a barrel of molasses and told Deacon Prime to go to Texas. I've made a change, and I feel lovely. Will you come back to me?"

"I'll be there on the afternoon train tomorrow. Oh, George, keep it up! Grow worse all the time."

And George did, and the people point out the house to strangers as the happiest household in the village.

Boy Killed a Bear.

The 14-year-old son of Herman Also of the town of Espiee, in Eastern Marshall county, killed a huge bear on his fathers' farm recently.

The animal was making a trip across the open prarie near the farm buildings, when the attention of the boy was attracted to the bear by the house dog's barking. The lad seized the rifle and after a short chase came within shooting distance of bruin. The bear showed an inclination to attack the boy. A few shots brought the animal down, and it was found that he weighed 317 pounds, being one of the largest ever killed in that section.

Prof. Maxwell Leaves.

Prof. Maxwell, who has had the leadership of the local band since early this spring, tendered his resignation the first of the week and left last evening for Chicago where he expects to remain permanently. Mr. Maxwell deserves untold credit for his efficiency as a musical instructor and the local organization has attained a standard that is truly marvelous under his able management, and it is with keen regret the people of this city learn of his departure.

Badly Injured.

While driving out to her home near Kratka yesterday in company with her husband, Mrs. H. C. Lane was accidently shot yesterday afternoon by the discharge of a shot gun. The left arm was badly injured and it is not known at this time whether or not the injured member can be saved. Mrs. Lane is a daughter in law of Fred A. Lane, one of the first settlers out near Kratka.

POLITICAL POTPOURRI

Contest for Mayor of Thief River Falls Promises to Be an Interesting Battle.

Three Candidates in the Field and All Are Considered Strong Men.

The contest for mayor of Thief River Falls at the election to be held on the 2nd day of November promises to be a warm contest, and the winner will no doubt know that he has been in a political battle. Mayor T. P. Hamre is to seek an endorsement of his administration and this week filed a petition with City Clerk Backe which will place his name upon the official ballot. Ed Wilcox is not adverse to serving the city for two years as its mayor and a petition placing his name upon the ballot has also been filed. Another petition placing F. H. Gambell in the field as a candidate is also being circulated and will be filed this week.

Of course there are a lot of over-enthusiastic friends of the various candidates that believe it is going to be a walk-away for their favorite candidate, but in a three cornered fight it is going to be no easy matter to pick the winner until after the votes are counted. All of the candidates have certain elements of strength that make them formable candidates, and it is not probable that the winner wilnot have a majority of the votes.

Two new candidates for aldermen have developed in the past few days. J. J. Weeks says that he will be a candidate for alderman at large and Anton Sundahl is going to enter the race in the Second ward, where some hot political battles have been fought in days of old.

Charlie Alexander's petition is being circulated in the Third ward, and as yet there is no candidate in opposition.

Milton Forder is as yet undecided as to whether or not he will be a candidate for alderman in the Second ward again, but the chances are that he will.

A petition nominating A. H. Fasel for alderman in the First ward is being circulated.

At present there are four candidates for aldermen at large and only two can be elected. Ben Christianson, J. J. Weeks, Jens P. Jensen and Robert McGinn are in the field and there is a rumor that there will be others. Mr. McGinn has never given his consent to become a candidate, but friends of his have secured a petition and his name will be placed upon the ballot.

It is stated that J. C. Berg, of the East Side will become a candidate for alderman, but whether he will run in the ward or at large is not known.

E. Strassburger Dead.

Carl Riedesel received a letter from a friend at Seattle this morning announcing the death there Oct. 7 of E. Strassburger, a former well known architect of this city, who left here about a year ago. The family have many friends in this city who will sympathize with them in their bereavement.—Crookston Times.

Behind in Threshing.

Stephen Singer, the Kratka merchant, was in the city the first of the week attending to business matters. He says that no threshing has been done thus far in a radius of five miles from Kratka and that the farmers out there have the best crop this year in the history of the reservation. Six threshing rigs are now pulling into this territory but it will be late in November before all of the threshing is completed. The farmers have all been busy plowing and have accomplished much in this line.

In Business at Missoula.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Healy are spending a few days with relatives at Red Lake Falls. Mr. Healy has resigned his position at Detroit and will associate himself with his brother, Leo Healy, in the piano business at Missoula, Montana. The Healy Piano company, in which the four Healy brothers will be interested, with Harry and Leo the active partners, will open for business at Missoula early in November. There is little doubt that it will be a successful venture. They are going to a good field and both of them are capable musicians and good clean men. Their many Red Lake Falls friends will wish them well.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

MAY REACH THE BORDER

Rumored That Soo Will Extend from Thief River Falls to International Falls.

Old Logging Roads Would Connect With New Extention and May Be Purchased.

Duluth Herald: Are the Soo officials looking for a route from the line of the proposed Thief River Falls extension to International Falls?

The question is being asked among railroad men who have been watching closely the trend of traffic development. The Soo officials, including President Pennington, were at International Falls last week. While there the officials were very busy looking over certain locations.

The Minneapolis & Rainy River railroad, a logging road, runs thirty-six miles north of Deer River. The railroad known as the Hill City road runs south of Deer River. It is stated that the Soo officials would not be adverse to securing this property and including both lines in an extension that is contemplated from some point on the assured Thief River Falls extension.

This would give the Soo a direct line from International Falls, which with its large mills, will soon be a heavy shipping point. There will be a large amount of freight shipped from the border town as soon as the big power mills are under operation, and railroad men say that it will increase as a shipping point in the future.

At the present time the Canadian Northern has a strong footing at International Falls. The Canadian Pacific, the parent company to the Soo railroad ever an aggressive company, is fighting the Canadian Northern at every possible point, and an outlet at International Falls would give the Canadian Pacific, through the Soo, an opportunity to get get some of the business of the Canadian Northern as well as to tap a prospectively rich frieght point.

Died Suddenly.

Ole Kittelson, who lives up near the round house died Sunday from heart failure while sitting on a chair. The deceased was about 70 years of age and has lived here but a short time. Besides a wife, he leaves seven sons. The funeral services were held on Tuesday.

Let the Contract.

The supervisors of the town of Rocksbury were down southeast of town Monday and let the contract for grading two miles of what is known as the reservation line road to D. P. O'Neill for $300. This road will accommodate a large number of residents living southeast of town.

$8.50 HEDGETHORN PUNCTURE-PROOF SELF-HEALING TIRES A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. Sixty thousand pairs sold last year. Over two hundred thousand pairs now in use.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

THE DAWSONS' HONEYMOON COOK.

Conditions Changed So Much That She Concluded to Remain.

By HARRIET G. CANFIELD.

They had been married two years, "long enough," Prue suddenly declared, "to dispense with all honeymoon demonstrativeness."

Tom Dawson put down his evening paper and stared at the pretty little partner of his joys and sorrows. "I'm afraid I don't understand, dear," he said.

"Why, it's very simple. If you know that I care for you—and I am certain that you care for me—all signs of affection are quite superfluous. They may be dropped."

"Oh!" Tom said dubiously. "Well, what shall I drop first?" There was a twinkle in his eyes, and Prue saw it.

"To be serious," she pleaded, "to begin with, you must not kiss me when you come home to dinner and—and—other times. You must drop"—

"Drop you a courtesy instead," he interrupted her laughingly.

"Don't be ridiculous, Tom! You know very well that there are many useless customs that should be abandoned, many things that should be dropped."

"Yes," he said, smiling whimsically. "Hannah thinks so, I know. She dropped my meerschaum this morning. We must take lessons of that girl, Prue, or drop her. On the whole, I think we'd better drop her."

"It will not be necessary," she said with dignity. "Hannah gave notice this morning. I shall have to find some one else within a week."

"I'm sorry—sorry, I mean, for the family she'll drop down on next. Hannah's no featherweight, you know. Speaking of dropping"—

"I am not speaking of it now. It is quite useless while you are in such a mood," she said indignantly, rising from her chair.

Before she could leave the room Tom was at her side. "Forgive me, dear," he said. "I didn't know you were in such sober earnest." He stopped to kiss the pink cheek next to him, but Prue lifted a protesting hand. "Don't, Tom!" she said. "You forget. It isn't necessary."

"No, 'it isn't necessary' "—the words came soberly enough now—"only sweet and natural."

And the next day, when the time came to say goodby, Prue had no occasion to complain of his 'honeymoon demonstrativeness.'

"Tom is very sensible this morning," she said to herself, but she sighed as she said it and went about all day with a wistful look in her blue eyes. Tom was "sensible" in the evening also, and the next morning he was so very sensible that Prue cried a little, but perhaps it was for joy. Even "sensible" people do that.

That afternoon Matilda made her appearance. Hannah came into the sitting room to announce her arrival. "Matilda Stebbins is here, Mrs. Dawson," she said, "after my place. Will I show her in, ma'am? She and me used to work together once, and she's a dreadful good cook."

"Yes, I will see her," Prue said. And in a moment a tall, lank, freckle faced girl was standing in the doorway, smiling at her. "Will you be seated?" Prue asked pleasantly, and the girl slid into a chair, still smiling.

"I hope you'll give me a try," she said. "I'd like first rate to cook for you and him."

It was Prue's turn to smile. "Have you had much experience?" she asked.

"Heaps of it, ma'am, but never long to one place."

"That seems strange!" Prue exclaimed.

"Well, you see, ma'am, the honeymoons don't usually stretch out over and above six months."

"The honeymoons?"

"Yes, ma'am. I don't cook and do for none but new married folks. Hannah told me about you and him when she first came here two months ago. She said as how she knew you was just married."

Prue blushed. "How did Hannah know it?" she asked.

"Easy enough, ma'am. It's like measles and whoopin' cough. She could tell by the symptoms. I'd rather live where there's lovemakin' goin' on continual than read the best novel ever made up."

This was interesting but very embarrassing to Mrs. Thomas Dawson. Two days ago she would have laughed heartily at Matilda's sayings and have found much enjoyment in repeating them to Tom. But present conditions made the girl's remarks seem almost personal, yet she felt tempted to engage her.

"Matilda," she said, "did Hannah tell you the wages she received and the work she was expected to do?"

"Yes'm, she did, and I don't think she'll better herself none goin' to work in a factory."

"Very well. I will give you a trial. When can you come?"

"I can stay now, ma'am, and get dinner if you'll let me go home for my clothes when the work's rid up. Hannah wants to leave as soon as she can anyways."

And so it happened that the honeymoon cook held sway in the Dawson kitchen when the owner of the house came home that evening.

"You will be glad to hear that I've engaged a new girl," Prue said to him in the distantly polite tone that she had recently adopted in speaking to her husband.

"Very glad," he answered. "If she is an improvement on Hannah."

The dinner was excellent, and Matilda was very attentive in her service at table, beaming on them as though she would say, "Bless you, my children!" Late in the evening, when they were apparently much absorbed in reading, they heard a strange sound, half cough, half sneeze, in the hall. Prue looked up from the book. "What was that?" she said. Tom was on his way to the door when Matilda entered the room. "It was me, ma'am," she said. "I never walk in on new married folks without givin' 'em warnin' I'm a-comin'—not at first. Of course they get used to me after awhile and go right on loverin' if I do see 'em. Nothin' suits me better'n that!"

Prue's face was scarlet. She dared not look at Tom. Oh, why had she engaged the services of such a silly, sentimental creature?

"If you please, ma'am," Matilda continued, "I'm goin' home now to get my clothes, and I'll say good night to you and him."

"Thought we were 'new married folks,' did she?" Tom said grimly. "I can't imagine why. She's a good cook," he added, "and I hope we can keep her."

"We can," Prue said to herself, "if we will meet her peculiar requirements. But I'll not be driven into any foolishly unnecessary display of affection."

For three days the Dawsons enjoyed the results of Matilda's culinary efforts, but a heavy heart will affect the best of appetites somewhat, and on the fourth day Matilda complained that they "didn't seem to relish their victuals" and she "guessed she'd better be goin'."

"Oh, no!" Prue cried. "No one could suit us better than you do."

"I'm glad of that, ma'am, but there's another reason." And she hung her head.

Prue was painfully embarrassed, for she could guess the other reason. "I hope you will stay," she stammered.

"I'll think it over till tomorrow, ma'am, but I feel as if Hannah hadn't been fair with me, leadin' me to expect things was different between you and him from what they really be."

Tom came home later than usual that night. Prue was in the hall giving some instructions to Matilda when he opened the door. His eyes looked tired and sad, she thought. She hesitated a moment—only a moment—for Matilda was present, and now was her opportunity to redeem herself in the girl's eyes, when she ran to meet her husband and held up her face to be kissed. The tired look faded from his eyes as if by magic, and he put both arms around her and held her close. "Has my little wife come to her senses?" he asked.

"Hush!" she answered. "I still think it's unnecessary, but Matilda likes it. She refuses to stay unless we are 'affectionate like.'" And she laughed hysterically.

"Oh," Tom said. That was all, but there was a world of disappointment in the exclamation. Then he looked beyond his wife at Matilda, who stood beaming at him, her hands clasped in ecstasy. "Well, she'll stay now," he said bitterly. "I congratulate you."

Yes, Matilda had decided to remain. She came to the sitting room door after dinner to announce her decision.

After she had gone Prue left her seat and moved restlessly about the room. Then she sighed so deeply that Tom looked up from his paper. "Headache?" he asked.

"N-no," she said. Her lips trembled, and she buried her face in her hands and sobbed out, "It's just heartache, Tom."

"Heartache?" he said gently. "I thought I had a monopoly of that."

Prue came close to his chair and leaned against an arm of it. "Tom," she cried remorsefully—"Tom, dear, will you forgive me and"—her voice sank to a whisper—"kiss me?"

He caught her hands in his and drew her down beside him. "To please Matilda?" he asked.

"Oh, Tom, you know better!"

"Because if it's to please that girl I'll be hanged if I"— But something prevented further speech just then.

Ted and the Wood Pile.

"I'll be glad when I get that whole pile of wood in. Then I'll be through with it, won't I, mother?"

"No, Ted. You know I shall want you to carry out the ashes after the wood is burned up," answered mother.

"Then I'll be through with it, mother?"

"No, I think not," answered mother, while Ted's eyes grew big with wonder. "You will scatter the ashes on the cornfield, and father will plow them in in the spring. Then you will help him plant the corn, you know. The corn will grow, eating the ashes and ground about it, and by and by you will eat the sweet corn."

"Oh, we'll sort of eat the wood ourselves, and that will be the end of the old wood pile."

"Not quite," said mother. "There will be cobs left and stalks of corn. We may feed them to the pigs or to the cows, and that will give us meat or milk."

"Well, I never knew before that there was so much in a wood pile," said Ted.—Exchange.

FOREIGNER ON SWEDISH STRIKE

In Spite of All Their Sacrifices the Workmen Suffered a Terrible Defeat, He Says, but at the Same Time They Have Won the Greatest Victory, Namely, a Victory Over One's Self—Conduct Due Chiefly to Their Sense of Responsibility.

SWEDEN.

Says a foreign writer regarding the strike in Sweden: "The great Swedish strike is closed. Foreigners contributed about $270,000 to the aid of the strikers. Denmark and Norway contributed one-fourth each of this amount, and most of the rest came from Germany. This social struggle was backed by the Germanic nations, and the Swedish workingmen who were the actors were compelled to action by the Swedish employers who, as a result of over-production, exerted pressure upon the working classes and declared a lockout. The great strike is declared off. The government has stepped forth to arrange matters. Everywhere the workingmen had to give up their demands and the consummation; therefore, seems to be an economical defeat to the poorest portion of the Swedish people. Over 10,000 laborers are without work, facing the coming winter without any means of sustaining life. Hence, with all their sacrifices they have suffered a terrible defeat. But at the same time they have won the greatest victory which a class as well as an individual can win, namely a victory over one's self. All the newspapers are compelled to admit that the behaviour of the laborers during the strike was exemplary. This is due largely to the prohibition of the liquor traffic. But the conduct of the strikers is due chiefly to their own sense of responsibility. The working classes have demonstrated that they are able to govern themselves, and they will soon have to be permitted to take part in the government of society." Since this was written it is evident from the dispatches that the strike is not over and there may be some more trouble in store. At any rate the sober and thinking conservative part of Sweden ardently hopes that future trouble may be averted and that the country may soon settle down to a sound industrial basis again.

Two alleged international thieves have been caught by the Stockholm police and are now lodged in jail. Those under arrest are the Polish-English Jews, Soloman Liekeskind and Kopel Rozmarin, and the latter's wife, Dina Rozmarin. They are accused of committing pocket thefts in Stockholm, Gothenburg and Copenhagen. Both of these men have been under arrest in Germany for conducting a series of pocket thefts in Sedlets and Warschau.

A Swedish paper states that the king has appointed six prominent men to propose some way of relief for conscripts who are attending the university or some other institution of learning. The aim of the government is to see that such young men can get the desired education without neglecting their military training. Some kind of relief is also desired for conscripts who are heads of poor families.

The exposition closed its doors Sept. 30. It has been exceptionally successful when it is considered that there has been a big strike in progress. The management has not made a great deal of money, but they more than broke even and that is saying a good deal for such an unfortunate season in Sweden as this has been.

The Swedish Mission society is short of money and was compelled the other day to make a loan of 10,000 crowns. During the past few months it has been practically impossible for the society to collect any money and some of the missionaries have actually been in want on account of it.

James G. Bailey, secretary to the American legation in Stockholm, has left Sweden and departed for Mexico via New York, where he will be secretary to the American legation. He has been succeeded by Coleman May, who has already arrived in Stockholm.

The maneuvers up in Norrland this year were certainly a success. The king expressed himself as delighted at the splendid showing made by the army and in his farewell speech to them he complimented them highly.

Carl Bernadotte, the oldest son of Prince Bernadotte, has entered the army and is now doing service as a cavalry man. He is very popular and is said to have an ardent desire to rise in the military circles.

Countess Casa de Miranda and daughter arrived Sept. 8 in Stockholm to see the exposition. The aged diva is still enjoying excellent health and is wonderfully well preserved considering her advanced years.

The government's customs receipts on whisky, sugar, beer, malts and railways during the first seven months of the present year amounted to 55,262,321.71 as against 54,664,765.71 during the same period last year.

The Good Templars are steadily increasing in numbers in Sweden. The reports from the various lodges show that there is now a total membership of 670,000 members, of which 200,000 are residents in Sweden.

Prince Carl was a visitor at the royal palace in Copenhagen during the latter part of last month, prior to making his round of inspection in Eksjo and Skofde.

NORWAY.

An exchange states that something like a mutinous movement has been started among the non-commissioned officers of the Norwegian army. The young men who are attending the military schools in the large cities have asked permission to leave the schools. But the most serious feature of the movement is that the older non-commissioned officers of the Kristainssund brigade have made a systematic agitation against the schols for non-commissioned officers. There is no secrecy about it. A meeting representing all the corps of the brigade passed a resolution calling upon all the non-commissioned officers in the country to "disseminate information as to the future prospects of graduates from the schools for non-commissioned officers." It may be an easy matter to chastise those who have passed the resolution, but the trouble is that the sentiment expressed by the resolution is very general throughout the country.

Norwegian laborers are taking a great deal of interest in the big strike in Sweden and are showing their sympathy by contributing large sums of money. Thus far they have contributed not less than 290,000 crowns to the Swedish strikers, and if reports are true they may send additional sums of money. With the aid that Swedish strikers are getting from both Germany and Norway the strike will undoubtedly be prolonged and there is no telling at this stage of the game where it may end.

Fin Frolich, the Seattle sculptor, who recently completed modelling a bust of Jim Hill, is a Norwegian by birth and a grandson of Banker F. H. Frolich, of Christiania. Mr. Frolich has been coming in for a great deal of praise in the Norwegian press lately and after he has completed modelling a statue of Grieg in Brooklyn he will be asked to come to Norway, where there is much work ahead of him. His reputation is already assuming international proportions.

Roald Amundsen is now planning a Greenland expedition. It was his original intention to go in quest of the north pole, but this plan was of course abandoned since it was announced to the world that Cook and Peary had been there. Mr. Amundsen plans to use the "Fram" on the Greenland expedition and will take fourteen men with him. Mr. Amundsen contemplates starting on his expedition early next spring.

The new public school building in Tromsoe was dedicated Sept. 4. It has twelve immense rooms which are modern in every respect, including steam heat and electric lights. The new school building has been erected at an expense of 100,000 crowns.

There have been such abundant rains in Nordfjord and vicinity that the farmers up in that section are growing very much discouraged. The autumn fruits and vegetables have also been much damaged, as well as a lot of hay.

Bjornstjerne Bjornson has suffered a relapse and has been compelled to take to his bed again. His physicians are doing everything in their power for him, but it is not believed that his chances for recovery are very strong.

The new church at Aalesund was dedicated Sept. 15. There were hundreds of people present and the festivities lasted several days. The new church is large in proportions and is one of the finest in this section of the country.

Trondhjem will have a new postoffice building which will cost at least 350,000 crowns. The building contract has been placed in the hands of Contractor P. Lawzow.

The population of Norway is at present estimated at 2,350,000. The county's population has just about held its own during the past five years.

Four thousand crates of lingon berries were sent from Christiania to Stettin, Germany, the other day.

H. A. Eckell has been appointed Norwegian consul in London.

DENMARK.

There is a new kind of rat which has been imported into Copenhagen which threatens to become a regular pest. They are especially fond of bananas and are plentiful in that section of the city where they deal entirely in this kind of fruit. They will attack the bananas most vociferously and at night time they come in droves. A number of the leading banana firms have been compelled to apply for aid to the board of health and now a rigid campaign will be instituted against the pernicious rodents.

Commander R. C. Nielsen died suddenly week before last while on a business trip to England. He was a member of the shipbuilding firm of Burmeister & Wain and had amassed an immense fortune. His family connections were the very best and he was considered one of the leading business men of the country.

The department of merchant marine has sentenced the Oresund Steamship company to pay damages amounting to 41,000 crowns to Carl & Christian, owners of "The Progress," which last April ran into the Swedish steamer "Svetice."

An eighty-seven-year-old sister of the late theatrical director, Theodor Andersen, was found dead in her apartments at Fredriksberg, the other day. She had evidently been suffocated by smoke.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

Wilbur Wright, the aeroplanist, defied the air, the water and the land in a marvelous flight over the numberless craft in New York harbor and the North river. On starting Mr. Wright went up the North river, over the fleet of battleships and on past Grant's tomb, encircling the British cruiser Argyle. Returning at faster speed, with the wind, he came back over the water and landed at his starting point in the most matter of fact way possible.

In the presence of a gathering of spectators estimated at nearly 500,000 souls George Robertson, driving a ninety-horsepower Simplex car over the unrivaled eight-mile course in Fairmont park, Philadelphia, won the 200-mile race for the Quaker City Motor club cup, beating a score of the best cars in the world.

Former Governor Frank S. Black appeared before the court of appeals at Albany, N. Y., for Harry K. Thaw and attacked the constitutionality of the act under which Thaw was committed to the Matteawan state hospital for the criminal insane and the law under which Thaw is being detained in that institution.

The international balloon race for the Gordon Bennett cup has been won by Edgar W. Mix, the American aeronaut, of Columbus, O., who will take the cup back to the United States. Mr. Mix sailed from Zurich, Switzerland, and landed north of Warsaw, in Russian Poland.

Because Mr. von Phul, pilot of the balloon St. Louis No. 3, forgot to mail a letter to the Aero club of America notifying that body of his intention to try for the Lahm cup, his flight from St. Louis into Minnesota will not give him the trophy.

With the pennant won by the Pittsburg club for another twelve months the 1909 championship baseball season of the National league has passed into history. Chicago was second and New York third.

The Pittsburg champions of the National league defeated Detroit, the American league pennant winners, in the opening game of the world's championship series by the score of 4 to 1.

After being kept in jail at Bristol, Tenn., for five months charged with counterfeiting John Preston has been released on the discovery that the alleged bad money is all genuine.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

John R. Walsh, convicted of misapplication of the funds of the Chicago National bank, must serve a sentence of five years' imprisonment, imposed upon him by the trial jury unless the supreme court upsets affirmation of a verdict of guilty handed down by the United States circuit court of appeals.

Police Inspector John J. O'Brien, Lieutenant Hugh Reynolds and Sergeant Hugh Meyers of Brooklyn were indicted by the grand jury of Kings county charged with aiding and abetting bookmaking at Sheepshead and Gravesend race tracks.

Pleading guilty to murdering his father Andrew Krupnicke of Sydney, Neb., aged fourteen years, took a life sentence in the penitentiary and thus perhaps saved from the gallows his mother, first charged with the commission of the crime.

John Ervin, a Des Moines laborer, shot and killed his divorced wife, shot a neighbor, Roy Smith, who tried to prevent the tragedy, and then shot himself through the brain. He and his wife died almost instantly. Smith is seriously injured.

Fred E. Link of the Link Manufacturing company of Erie, Pa., insane over business reverses killed his wife and then ended his own life.

ENDORSES THE TAWNEY BILL

Convention Approves Plan for River Improvement.

The Upper Mississippi River Improvement association, in session at Winona, took important action in adopting resolutions urgently asking congress to adopt the bill now before it introduced by Congressman Tawney to appropriate $20,000,000 for establishment of a six-foot channel in the Mississippi from Minneapolis to St. Louis, the work to be completed in ten years.

Endorsement was given to the work of the National Rivers and Harbors congress.

The establishment of public landings along the Mississippi river was urged. The creation of a waterway commission in each state along the Mississippi river was recommended.

Governor Eberhart of Minnesota aroused great enthusiasm in a fifteen-minute address in which in most pointed language he set forth the advantages of river transportation and said the time had arrived when the policy of national development of inland waterways by deepening of channels and canalization of rivers, which has been so successful in Germany, France and other European countries, must be adopted and earnestly pursued by the United States.

TWO LANDED IN MINNESOTA

Balloons Starting From St. Louis Make Long Flight.

A lack of acquaintance with the geographical details of the northern part of Minnesota was all that prevented the St. Louis No. 3 balloon from sailing on northward many hundred miles for a record of the world.

Halted on the verge of Mille Lacs lake, whose broad waters they mistook for those of Lake Superior, Von Phul and his aide, O'Reilly, representing the St. Louis Aero club, landed with their balloon still surging at its ropes for the wider freedom of the air.

The Indiana, which sailed from St. Louis under protest because H. H. McGill had no license, dropped to the ground near Albany, Minn., eighty miles northwest of St. Paul, only to get a physician for McGill. McGill left St. Louis in a hammock in the basket on account of an injury he received at the Aero grounds there. McGill has been granted a license by the Aero Club of America since his departure. Outside of the injuries sustained in landing, the balloon was still in fine shape for a continuous flight.

AUTUMN LEAVES TO BLAME

Forty Persons Injured in Trolley Collision at St. Paul.

Forty passengers, all employes at the Northern Pacific shops and all citizens of St. Paul, were injured and 200 more were in danger when the autumn leaves on the tracks caused a rear end collision of two Como-Harriet cars.

Fortunately, with half a dozen exceptions, the injuries consisted only of general cuts, scratches and bruises, the cuts being caused by flying glass from every window in the two cars. One man may lose his right eye and at least two may be internally injured. It is considered a miracle that no passengers were killed outright.

FAIL TO GET INTO SAFE

Robbers Wreck Vault of Bank at Sandstone.

An attempt was made by cracksmen to blow up the First National bank of Sandstone at 2 o'clock in the morning. The vault was wrecked, but a small safe withstood the attempts. The robbers got nothing. The bank fixtures were wrecked, causing a loss of $1,000.

The tools of the robbers were thrown into a quarry and were found there later.

ENDS LIFE UNDER TRAIN

Engine Carries Dead Man's Hand to Next Town.

An unknown man hurled himself in front of a Great Northern train in Sauk Center, thirty miles from St. Cloud. Custer Danzl, a section foreman at St. Cloud, found a human hand on the track. It proved to be the hand of the Sauk Center man. The unknown was about thirty years old and well dressed.

Farmer Fatally Injured.

With the bowels perforated by the tines of a pitchfork A. Ellingson, thirty-five years of age, residing in Welch, lies at St. John's hospital at Red Wing in a critical condition, and there is no hope for his recovery. The man was unloading grain when he fell off the wagon and struck the fork with such force that it penetrated the abdomen.

Admits Stabbing Fleury.

William Lucy, police commissioner of South St. Paul, is held at the county jail at St. Paul charged with stabbing Beech Fleury, proprietor of a roadhouse at Bass lake. Lucy says that he was held up on the veranda of the house and that an attempt was made to take $300 from him. He asserts that he stabbed Fleury in self-defense.

Prominent Suffragettes Jailed.

Newcastle, Eng., Oct. 11—Lady Constance Lytton and Mrs. H. N. Brailsford, who were arrested here following a suffragette demonstration against David Lloyd-George, the chancellor of the exchequer, were sentenced each to a month's imprisonment.

LID IS OFF AGAIN

Saloons Still Doing Business in Mahnomen County.

SERIOUS TROUBLE IS FEARED

Further Raids by Federal Officers May Be Resisted.

The lid is not on in Mahnomen county despite the raid made by the federal deputies recently. None of the four saloons in the village of Mahnomen are closed.

One of the places at least in Waubon is running, and it is asserted that a real dry man is not permitted to suffer in Ogema.

When William E. Johnson and his nine aides, as representatives of the United States, destroyed the liquor found in the saloons they did not arrest or molest the proprietors. The status of the saloon men is the same as it was before the raid. The only effect so far as they are concerned is a financial loss, and in one case in Mahnomen that amounted to $2,100.

But all had reserve supplies that were not found and destroyed by the federal raiders. All have brought out their reserve and are doing business as before.

Assistant United States Attorney Oakley of St. Paul, who is looking after the interests of the federal deputies under arrest, says that the places will be raided again.

Serious Trouble May Result.

One thing seems certain: The agents of the United States Indian service could not pull off another raid in Mahnomen county without stirring up serious trouble. The citizens and officials in the towns affected are in sympathy with the liquor dealers.

But it is scarcely to be expected that another raid could be made without violence.

The people of the other towns of White Earth reservation are inclined to blame Ogema for all the trouble. There are four saloons in that little village. It is claimed the places have been run in open defiance of the state law.

Ogema is only five miles from the White Earth agency, and attracted the attention of the officials to such an extent that all saloons in the country have suffered.

As the citizens of some other towns do not uphold conditions in Ogema, they do not want to be classed with that village. They feel that they are being singled out unjustly, and they resent it.

PUT GUNPOWDER ON BONFIRE

Seven Children Burned, Two Probably Fatally.

When five pounds of gunpowder would not flash in their bonfire several boys at Minneapolis added gasoline to the flames and in an instant there was an explosion that so seriously burned Eddie Conroy, aged seven years, and Isidore Emanski, aged three, that they may die.

Five others were painfully and more or less seriously burned and Pearl Markman, aged eighteen years, was burned about the hands in an attempt to beat out the flames enveloping the children.

HUNTERS IN GRAVE PERIL

Rescued From Bog After Being Afloat Three Days.

A searching party saved the lives of Thorwald F. Beherns, twenty-three years old, and Joseph Symington, thirty years old, of Duluth.

They were out duck hunting on a small lake near McGregor and were marooned on a floating bog, where starvation confronted them on one hand and death by drowning on the other. They were three days without food and they could not swim.

BALLOON DRIVES MAN INSANE

Appearance of the St. Louis Affects Minnesota Farmer.

Stanislaus Somavliska, a bachelor fifty-five years old, who has been living the life of a recluse in a miserable shack in the woods fifteen miles northeast of St. Cloud, went insane at sight of the big balloon St. Louis, which passed over St. Cloud recently, and was found by a searching party wandering through the woods five miles away from his shack.

County Treasurer Suspended.

A. A. Kremer, county treasurer of Itasca county, this state, has been ordered suspended by Governor A. O. Eberhart. He confessed to the embezzlement of county funds. He made a confession to M. F. Kain, deputy from the public examiner's department, who has taken charge of the office and caused the arrest of the treasurer. The amount embezzled is $5,060 and restitution of $5,000 was made.

Puts Head Under Car Wheels.

An unidentified man about thirty-five years old was instantly killed by being decapitated by an Omaha freight train near the Third street bridge at St. Paul. According to witnesses the man courted death by placing his head on the rail and allowing the train to run over him. Before he was run down it is said the man knelt in an attitude of prayer.

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

James A. Larson, assistant secretary of state, was arrested at St. Paul on a warrant charging him with a violation of the state truancy laws in that he is alleged not to have required the attendance at school of his two sons. Mr. Larson said that he had absolutely no idea of violating the law and in the case of one of the boys he said that he had done everything that he could to keep him in school and to rear him in the right way. His case was continued until Nov. 6.

The largest and most important game preserve in the country is now the Superior state game preserve, the limits of which were fixed last week by the state game and fish commission. The preserve will take in all the land in the Superior national forest and all the land north of it to the Canadian line. This makes a tract of 1,500,000 acres, extending through Cook, Lake and St. Louis counties, a length of about ninety miles.

Governor A. O. Eberhart has invited every member of Governor Johnson's military staff to remain on his staff during his present term of office. His invitation to members of the staff, contained in letters sent from the governor's office, is in keeping with his determination to make as few changes among the Johnson appointees as possible.

Representatives of the iron ranges have thrown down the gauntlet to the board of commissioners of St. Louis county. They want an appropriation of $250,000 for the construction of a building for court purposes in one of the Mesaba range towns and declared that, if it were not granted, a division of St. Louis county might be looked for.

Asserting that Duluth has been robbed of her birthright and the natural advantages given by her location at the head of Lake Superior by unjust freight rates which favor Twin City jobbers Duluth business men have started in to raise a fund of $20,000 to bring about an entire readjustment of the lake and rail rates.

M. J. Cort, a creamery supply salesman, says that throughout Northwestern Minnesota the output of the creameries is 40 per cent over last year and with warm weather and good pasturage, such as prevails, the percentage of increase will be 50 per cent before the end of the year.

With the adding of a $2,000 subscription to the fund of $17,000 already raised to purchase the right of way Beaudjit is assured that the Soo Railway company will build the Plummer-Moose Lake branch of its Winnipeg-Chicago line through that city.

Governor Eberhart, at the banquet of the Real Estate Exchange of St. Paul, urged the erection of a building to house the State Historical society and other departments for which there is not room in the new capitol.

Dr. C. M. Jordan, superintendent of schools of Minneapolis, whose boom as successor to President Cyrus Northrop was launched by his friends recently, says he will not consider such an offer.

Friends of the late Governor Johnson are preparing to publish a book giving the history of his life. It is intended to give Mrs. Johnson a part of the royalties from the sale of the book.

As a tribute to Governor John A. Johnson the St. Paul school board unanimously voted to name the new high school on the East Side the John A. Johnson high school.

The assessed valuation of St. Paul property for 1909 will aggregate $112,675,500, an increase over 1908 of $8,000,000.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Harry W. Fisher of Duluth, president of the Zenith Lead and Zinc company and connected with other large interests, accidentally discharged his gun while hunting ducks in the Moose river country, N. D., and shattered his left hand so badly it was necessary to amputate it.

After tying one end of a strong cord about his neck and fastening the other end to an overhanging tree an unknown man jumped over the precipice on the Minneapolis side of the Mississippi river about half a mile south of the Lake street bridge.

Albert Anderson, forty-three years old, proprietor of a livery stable in Hopkins, died at the Swedish hospital at Minneapolis from injuries sustained when he was run over by a heavily loaded wagon.

Despondent because he could not obtain permanent employment Harry Carter, thirty-seven years of age, committed suicide in the pantry of his home at Minneapolis by inhaling gas.

Mrs. J. C. Young of Minneapolis was run over by the East Side police patrol wagon in that city and died of her injuries twenty-four hours later.

William H. Kall, an escaped patient from the St. Peter state hospital, was struck by a train at Eagle Lake and killed.

Mangus Koefod, assistant cashier of the Security State bank of Spooner, was drowned while hunting.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Christian Braesch, seventy-eight years old, a resident of Minnesota for fifty-eight years, is dead at Minneapolis.

The Case of B. E. Wise

Wise was a big man on the "street."

His deals were larger and involved more money and brains than most men dared to invest.

Wise's wisdom lacked in but one particular—he failed to consider Nature's laws of compensation. The result—Wise gave out. Some said "Old Wise is all in." They were wrong.

Wise's physician said "DIGESTO for those wasted tissues and jaded brain cells."

Wise was soon back in the game—he now has snap and energy to spare.

DIGESTO is a fixture with him.

RED LAKE TAX LEVY RAISED

State Tax Commission Made Big Change in Assessments.

Personal Property Raised More Than One Hundred Thousand.

The state tax commission did things to personal property valuations in Red Lake county. The report of the commission showing how valuations in the county have been affected by the the action of the state board have been received by Auditor Lattendresse and shows an increase in the assessed valuation of personal property in the county of more than one hundred thousand dollars. The total value of personal property in the county as determined by the state board is $745,067, an increase of $109,699 over the amount reported by the county board of equalization.

There has been a reduction of the assessed valuation of just one item. Horses, mules and asses, one year old, are worth 10 per cent more than the county board of equalization said they were, so says the state board. There are many increases in the assessment of personal property as indicated below:

Horses, mules and asses, 3 years old, 10 per cent: stallions, five bred mares and race horses, 20 per cent.

Cattle, one year old, 60 per cent; two years old, 55 per cent; cows, 20 per cent; all other cattle three years and over 10 per cent.

Sheep, all ages, 40 per cent.

Hogs, all ages, 80 per cent.

Wagons, carriages, sleighs and bicycles, 70 per cent; automobiles and other power vehicles, 100.

Watches and clocks, 30 per cent; melodeons, 20 per cent.

Household goods and wearing apparel, 20 per cent.

Farm tools, implements and machinery, 25 per cent.

Gold and silver plate and plated ware, 10 per cent.

Diamonds and jewelry, 10 per cent.

Stock and retail lumber yards 20 per cent; other manufacturers' material and manufactured articles, 10 per cent.

Moneys, other than banks, bankers, bookers or stock jobbers, 10 per cent.

Credits, other than banks, bankers, bookers or stock jobbers, 10 per cent.

Stock and furniture of sample rooms and saloons, 10 per cent.

Elevators, ware houses and improvements on right of way or any other R. R. lands, 10 per cent.

The assessments on banks were increased as follows: First National Bank of Thief River Falls, $358; Citizens State Bank of Thief River Falls, $410; First State Bank of T. R. Falls, $301; Merchants State Bank of Red Lake Falls, $894; First State Bank of Brooks, $613; First State Bank of Plummer, $858; The assessment on banks was decreased as follows: First State Bank of Red Lake Falls, $425, Merchants State Bank of St. Hilaire, $993; Peoples State Bank of Thief River Falls, $851.

A Good Market.

The building of the new Soo line to Duluth is going to furnish the farmers of this section a fine market, for there is very little farm produce raised in the vicinity of Duluth.

A Duluth paper has discovered that the cost of living, in some respects at least, is much greater in the Zenith city than it is in Minneapolis. For instance, it finds that on Sept. 20 tomatoes were 50 to 100 per cent higher in Duluth than in Minneapolis, potatoes 20 to 40 per cent, beets 100 to 200 per cent higher, onions 200 per cent higher, green onions 80 to 100 per cent higher. Continuing, our Duluth contemporary says: "These are but a few: there are many others quite as bad."

Went to the Bottom.

While hunting up at Mud Lake last week, George Williams and H. J. Kjos had an experience that they will not forget for a while. The gasoline boat and hunting barge which they had, went down to the bottom of the lake and as Messers. Williams and Kjos are some heavier than feathers, they also went to the bottom. Fortunately the water was only about five feet deep, but it was a long walk to shore and they were thoroughly chilled before reaching dry land.

Farmers and the Census.

The Supt. of the national census wisely suggests to farmers the importance of recording now, from day to day, until the end of the year the exact yield of their acres and other products of their farms; making an inventory of the stock on hand at the beginning of the census year, April 15, 1910, and the sales during the year. This and such other information as may be asked may be given freely, for the census act provides:

> This information shall be used only for the statistical purposes for which it was supplied. No publication shall be made by the census office whereby data furnished by any particular establishment can be identified, nor shall the director of the census office permit anyone other than the employes of the census office to examine the individual reports. Furthermore, the information reported on the agricultural schedule will not be used as a basis of taxation or communicated to any assessor.

There is such a deal of wild and wooly guessing regarding affairs agricultural during the interim between census years, that it will be to the farmers' interest to have one correct accounting every 10th year so that it may be known as accurately as possible how large a factor agriculture is in our national economy, and how it compares with other industries.

Both Homesteaders.

The inquest held by the coroner into the deaths of the two men who perished in the burning of the Harth livery barn at Greenbush developed that the men cremated were brothers, John and Oscar Anderson. They had had some dealings with Andrew Thompson the previous day, which explains the supposition that he was one of the dead men found in the ruins.

The Andersons were homesteaders at Salols Siding, between Roseau and Warroad. They had been out on the flats threshing and were on their way back to the homesteads for the winter. Both men were more or less intoxicated when they came to the barn to sleep at night, and it is thought that they themselves in some way caused the fire which burned the barn and fourteen horses and a cow and all the contents of the barn. Neither victim had a family.

SURVEY OF GRAND TRUNK

Report Sent Out From Bagley That Grand Trunk Pacific Surveyors Are Busy.

Report Is That Line Will Run on the East Border of Red Lake County.

Bagley Oct. 15.—From an authoritive source comes information of a somewhat startling character concerning the real intentions of and objects to be attained through the work of the corps of railroad surveyors who have been working in the northern part of Clearwater county, and who are at present waiting at their camps near Wemo postoffice, northwest of Bagley; and this information is to the effect that the surveyors are not in the employ of the Great Northern Railway, as was first supposed, with intentions of cutting off Soo competition with the Great Northern running through Bagley, but that those surveyors are really in the employ of the Grand Trunk Pacific railway, and are running a line from the International boundary in almost a direct line south to New Ulm, connecting at Bagley with a survey made many years ago from Bagley to New Ulm.

According to this latest information, the line on which the surveyors are now working connects at Sprague, Manitoba, with the Canadian Northern Railway, which has but recently been leased by the Grand Trunk Pacific company.

Extending directly, south, this alleged Grand Trunk survey has been made through Roseau county, striking the section line between Beltrami and Marshall counties, and further south between Beltrami and Red Lake counties to the northwest corner of Clearwater county, thence between Clearwater and Red Lake counties, passing Winsor and Gonvick and going to Wemo postoffice, in Clearwater county, near which the surveyors are now "taking it easy," for the purpose, so it is said, of watching the Soo surveyors and noting the line the Soo will decide upon in building its road through Red Lake, and Clearwater counties from Plummer to Bemidji and Moose lake.

The reason given for this cut-off of the Grand Trunk into U. S. territory is that the Grand Trunk is engaged in deathly struggle with the Canadian Pacific and the Soo railways for the trade of Western Canada: that much of the traffic in that section is in American produced goods and the successful railway must have American goods to supply the demand.

In its scheme to have a short line from Winnipeg to Chicago, the information concerning the Grand Trunk, by building a line of railway from Sprague Manitoba, connecting there with its leased Canadian Northern railway, and running the line to New Ulm, would there be enabled to use the M. & St. L, through arrangement with the Hawley interests, with that railway's lines running in all directions toward, Chicago, Omaha, etc, and could also connect at Albert Lea with the Illinois Central, running directly into Chicago, thus giving to the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, a better "air-line" from Winnipeg to Chicago, than would be possessed by the combined lines of the Canadian Pacific and Soo railways.

Thus the war between the two great systems of railway would be extended to United States territory, and with much desirable territory in north-central Minnesota, including much in Clearwater and Beltrami counties, as an object of contention.

In this connection, it is intimated that the Great Northern officials are not unfriendly to the new element in railway circles in this section (the Grand Trunk Pacific) in its fight against the Canadian Pacific and the Soo.

The surveyors have stated to Bagley people that their instructions are to survey no line that is not practically a "surface" road, so as to especially avoid deep cuts with attendant snow blockades in the winter time, and different grades. They have been given orders to run the line into Bagley if possible, but that three small hills to the northwest of here have interfered. These hills are being overcome, and there is little doubt that the surveyors will stake out a line running through Bagley and directly south, touching the west side of Itasca State Park, thence southward towards New Ulm.

Said Lincoln: "When we buy at home, we have both the money and the goods: when we buy abroad we have the goods but we no longer have the money." This is wise council for all—merchant, laboring man, farmer, everybody.

Local High Defeated.

The local high school football team was defeated by the Red Lake Falls high school team at that place last Saturday by a score of 5 to 0. The local boys, after their long, cold drive down to the Falls, were not in shape to enter into a fast contest, and their work was not up to the average, but local enthusiasts who were present at the game say, that had it not been for a few bad decisions, the result of the game would have been greatly altered.

An Old Landmark.

The old Crocker building, one of the first business buildings of Thief River Falls, at the corner of LaBree avenue and second street, is being torn down this week. Ole Quam, of the East Side, purchased the building and it will be removed to his farm in the town of Reiner and the lumber used in erecting farm buildings. This building was originally located in St. Hilaire, but when the railroad was extended to Thief River Falls it was removed up here.

Back From Washington.

Congressman Steenerson has just returned from Washington, where he went to specially argue the Red Lake River canal case. This was left to the discretion of the war department and if this was the final decision the congressman will urge the passage of a special bill at the next session of congress in which it will be set forth that the passage of such a bill is necessary to provide for the necessities at the present time.—Crookston Times.

A Garden Spot.

O. Hines, one of the engineers employed on the Grygla ditch, passed through the city last Friday. Work of making the survey of the ditch has been nearly completed, but there is still some surveying left to do, and this will be done after it freezes up. Mr. Hines is of the opinion that the Grygla country will be the garden spot of the Red River Valley when the ditch is completed. As there will be a ditch on every section line, every quarter will be thoroughly drained.

FARM ORCHARD AND GARDEN

BY F. E. TRIGG

REGISTER, ROCKFORD, IA.

CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED

[This matter must not be reprinted without special permission.]

NINETEEN BUSHELS PER ACRE.

In many sections of the oat belt there has been a marked deterioration in the oat yield during the past two or three years, and so pronounced has this been that a comment or two touching the situation may be worth while. The low yield of this year seems in part due to poor seed, but possibly in larger measure to the fact that the grain was not sown with the disk drill, as it should have been, but was broadcasted in a slack and slovenly manner, with the result that the stand was very poor. Contributing to this result is another factor that is even more fundamental—namely, a gradual depletion of the soil by an improper method of tillage to the point where it is not capable of producing a satisfactory yield. In a list of some twenty men whose thrashing returns were reported to the writer recently the average yield was but nineteen bushels to the acre, the lowest being eleven bushels and the highest thirty-five and one-half bushels, or over three times as much. The farm which produced the eleven bushel yield has been systematically skinned for years past. The one which gave thirty-five and one-half bushels has raised much stock and its fertility kept up by feeding most of the products of the farm on the farm. Nineteen bushels to the acre, and that in a section where oats in the past have yielded as high as sixty and seventy bushels, shows a state of affairs which farmers individually and collectively may well be looking into. How long is it going to take for agriculturists to learn that they can't keep subtracting from the soil—principal—each year without replacing it with fertilizers and still continue taking from it the same interest returns in the shape of crop yields?

BUTTER FAT PRICES.

A community not far from where the writer lives has had an experience of late in the matter of prices received for cream sent to centralizer and local creameries that ought to offer a suggestion to dairymen who may be led to desert the home creamery because of higher prices offered temporarily by the centralizer plant for the purpose of killing competition. During the latter part of August, the time when the comparison of prices was made, a local creamery was paying 28½ cents per pound for butter fat, while the centralizer stations in towns less than forty miles away were paying but 22 cents, a difference of 6½ cents per pound. Were the conditions under which cream is marketed in the country investigated a like discrepancy in price would quite likely be found to exist. Of course the centralizer plant often pays a higher price than the local co-operative or private creamery, but it is only for the purpose of running such opponents out of business. When they have matters in their own hands they pay as little as they please and let disgruntled patrons whistle if they aren't satisfied with the size of their monthly cream checks.

POINTS TO CONSIDER.

While the temptation is often great to buy lumber and building supplies direct from house wrecking or catalogue lumber houses, owing to what seem like exorbitant prices charged by the home dealer, it is well to take one or two things into account before doing so. Much of this catalogue stuff is job lots—that is, inferior and often secondhand or second grade material—crooked, knotty and badly checked. When one buys a carload of this stock the per cent of poor stuff is usually large; but, whether large or small, the buyer has it on his hands and cannot return it as he may if he buys of the home dealer. Hence he should figure this in as a portion of the cost price along with freight charges, which are often left out of the count when a comparison of home and foreign lumber prices is made. Wherever one finally decides to make his purchase, it will be to his own interest as well as fair to the home dealer to figure with him, making a careful comparison of prices, quality, etc.

QUEER BUSINESS.

A lot of supposedly honest and respectable people in some sections seem to consider a neighboring orchard as semi public property and raid it without compunction whenever the fit takes them. These people may not realize that it costs the owner just as much to prune and spray his trees and till the ground as it does his neighbor to care for a corn, potato or small grain crop. Yet these same folks would consider it mighty queer business—stealing—if the orchard owner should go into their fields, husk and make off with a sack of corn or dig and appropriate a bushel of potatoes. The proposition is just as broad as it is long, and the ethics involved make no distinction between a crop that grows on trees and that produced on stalks or vines.

A wooden pail half full of water, covered with a sprinkling of bran and placed where rats run, will often prove an effective trap. The frequency with which one finds drowned rats in barn pails suggests this plan.

It is hardly reasonable that youngsters who are allowed to raise Cain and act like sixty at home will be models of deportment when out in company. A good deal of chagrin and often embarrassment result from trying to work these two things together.

The Philippine farmer, who is not as resourceful as would be well for his own good, is nevertheless fortunate in that he can have his fields plowed by agents of the government who do a good job with a gang plow hauled by traction engines burning cheap alcohol, which is a byproduct of the cane mills.

That there are still agricultural opportunities in the eastern and middle states is given pretty effective demonstration in the $40,000 crop of cabbage which a firm near Beloit, Wis., raised on a 100 acre field this season. This is a gross return of $400 per acre, or quite likely three times what the land could be bought for.

It is just as easy to have the farm animals gentle and tractable as wild and breechy and vastly more to the credit as well as to the profit of those who have the care of them. Especially is this true of cows and horses and in a less degree also of hogs and sheep. Gentle handling means absence of fright and excitement, both of which are a detriment to an animal in milk and flesh production.

It is an unusual child who is not gladdened by the sight of a fine apple and who is not still more rejoiced at the prospect and in the process of getting outside of it. The supply of fall and winter stores for the family larder should contain enough good apples so that the little people and older ones if they like may have them frequently. They are more wholesome than candy, preserves or cookies and cost less, as a rule.

A blacksmith in San Juan Bautista claims to have discovered a process for hardening copper, an art that was in common use in ancient times, but was in some way lost. He has made knife blades which seem to be sharp and hard as a razor, while he has copper chisels which may be driven through the hardest woods. His secret has not been given scientific approval, but he has evidently discovered something worth while.

The several excellent makes of manure spreaders on the market today are just as much an improvement over the four or six tined fork as a means of distributing manure as the McCormick reaper is over the hand cradle used by our forefathers in harvesting grain. A farmer who would use a hand cradle today would be the laughing stock of his community. The same view ought to prevail of the fellow who scatters his manure with a pitchfork.

If there is any form of recreation which beats starting out at dawn with a well filled lunch basket and fishing tackle some crisp fall day when the leaves are dyed many colors and are falling silently on grass or leafy floor and when the wild grapes hang purple, it would be hard to find. This much is worth while, but if, besides, the gamy bass or trout may be secured to complete the woodland meals the day is complete. To keep up our physical tone and moral health we need more outing days like these.

It is, after all, but evidence of a desire to speculate when the corn belt farmer, particularly the one located in the northern part, plants a type of corn which is too big to mature in the season, lying between the limits of killing frosts in spring and fall. Where an exceptionally favorable season makes possible the proper maturity of such corn one year, there will be a half dozen seasons when it will get hit with the frost before it is ripe and sour and mold in the crib. It is better to play safe and grow a smaller and earlier maturing type.

While conditions on the farm or ranch may be the most healthful to be found anywhere, it is nevertheless true that, from the standpoint of sanitation at least, they are often bad. If the surface drainage from the barnyard or the seepage from the nearby cesspool is toward the well a condition exists which is decidedly bad and may result in an outbreak of disease. Besides this, the cellar may be damp and a fertile stamping ground for disease germs, or the house slops may not be properly disposed of and thus be a source of danger. Lastly, flies are a factor that may be a possible means of breeding disease, in which case the warfare against them should be relentless, including methods which will prevent their hatching as well as means of killing those that are hatched. It is easy and very natural to overlook some of these means of safeguarding human health on the farm, because there are so many things more in evidence which take time and attention, but in spite of this it is well to exercise the largest degree of care possible along the lines suggested, as in the end it will stand for comfort, health and economy.

After "Watered Oysters".

Surplus water and dirty ice must be kept out of oysters in Minnesota if Andrew French, state food commissioner, can accomplish it. He returned from Denver recently with some brand new ideas from the convention of pure food specialties. Two states already have regulations protecting the people from buying water when they order oysters, and efforts will be made this year to do something along the same line in this state.

A conference will be held with the large oyster dealers within a few weeks and some plan agreed upon to prevent defrauding the public.

Instances are related by the inspectors of the department of dealers paying $1.50 a gallon for oysters and selling them at 25c a quart and not losing money. The apparent loss of 50 cents was more than made up by the water contributed in liberal quantities by the philanthropic dealer.

A BIG SALE ON HATS
AT MISS LAKIN'S
SATURDAY, OCT. 23

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.

NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone, anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.

FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.

YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.

SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.

COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the usual retail prices.

$8.50 HEDGETHORN PUNCTURE-PROOF SELF-HEALING TIRES A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. Sixty thousand pairs sold last year. Over two hundred thousand pairs now in use.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

JOHN JONES, CLERK.

John Jones he was a faithful clerk,
As any now alive;
You'd always find him at his work
From eight o'clock till five.

Without a single minute's loss
He worked the tedious days
Till once he said, "I'll strike the boss
For just a little raise."

"Why, Jones," replied the leader then,
"How can you be so base?
Why, I could get a hundred men
Today to take your place."

So Jones apologized and turned Back to his daily books
Until his nature fairly yearned
For fields and trees and brooks.

"I need a rest," requested Jones.
"Please, sir, may I be spared?"
Whereat the boss in honey tones
Accordingly declared:

"Why, John, old chap, I'd like to let
You off for half a year,
But how would this old business get Along without you here?"

A BUILDING FEAT.

House Completed, Furnished and Occupied In Twelve Hours.

In the Wide World Magazine Harold J. Shepstone describes a most remarkable building feat which was recently accomplished in St. Louis—viz, the complete erection and occupation of a house in a single day. It was the bride's ardently expressed wish to have a home to go to that caused the builder to attempt it, and he succeeded. Twelve hours before the evening meal was served the plot of land where the house was to stand showed not the slightest sign of human activity. Ragweed and goldenrod greeted the sunshine, and the scene was absolutely innocent of a stick of timber, a piece of stone, brick or other material. But when the 7 o'clock whistles blew on the morning in question, however, there was a concerted movement of men and wagons toward the lot.

In the erection of the dwelling 75,000 nails were used, 11,000 feet of timber cut and fitted, 12,000 shingles put on the roof, 6,000 laths used to make the walls, 375 yards of plaster spread and several gallons of paint used.

Twenty-five carpenters were employed on the job, of whom eighteen worked ten hours and the remaining seven eleven hours each. Twelve lathers and twelve plasterers did the lathing and plastering in three hours. Two men built the chimney in four hours forty-five minutes. Four men put the roof on in three hours, while two men did the plumbing and gasfitting in five hours. One man did the electric wiring in one and a half hours, while four men did the necessary painting in five hours.

The builders had hardly cleared away before a large furniture van arrived, together with a caterer's cart. The furniture van contained the owner's goods, and willing hands quickly transferred them to their rightful places in the record built home. In just under an hour the newly married couple and their friends, who had meanwhile come upon the scene, sat down to a sumptuous dinner. Twelve hours previously, as already stated, not a brick or a stone was to be seen on the site of the dwelling.

THE MAID HE WANTED

By CORA ASHWORTH.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

Joseph Miriam, bachelor, woman hater, advocate of single life for men and lax divorce laws, having tired of his bachelor sleeping quarters and meals at his club, decided to keep house. Having rented a comfortable furnished dwelling in a desirable location, he advertised for a girl to do cooking and light housework. He was not used to advertising for servants and wrote a very poor hand. The slip he handed in at the newspaper office was hurriedly counted by the receiving clerk, stamped for the "Situations Wanted" columns and put through the composing room mill. It ended with the words, "Apply at No. —, Clermont street, between 5 and 6 o'clock p. m."

The next afternoon Mr. Miriam went from business to his domicile expecting to see a mob of servant girls besieging his front door. He was disappointed. No one was there. He went in, sat down, took the evening paper from his pocket, read and waited. At half past 5 there was a ring at the bell. He opened the front door, and there stood a young woman. Miriam thought her well dressed for a servant, but remembered that many a servant in her street clothes might easily be mistaken for a lady.

"I've come about the advertisement," said the girl.

"Come in."

She entered the sitting room and seated herself in an easy chair. Miriam, somewhat surprised at this want of deference on the part of a servant for a gentleman, remained standing.

"I'm afraid," he said, "you won't do."

"Won't do!" exclaimed the girl in evident surprise.

"What I want is a girl so ugly that she'll never be a temptation for me and can't, therefore, get me into her clutches. I don't wish any woman about me except to cook and take care of the house."

The girl stared at the speaker without making any reply for a time, then took from under her glove a slip she had cut from a newspaper and read it carefully.

"You intended to advertise for a girl," she said.

"Yes, a servant girl who would know her place and not sit in the parlor while her master stands before her like a manservant before his mistress."

The girl sat surveying the advertiser with a curious expression on her face. At last she said:

"You are one of the most sensible men I ever met. It's every woman's object to get all out of a man she can. If you get an attractive woman in here she might snare you. Indeed, she might fall in love with a handsome man like you, and that would be dreadful."

"You, a woman, say this?"

"Only a woman knows a woman."

A beautiful smile overspread Mr. Miriam's countenance. "I'm sure," he said, "that if I gave you the situation you're so honest, so sensible, that you would. I've half a mind to try you."

"You have made a little mistake," the girl interrupted. "I have called to secure the place for a maid I have had in my service for several years and whom I can heartily recommend." And, taking out a card on which was engraved "Miss Clara Sturgis," she wrote on it her address. Mr. Miriam stood gaping at her in astonishment. "If you will come to my house this evening," she added, "I will show you the maid. She is a good girl and homely as a Dutch meeting house."

She rose, extended her hand graciously, smiled sweetly and withdrew. Miriam saw her out at the front door and watched her go down the street. When she turned a corner he went back to his sitting room and exclaimed:

"Well, I'll be jinged!"

For the first time in his life he realized the loneliness of a house without a woman.

The same evening Mr. Miriam stood again in presence of Miss Sturgis in the cosiest little reception room he had ever seen. A bright fire was blazing on the hearth. The lady invited him to sit by her before it and began to talk with him in a sympathetic way about the servant problem. She told him that the maid about whom she had spoken to him had accepted a situation, but he could call again in two or three days. She would recommend another—one who was pitted with smallpox and suffered with bleared eyes. Then she kept him an hour, delighting him with her intelligence, her womanly interest in him. Indeed, an especial charm she seemed to find in him.

Mr. Miriam had fallen into the very trap he had wished to avoid. Miss Sturgis was renowned for making any man she wished fall in love with her. She kept Mr. Miriam calling on her with a view to securing a servant for him and in the end simply made mincemeat of his heart. Then when he asked her to be his wife she stared at him in blank surprise and exclaimed:

"Why, I thought you wanted a servant!"

Mr. Miriam went away crushed. For months he shut himself up—without a maid—and never smiled. Then he told his trouble to his sister-in-law.

"Joe," she said to him, "you're a fool. The lady would never have taken all the trouble to snare you if she had been indifferent to you. Try again, and keep trying."

Mr. Miriam did try again, but in a different way. He secured a dummy. This had the desired effect. Miss Sturgis sent for him under pretense that she had at last found a maid for him. He went and found the maid he wanted.

SHE HAD A METHOD

By NEWTON CALDWELL.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

When Miss Arletta Beale of Chicago drove to her hotel in Lucerne, Switzerland, it was not to see sights nor to buy lingerie in the shops on the Lowenstrasse before which young women in Swiss costume sit embroidering. Her purpose was to meet a young man she had never seen coming in an opposite direction, with a view to determine if she would accept him for a husband. Moreover, the young man was coming to determine if he would accept Miss Beale for a wife.

The prelude to the story is this: Hiram Beale, land speculator, had borrowed money from Edward Larned (who had plenty to lend) to carry his property, which if held would in time make him immensely rich. The ready funds of Larned united to the real estate of Beale would produce a colossal fortune. Could the two induce the only son of the one and the only daughter of the other to marry? The young people agreed to the plan, provided they suited each other; hence the meeting in Lucerne.

Now, it pleased Miss Beale to have a look at her enemy from under cover. For this purpose she had brought with her her friend, Miss Laura Bergen, whom she proposed to introduce to young George Larned as herself and observe him as a disinterested party. On her arrival at Lucerne she sent a note to Mr. Larned's hotel notifying him that she would attend the opera to be given that evening in the Kursaal (Casino) and between the acts would sit in company with her friend, Miss Bergen, in the salon, where she would be pleased to meet him. He would know her by a lavender orchid in her hair.

Mr. Larned had been traveling with his friend George Pierson, and, since Miss Beale would have a friend with her, he invited Pierson to go with him to the meeting that he might eliminate Miss Bergen. It was during the first intermission of the opera that a gentleman stepped up to a lady with an orchid in her hair in the salon of the Kursaal, announced himself as Mr. James Larned and introduced his friend, Mr. Pierson. The lady—Miss Bergen, who was personating Miss Beale—introduced the friends to the real Miss Beale as Miss Bergen. After a short season of introductory conversation the bell rang to announce a continuance of the opera, and the quartet adjourned to the music hall, Mr. Larned taking a seat beside Miss Bergen and Mr. Pierson one beside Miss Beale.

After the opera, when the two girls were retiring, Miss Beale admitted that she infinitely preferred Mr. Larned's friend, who had been her attendant. Miss Bergen declared that Mr. Larned was the more attractive man of the two. The men made similar statements with reference to the girls, each preferring the girl to whom he had been devoting himself.

During the next week the quartet made the ascents of Mount Pilatus and the Rigi, excursions on Lake Lucerne and spent their evenings in the Kursaal or its gardens listening to excellent music. They even risked a five franc piece on the gaming table, just to experience a new sensation. The sensation proved the loss of the coin. Such a life is especially conducive to lovemaking, and it was not long before the first and second couples, so to speak, were in the last throes of a courtship.

At this time Miss Beale was called home by cable, her mother being dangerously ill. She had come abroad for the purpose of becoming engaged to Mr. Larned and was grieved to return engaged to his friend, Mr. Pierson. She also knew that Mr. Larned was engaged to the friend she had brought with her to act as her dummy.

On Miss Beale's return she kept her secret till her mother recovered, when she broke the matter to her father and well nigh broke his heart at the same time. He announced the failure of the plan to Edward Larned, who received the information without showing any especial disappointment. The man of ready cash had always been indifferent to a union with unproductive property. He wrote his son that the lady whom he was to have married had fallen in love with his friend. Larned, who had kept his own counsel as to how matters were going, wrote that he would return immediately.

On his arrival he told his father that he wished for an interview with Miss Beale in presence of the two fathers who had arranged the match. Mr. Larned told his son that if his object was to bring pressure to bear on the lady to marry him he would be disappointed, since she had expressed an unalterable resolution to marry his friend. The son, however, persisted in his request.

The meeting took place in Mr. Beale's house. When it was announced to Miss Beale that the Larneds, father and son, were in the library ready for the conference, nerving herself for a disagreeable interview, she entered the room.

She stopped and started. The younger man she saw there was her lover. He advanced to meet her, with a smile.

"You put your friend forward as yourself," he said.

"I did."

"And I put my friend forward as myself. A double negative gives a positive result."

"You should have been ashamed of yourself!" exclaimed Miss Beale, with a pout and an expression of infinite happiness mingled.

"I am. So is George Pierson and your friend, Laura Bergen. We'll have a double wedding to celebrate the happy outcome of a quartet deception."

Down at Red Lake Falls they are going to have an election this fall and the strange part of the whole affair is that John A. Duffy is going to have opposition as mayor. For several years past Mr. Duffy has successfully frightened all prospective candidates from the field by saying that his defeat would mean that Red Lake Falls would lose the county seat, but this year it appears that Theo. Garceau is going to enter the field. We don't live at Red Lake Falls and don't want to have anything to say in the matter, but we make the prediction that Mr. Garceau will be elected and that his majority will not be a small one. Mr. Garceau is one of the substantial business men of the down river town and if they had more men of his stamp down there they would have a better town.

After carefully reading the various versions of the most noted astronomers anent the antics which old Halley's comet will cut up we have arrived at the conclusion that mortals need have no apprehension for their safety when the tailed star reaches its nearest point—13,000,000 miles distant from the earth. That will be on may 19 of next year, and at that time the comet will scoot across the face of the earth, making a sky rocket like noise which is inaudible to the most intent listener. Its tail may be plainly seen, however, without the aid of a telescope, and directly after its passage you will be able to scoop up handfuls of star dust from terra firma which it dropped on its way. This star dust may be worth money and may not. We don't know. Further information regarding this comet will be published if the astronomers discover anything new regarding it.—Exchange.

EXECUTIVE PROBLEMS.

A peculiar situation has resulted from the fact that Governor Eberhardt, while still lieutenant governor, in common with other members of the state legislature and in compliance with the provisions of a law passed for that purpose, drew in advance the salary of his office for the ensuing year. Clearly the constitution of the state does not contemplate that the lieutenant governor elevated to the executive office shall enjoy the emoluments of the office he has vacated. Still having drawn a salary to which he has at least no moral right, the legislature does not appear to have made any provision whereby it can be turned back into the state treasury for the use of the person who will succeed the lieutenant governor in the office he has vacated. No doubt, however, a way will be found out of the difficulty.

Another problem has arisen as to who will succeed to the office of lieutenant governor and be eligble for succession to the executive office in case of the death or disability of Governor Eberhart. The constitution provides that the president pro tempore of the senate shall be lieutenant governor in case of vacancy should occur in that office; but it also provides that no senator should hold an office under the state the emoluments of which have been increased during the session of the legislature of which he was a member. This provision would seem to make President Pro Tempore Smith ineligible for the lieutenant governor's office, and he appears to have interpreted it that way, as he declined to take oath of office Every other senator is similarly ineligible except Senator French, who was selected after the law increasing salaries of legislators was passed, and in order that he might be elected president of the senate an extra session of the legislature would have to be called.—Northfield News.

Germantown.

[Too Late for Last Week.]

Germantown, Oct. 11, 1909—The merry hum of the thresher has been the order of the day for a long time past, and the work of threshing out the golden grain is nearing the finish in this vicinity Most of the grain now remaining in stacks is to the north and east of here and available machines will undoubtedly be kept busy until snow flies. From everything now threshed a common good yield is reported; but being without the required information we are unable to give definite figures.

Matt Skogstad moved out last week to the town of Silverton, where he has rented a farm and will make his home in the future.

Among those who have recently bought teams of Ramstad's western horses are Henry Cook and A. K. Haggy.

Until different arrangements are made by the Highlanding creamery, Henry Paulson, buttermaker here is making regular trips, between here and there, attending to the operation of both creameries.

Henry Cook finished drilling at N. Bandhund's place some time ago, striking water at 70 feet, and is now working on a well at the Rice farm in the town of Goodridge. After completing that job he goes out to Canada to look after his homestead.

The last meeting of the Farmers' Club was held at Amund Johnson's Oct. 3, and there was a fair turnout. The club meets next at the home of Thomas Clausen on Nov. 7th.

School opened in district 76 west of here a week ago Monday with Miss Wilson of Thief River Falls as teacher. A new and efficient heating and ventilating system was installed in their school house this fall.

Miss Sarah Vaughan is the next to be appointed chief of the Germantown postoffice, succeeding William Vaughan, resigned.

An effort will be made this fall to have an entry and steeple built to the Zion church. The steeple is to be 50 feet high on a 10X10 base. The addition would greatly improve the appearance of the building and is very much deserving of success.

The industrial contest for Minnesota boys and girls—or a part of it— is to be held at Germantown on Nov. 6th in connection with the meeting of school trustees and teachers, and a large crowd of people is anticipated for the event. The industrial contest or fair is open for all boys and girls under 18 years of age, with about all kinds of agricultural, sewing and cooking entries. About $400 will be paid in prizes within the county and winners in the different county contests are admitted to the state contest for the year where there will be something like $1500 to share.

The last four weeks of warm weather was broken yesterday with rain, hard wind and frost, and these last two days we have heard no complaint about the heat. The frost remained in the ground all day today; but it is not of course the regular freezing up as there is yet a great deal of plowing to be done.

The Salvation Army.

For the past two months the Salvation Army has been going forward under the leadership of Adjt. Anderson, and there is no doubt that the Adjt. did her best. From now on the work of the Army will be carried on thru the leadership of Capt. C. Pitt, who arrived in the city a few days ago and he expects his assistant here in a day or two.

We want you to feel that you are at liberty to come to us at any time, and if you have any clothes to give to the poor kindly notify the Salvation Army by card. Our postoffice box number is 1223. We also have meetings every night except Monday, to which you are invited to attend. We are here to do you good and with God's help we are going to do the best we can while in your city. We are willing to visit the sick and care for the needy. Now don't forget us in these ways. Attend our meetings, it will do you good. I remain yours to serve for His glory.

CAPT. C. PITT,
The New Officer in Charge.

Married Monday.

Daniel Sheedy and Miss Louisee Kivel were united in marriage Monday morning at St. Bernards church by Rev. Fr. Dingmann. Miss Annie Swords was bridesmaid and Louis Yell best man. The happy couple left on the Great Northern that evening for Grand Forks and will also visit friends at Gretna, Manitoba, before returning to this city.

Mission Festival at Synod Church.

The Norwegian Synod church holds its annual Mission Festival on Oct. 31st. The Rt. Rev. Nordby from Lee, Ill., preaches in the morning at 10:30, and it is expected that he will deliver a lecture on the Holy Land in the evening at 7:45. A few years ago he made trip all through the Holy Land. There will be no services in the afternoon. An offering to the Home Mission Fund will be received in the morning.

The Russell Coffee House.

The building formerly occupied by the National Meat Market on Main Avenue is now undergoing some extensive repairs in preparation to be utilized for a first class restaurant, the name of which will be the Russell Coffee House. The Misses Anna Johnson and Olga Houghland, have had extensive experience in running an up-to-date eating house and will no doubt prove the cause worthy of the name. The opening night will be Monday, Nov. 1st.

A Wonder in Potato Growing.

Ellif Gravlie, a well known farmer living west of town reports that from one potato of the "American wonder" variety he raised 62 lbs. The original potato was cut into twelve pieces and planted one piece in a hill next.

Lost—Five calves, three steers and two cows, red and white spotted, on Friday, Oct. 8. Finder please notify Andrew Mykelstad, section 35, Silverton township, postoffice, Thief River Falls, Minn.

SUITS and OVERCOATS

The late arrival of suits and overcoats has replenished our stock so that we are now able to show you one of the most up-to-date line of men's suits and overcoats in this city.

Measured by every standard, whether it be material or workmanship, whether style or patterns, our Men's Suits and Overcoats prove their superior worth—prove that they are the faultless productions of men who have made the designing and making of men's high-class clothing their life study, and have been wonderfully successful in their attainments.

One distinctive feature about our clothing is that the shape with which you start our men's suits or overcoats stay there until you stop wearing it. Such good figures are built into the garments that you needn't worry about your own.

A perfect style and fit shoe is hard to find, but we guarantee our

CLOTHING AND SHOES.

With fresh stable manure worth $2.25 per ton by analysis of its fertilizing ingredients, it would seem that the matter of handling it so as to realize the largest percentage of this value ought to receive more serious attention.

One of the big leaks on thousands of American farms will never be stopped until a flock of sheep is kept to browse the annual waste in weeds and grass. They require slight care except during the short winter period, and whatever they sell for is nearly all gain.

With so many men making a living by farming half heartedly and indifferently with a minimum expenditure of gray matter, it is equivalent to saying that the opportunities ought to be first class for the fellow who with push and energy will combine intelligence and good horse sense.

The common, everyday sensible woman can view the fashion plates in gowns and hats in the daily papers with a large measure of unconcern and then quietly thank her lucky stars that she is not so much in the swim that she has to keep pace with the latest. Incidentally her husband has occasion to thank his lucky stars, too, on more than one account.

Some one has made the timely suggestion that if the tobacco belt farmer would quit raising this staple, which is admittedly a soil robber, and turn his attention to corn and cowpeas marketed in the shape of pork he would directly better himself financially and indirectly give the tobacco trust quite a good swat. Another advantage in the change would be that the land could be built up instead of gradually, but surely, being impoverished.

When the name of the farm or ranch and that of its proprietor is inscribed on the barn or a neat signboard over the driveway it is a pretty sure sign that he takes enough pride and interest in his place so that he wants the public to know to whom the place belongs. It is a commendable practice and is an evidence of enterprise and thrift that is always carefully noted by the passerby. There ought to be more signboards on American farms.

There is little question that the present beef scarcity which has boosted prices to $8.50 or further is traceable to the trick which the packing interests turned on the feeders eighteen months ago, when, realizing the scarcity of feed, they forced beef prices down to $2.50 and less and mulcted every man who had been stuffing his beeves with 65 cent corn. There was a dead loss on every animal thus fed, and naturally feeders have not cared to have the experience repeated

The Most Ancient Man.

The average reader does not see much difference in age between human remains found in the beds of the pleistocene and the pliocene, but to the geologist the difference is very great, only he cannot express it in years or centuries. Until recently the oldest remains of man known dated back to the middle pleistocene. Among these are the celebrated relics from Neanderthal, Spy and other places. But in October, 1907, a lower human jaw was found in deposits attributed to the early pleistocene or even the late pliocene. This would give it a greater antiquity than any of the others and entitle it to be called the oldest remains of the human species. The teeth are well preserved. The most remarkable feature of the jaw is the absence of a chin. The canine teeth are not unduly prominent, and the dimensions of the teeth are within the limits of variation in living man.

Fully Qualified.

"I'm at a loss to find somebody to play the light role," said the theatrical manager. "Can you suggest any one?"

"You might get the baker just around the corner," suggested the low comedian. "He makes a specialty of light rolls."—Kansas City Times.

Find Dead Infant.

Matt Julian, of Crookston, discovered the remains of an infant about two weeks old in the Red Lake river at a point on the river bank opposite the junction of Ash and Cowing streets, at that place.

The little child, a male, was found with a ladies' waist belt buckled tightly about its neck, and from every indication death had resulted from strangulation. There is no means of identification from the belt, which was of plain leather with a pearl buckle.

Coroner Stenshoel will call a coroner's jury to investigate the cause of death and, if possible, fix the blame on the guilty party.

Notice.

On and after the 15th of October the meat markets of Thief River Falls will sell for cash and cash only.

If I were to start a store I would save rent by getting a room in the edge of town; I would save clerk hire by doing the work myself, and could probably take care of all the customers; I would not waste money by carrying any surplus stock; I would certainly not advertise 50 cents' worth of publicity a day in both local newspapers which merely reach about 15,000 readers every day and couldn't possibly pay me, but would enrich the editors. Oh, I would be a bird if I were in business. But how long would I last?—Fremont (O.) News.

Many people are puzzled to understand what the terms "four penny", "six penny", "ten penny", means as applied to nails. "Four penny" means four pounds to the thousand nails and "six penny" means six pounds to the thousand and so on. It is an English term and meant at first "ten pound" nails, the thousand being understood, but the English clipped it to "ten pounds" and from that it degenerated to "penny".

Wreck Was a Bad One.

A diver from Duluth has been examining the wreck of the big concrete electric-light dam at Fergus Falls. He found that the dynamo is in nearly twenty-two feet of water and is under huge blocks of concrete, which weigh from ten to twenty tons apiece; the dynamo cost about $4,000, but it is so badly broken and wedged in that it will not be worth raising and probably will remain at the bottom of the river forever. He also found holes of great depth where the foundation of the dam had been, indicating that the water had eaten through the sandy soil underneath and dug a huge hole, into which the power house and portions of the dam fell.

Swedish Lecturer Coming.

E. C. Tholin, of Sweden, will give a lecture in the Methodist church Friday evening, at 8 o'clock p. m.

Mr. Tholin is representing the Swedish strikers and is traveling in this country with the object to solicit funds for the strikers.

Come and hear Mr. Tholin explain the cause of the strike and also to get the full information how the strike situation is at present.

Mr. Tholin is not traveling under the auspices of the Socialist party but had to appeal to this party, owing to the fact that labor has no organizations in this part of the state.

A heavy freeze which struck the Michigan and Wisconsin cranberry fields at picking time ruined the crops of many growers. As a result of this the festive berry will be high at Thanksgiving time.

The natives of Hawaii can't go out in the back yard with a big slice of watermelon and enjoy it with the same zest as we do in America, if they are finicky at all, for the melons grown on the islands are likely to be infested with maggots, which appreciate a good thing as much as folks do.

One of the surest as well as most profitable crops for the Pacific coast horticulturist is the English walnut. The trees are remarkably free from the insect pests and fungus which so often attack fruit trees, while the crop is one that is much less perishable and can thus be held if prices are not satisfactory.

If the little people who come into the home are to reach a respectable maturity, scalding water, fly poison, rough on rats and headache tablets should so far as possible be kept out of their reach. Hardly a week passes but one sees chronicled in the daily papers the death of helpless little babies who run afoul of some one of these things.

A town the writer visited the other day was an improvement over many others in that a considerable number of its vacant lots were busy growing alfalfa instead of being allowed to produce a rank growth of burdock, mustard or what not. It furnished a good bite of nutritious hay for cow or horse and was quite an advertisement of the possibilities of the soil of the locality.

While lime is in no sense a substitute for manure and should not be used with this thought in mind, it does serve as a corrective of soil conditions—sweetens sour soils and puts them in shape to furnish food for growing plant life. A ton of lime per acre is usually sufficient to set things right, and it may be applied to the land with manure in the shape of the freshly air slacked product or it may be put on alone.

Ventura county, Cal., produces three-fourths of the world's supply of lima beans, the output last year being 68,000,000 pounds, worth $2,720,000 to the growers. This is one of the special agricultural interests which impress the traveler through southern California, fields of beans in the district devoted to growing them stretching as far as the eye can reach. The fields are planted to permit of horse cultivation and are kept remarkably clean.

One of the many interesting exhibits in the forestry building at the Seattle exposition was a section of a pile taken from Galveston bay last year which had been doing service for thirty-three years. That it was able to withstand the attacks of the teredo, a molluscan borer, during this long period was owing to the fact that it was treated with creosote before being driven. Had it not been so treated it would have been riddled and worthless in a very few months.

The high prices which have prevailed for small grains for the past two years have caused a good many more farmers to stack their grain than for many years past, due to their desire to hold it and not market it with a rush as soon as thrashed. This will result in a brighter and better quality of grain which of itself will fetch a higher price than that badly discolored. More than this, the stacking of the grain has made possible good progress in the plowing of the stubble and the heading off of a seed of weeds in next year's fields.

Save Seed Corn.

This is an excellent season for picking out some good seed corn.

Next year's chances for a good corn crop will be much better if we can develope seed corn right here at home.

There are two advantages to be gained. One is that of getting seed corn acclimatized to the country, the other in getting selected seed. The seed houses buy their corn in bulk and shell it by machinery, and you get only the average seed—from both perfect and faulty ears. In selecting corn for seed, pick out the very best, and be sure to get ears on which the kernels run clear over the tip or as near as possible so. Many ears are without kernels on the last inch or two toward the tip. Seed from these will produce ears next season with more bare space, and this tendency will increase with each year. So be careful to pick ears well covered. The small kernels toward the tip of the ears should not be used for seed.

The best place to keep seed corn is usually in the garret or an upstairs room of a dwelling house, where it is dry. Dampness will kill the germinating vitality of the seed.

This season's corn crop here—what there is of it—is such that many farmers in the Iowa corn belt would feel well satisfied if they could average up to it each year.

Bound Over to District Court.

At the preliminary hearing held at Hallock Tuesday of last week before G. A. Gunnarson, justice of the peace, the two men held for the Karlstad bank burglary were bound over to stand trial in District Court which convenes December 13. P. H. Konzen assisted County Attorney Hedenberg in the prosecution and R. V. Biethen appeared for the prisoners. One of these men known as Dad Williams is an old hand at the business having already served several terms in various state penitentiaries for similar offences. The other man, Joe Barnes has also been mixed up with the yeggmen for some time. The Court fixed bail at $5000.

NEW SHORT STORIES

When Booth Was Prompted.

In the golden days of California Bret Harte was asked one evening by a Chicago man to relate the most amusing experience of his life on the Pacific coast. Bret Harte replied at once that this was easily done and told the following story:

The elder Booth was playing an engagement at the height of the gold fever. Every week miners were coming down by hundreds from their camps to see the great tragedian in "Othello." At every evening performance there would be several score of them in the best seats in the house.

One evening a large fellow in a red shirt, rough coat and heavy boots took a seat on the aisle in front of Bret Harte. Around him he spread with every breath the aroma of forty rod whisky. Moreover, at every curtain he went out to refresh himself, returning with a stronger aroma and increased interest in the play. At each climax the thrills seemed to permeate his whole body, so intense was his interest.

However, nothing moved him out of the ordinary until the scene between Othello and Iago in the matter of the handkerchief. It will be recalled by every reader of Shakespeare that in this scene Othello tries to argue himself out of his jealous rage regarding Desdemona, but that at the critical point of his argument Iago offers an objection to this effect, "Yes, my lord, but the handkerchief!" These references to the incriminating handkerchief of Othello's wife had an electric effect on the red shirted miner. His uneasiness grew with each successive objection interposed by Iago until he apparently could endure it no longer, and as Iago for the fifth or sixth time came back with his "Yes, my lord, but the handkerchief," the miner lifted himself heavily out of his seat, extended his right arm and, pointing with excited emphasis at Iago, roared in tones that rolled into the uppermost gallery:

"Wipe yer nose on yer sleeve, young man, and let the play go on!"—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Responded to Tonic.

"E. H. Harriman laughed," said a foreign correspondent, "when I told him about the newspaper stories of his bread and beer diet.

"He laughed, he began another of his hourly meals—cold beer and stewed fruit—and he said it was food, not beer, that he was taking for a tonic.

"He said food was almost as good a tonic as Mrs. Floyd Smith's. Mrs. Floyd Smith, he explained, was walking in the avenue with her aged but rich husband. The old fellow shuffled along drooping and spiritless, and suddenly his wife perceived her girlhood chum, Mrs. Lloyd Brown, approaching with her own husband, a poor bookkeeper, but young, handsome and dashing.

"What was Mrs. Floyd Smith to do to put a little go in her bent and listless mate? An idea came to her and she exclaimed:

"'John, who is that beautiful girl smiling at you from the taxicab?'

"'Where? Where?' cried the old man, drawing himself proudly erect and casting eagle glances to left and right."

For the Final Fire.

August Belmont in the smoke room of the Lucania told, apropos of luxurious motorcars, a story about the young Marquis of Anglesey, who died in Monte Carlo some five years ago.

"Lord Anglesey's cars were the most luxurious then known," said Mr. Belmont. "This young man went to extremes in everything. He was very intelligent, though.

"Once at his historic castle in Wales there was a slight fire. So, lest the priceless pile burn down, he ordered an enormous quantity of hand grenades, or extinguishers, from London.

"When the grenades arrived they were hung all over the castle; but, though it was an enormous place, there were still several dozen grenades left over at the end of the hanging.

"'And what shall I do with them, my lord?' the butler asked.

"Lord Anglesey coughed—he was already in a pretty bad way—and said dryly to the butler:

"'You may put them in my coffin.'"

ITS RELIABILITY.

Brother Stimmerjohn and the Watch That Failed to Keep Time.

"Uh-loogy yuh, Brudder Scrodd; dess loogy yuh, sah!" peevishly began misused Brother Stimmerjohn. "When yo' sold me dis watch—dis yuh detrimental, no 'count, consounded watch, right yuh—didn't yo' guyahntee dat I'd find it de most reeliable watch I ever owned? Didn't yo', sah? Well, den, dess let me infawm yo' dat de pit o' tawment am full o' littler liahs den yo' is! Dis watch am slow! Has to wind it three times a day to keep it goin' a-tall, and still it's slow—slow all de time! What kinduh way am dat to treat a pillah in de church and a brudder in de lodge! Loogy yuh, now—brudder in de lodge an' liah—if yo' don't gimme back de two dollahs I paid yo' for dis yuh reeliable watch I's gwine to hop yo', and hop yo' hahd!"

"Now, dess hol' on twell yo' gits da fac's, Brudder Stimmerjohn!" interjected the culprit. "Never fawm yo' 'pinions twell yo' has de fac's. I done guyahnteed de watch to be reeliable. So 'tis. Yo' can allus depen' on dat watch—allus find it slow. It ain't one o' dem excitable watches, allus in a high fever; it's slow an' stays dat uh-way. Well, sah, I must be trudgin'—Oh, dem dar two dollahs? Done lost 'em at de raffle. An' if yo' still medicates on hoppin' me, now dat yo' know de fac's, hyar am one udder fac' for yuh ramification—got muh razzah wid me and a rock in each pocket. No Help For It.

The young benedict was experiencing his first trouble. "My wife," he said, "is so exceedingly nervous at night that she scarcely sleeps. "Burglars?" queried the old married man. "Yes." "Well, you have to expect that. My wife was that way. Every time she heard a noise downstairs she'd rout me out and chase me down to investigate. After a time, however, I convinced her that if a burglar ever did get into the house he wouldn't make any noise at all." "Clever!" exclaimed the young one. "I'll try that." "Don't do it," pleaded the old one, "for if your wife's anything like mine she'll turn right about and worry every time she doesn't hear a noise downstairs."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Cause For Worry.

"We are going to consult a specialist about our boy," says the father.

"About your boy?" echoes the friend. "Why, he seems to be a perfectly healthy, rugged lad."

"I know, but we have asked him time and again what he wants to be when he grows up, and he never has said that he wants to be a railway engineer."—New York Life.

FAMOUS OLD WAGON.

Has Hauled as Much Money as There Is in the World.

People in Washington who daily pass the treasury building and see backed up to its curb an old van of a wagon drawn by three patient white horses do not realize the intimate link that this conveyance bears to all the money there is. They are not aware that every piece of paper money that every individual in the United States has spent or hoarded in the past twenty-six years has first ridden in that wagon. They do not know that the sum of money this wagon has hauled is equal to all the money there is in the world today.

The old wagon is a great curiosity, but modest withal. It plies regularly between the bureau of engraving and printing and the treasury, always loaded down with rectangular packages of twelve and a half pounds each. In every package are 4,000 bills. If the bills are of the lowest denomination the package is worth $4,000; if of the highest, $10,000, it is worth $40,000,000. One package of this great value once rode in the wagon.

It would take a string of hay wagons twenty miles long to hold the money that has passed through this old van. If the packages were piled one on top of the other they would make a monument fifteen miles high. If the bills were placed end to end the string would be 250,000 miles long, or equal to ten times the distance around the world. They would carpet a road fifty feet wide from New York to San Francisco. Their weight in coal would supply the average family with fuel for 250 years. Had an expert begun counting this money in the days of Columbus he would have been half through when Mr. Taft was inaugurated.

All these and many more stupendous facts might be cited with reference to the old money wagon. Yet it goes unnoticed in Washington, and not one citizen in a hundred realizes that any interest attaches to it. Few people in Kentucky ever saw Mammoth cave; the native of Arizona has never taken the trouble to visit the Grand canyon, nor New Yorkers Niagara. The gold of De Soto was always a little farther on. The land of one's desire is that to which we cannot possibly go. There are realms of romance without end, but no man ever confessed to living in one. It is human nature that the unreality of distance is the haze that makes all things interesting.—Washington Post.

Lofty Mountain Peaks.

Mountain climbing, always a strenuous and frequently a dangerous sport, offers many rich rewards on this continent to the increasing number of those who are devoted to it. A writer in the National Geographic Magazine points out that in Alaska and Canada there are several lofty peaks, rivaling those of Switzerland in magnificence, the summits of which have never been reached by civilized man. Fairweather (15,292 feet) and Crillon (15,900 feet) are reasonably accessible to tourists in Alaska, and yet it is said that no one has ever attempted to climb them. The loftiest of the Canadian Rockies, Mount Robson (13,700 feet), still awaits a conqueror, and the same is true of the highest summits of the Selkirks. The difficulties of mountain climbing, it is true, are not always in proportion to the height attained. In the Cascade range, for example, Mount Baker (10,827 feet) was not scaled until the tops of several of its loftier neighbors had been reached, including Mount Rainier (14,526 feet).

Americans In London.

"It is estimated that at least 60,000 Americans invade London during the summer months, an invasion for which the west end shopkeeper is deeply grateful," stated a recent issue of a London paper. "Before the days of American invasion July, August and September were very poor months for the trade. Now all this is changed, and the army of Americans spend in London about a million and a half sterling. While hotels and boarding houses get the lion's share of American gold, there are other businesses which benefit largely. These are principally jewelers, sellers of antiques and curios, drapers, dressmakers and tailors. West end tailors and dressmakers are especially grateful to these visitors, who keep them busy during what used to be the slackest season of the year."

Very Green.

Now that the widening of London's Blackfriars bridge is approaching completion the painters are getting to work, and the structure is being coated in its old familiar green color, picked out with gold. The choice of color, I may say, is the result of a misapprehension. Years ago when the painter who had the contract for the bridge approached the authorities he was met by a high official, who said loftily: "Color? Oh, see Green," meaning see another high official.

But the painter took it for sea green, the color, and sea green the bridge has been painted ever since.—London Scraps.

A Bankrupt Prince.

Prince Hermann of Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach, the heir presumptive to the grand duchy of Weimar, has renounced the succession of himself or his heirs, if any, to the throne of the grand duchy or its property. The prince's extravagance already has transferred him from the cuirassiers of the guard in Berlin to a uhlan regiment and later to compulsory retirement from the army, after which he was placed under a guardianship. The prince has been given the title of Count Ostheim, but he is totally bankrupt and remains under the control of his guardians.

WAITING TO SHOOT

By EDMOND B. LINCOLN.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

Gerald Maxwell, being threatened with pulmonary trouble, decided to give up business, go west and live an outdoor life. Taking his family with him to Kansas, he bought a farm there and entered upon the work of raising crops. He succeeded in re-establishing his health, a family of children grew up about him, his wife was contented in his western home, and the Maxwells were considered the happiest people of that region. Moreover, they were greatly beloved for their kindliness to their neighbors.

One day a neighbor owning a farm on the opposite side of the road from the Maxwells died, and his family moved away. A few months later the closed farmhouse was reopened, and an ill favored man was seen moving about the place. He had bought the farm and, being a bachelor, had gone to live alone on it. His name was Stuntz. He came from Kentucky, was about forty years old, wore his hair and beard long, never apparently combing either the one or the other, and was in all respects a disagreeable looking person.

Mrs. Maxwell, realizing that the family comfort depended largely on their neighbors, was great disturbed at the advent of Stuntz. Her husband made light of her fears. And, indeed, for a time the neighbor gave them no trouble. As a matter of policy Mr. Maxwell went over and made his acquaintance, and Mrs. Maxwell invited him to supper. He accepted the invitation, but said very little during the meal. The only person present who seemed to arouse his attention was Caroline Maxwell, the oldest daughter, aged twenty.

Not long after this Stuntz joined Miss Maxwell on the road and walked with her. She treated him civilly, though she found it difficult to do so. After that whenever he saw her out of doors he would make some excuse to be with her. One day Mr. Maxwell was astonished at receiving a call from Stuntz for the purpose of asking for Caroline's hand. The father concealed his disgust as well as he was able, saying that any such match would be impossible. Caroline when she heard of the proposal refused to again speak to the wooer.

From this time forward Stuntz spent all his leisure time arranging annoyances for the Maxwell family. He contrived that his cattle should get within the Maxwell fences and tramp down the crops; he shot Tommy Maxwell's pigeons; he appropriated the Maxwell fruit. These were only the simple methods he used to trouble his neighbors; his more complicated ones were too disagreeable to catalogue. The result of the whole was misery to the Maxwells. There was too much self restraint in the family to make any complaint to the farmers living near, but it was not long before the condition leaked out, and many were the mutterings against Stuntz.

One day Mr. Maxwell was obliged either to surrender his manliness or protest at the shooting by Stuntz of the household dog, beloved by all the Maxwell family. Stuntz went into his house to get his gun to kill Maxwell, whose wife, terrified, dragged him within doors and locked him in.

That night Mrs. Maxwell begged her husband to move away from the home where they had been so happy and could still be happy were it not for their neighbor, and, since she was supported by all the children, he was obliged to consent. The next morning Stuntz was seen sitting on his porch with his gun in his hands, evidently watching for Mr. Maxwell's appearance. Mrs. Maxwell first saw him and before her husband was aware of Stuntz's position had locked her husband in his bedroom.

The weather was hot and murky, ragged clouds passing overhead. During the afternoon a dark mass of cloud appeared above the southern horizon. Mrs. Maxwell, looking out of a window, saw it. She also saw Stuntz sitting with his gun across the road not 200 yards away. Of the two she dreaded Stuntz the more, though she kept her eye on the cloud. Presently it assumed the shape of an immense balloon. She let her husband out of confinement, showed him the cloud, and the whole family went to the cellar.

Stuntz was not facing the balloon cloud and didn't see it. Furthermore, he, being from Kentucky, had had no experience with Kansas cyclones. On came the pillar of cloud, gyrating like a top and humming like a mighty cataract. Stuntz heard the sound, but did not know what it was. He was afraid to get up and go to the other side of his house for fear his neighbor might slip away and he would miss an opportunity of shooting him.

Then suddenly Stuntz, amid a mass of whirling timbers which a second before had been his house, went up into the air. Whirling like a teetotum, turning a thousand somersaults, he was carried with the rapidity of a cannon ball for a mile and a half, then dropped to the ground from an altitude of several hundred feet.

When the Maxwell family emerged from the cellar they saw neither Stuntz nor his house. His gun was lying with a broken stock in the road. The cyclone had cut a swath covering the Stuntz house and leaving their own unharmed.

It developed later that Stuntz was a man much to be feared in every way. He had been in numerous shooting scrapes in the mountains of Kentucky and was supposed to be slightly deranged. He was devoid of fear and, taken all together, was a very dangerous and irresponsible man.

RECKLESS AUTOISTS JAILED

Two Men Who Ran Down and Killed Husbands in Sweden Sentenced to Terms of Imprisonment and to Pay Annuities to the Widows and Children of Their Victims—Authorities Do Not Believe In Handling Such Cases with Kid Gloves.

SWEDEN.

In Sweden reckless automobilists are punished pure and simple and it would be well if other countries would follow her example in this respect. The following cases show that the authorities do not believe in handling such cases with kid gloves. Recently Gustav Jonson was sentenced for causing the death of J. A. Nilsson in an auto accident at Odenplan. He gets four months in prison and must pay the widow annually 400 crowns, and to each of the children twelve crowns monthly until they are fifteen years old. Chaffeur William Hissing, who ran over Conductor Svard in Stockholm some time ago, was sentenced to four months in prison and an annual payment of 300 crowns to the widow as long as she remains single and to each of the children 180 crowns annually until they are fifteen years old.

The estate of the late millionaire Cedergren has been probated and his fortune is estimated at 11,000,000 crowns. Cedergren has in his will donated more than 5,000,000 crowns to institutions of charity in the city of Stockholm. In this connection it may be stated that it is remarkable how many of Sweden's rich men donate large sums of money to the poor. In no country in the world do men of wealth give so liberally to institutions of charity as in Sweden. It is a redeeming feature, which reflects much credit on the rich families of the country.

An exchange tells us that there are about 2,600,000 persons who keep money in Swedish savings banks. A socialist had figured out that most of these depositors are workingmen, and he now proposed that they make a run on the banks. Such a run, he maintains, would ruin the banks. But in the nick of time the workingmen could propose a compromise by telling the bankers that the run would be called off if the bankers would induce the employers' association to grant the demands of the workingmen.

It is learned that Russian spies have been at both Vaxholm and Oscar Fredriksborg fortifications. The government will investigate the matter rigidly and after this it is not likely that any foreign officers will ever be asked to visit these fortifications. The matter has been kept quiet for a long time, but it has now leaked out that there have really been attempts by Russians to gain some inside information.

A prominent Swedish daily newspaper claims that the strike failed because the farmers of the country refused to take a hand in it. Says the paper editorially: "It is the peasantry that constitutes the keel of the ship of state, keeping the speed steady and uniform through the rough sea. So long as this keel is not broken the craft can weather all kinds of storms."

Dr. Sven Hedin has completed his description of the expedition into the heart of Asia. The book will be richly illustrated and will contain about 1,000 pages. The work is entitled "Trans-Himalaja," and will be published in not less than ten languages. Dr. Hedin will arrange the purely scientific material in a later edition.

The population of Stockholm is said to have decreased by about 5,000 during the past six months. This is largely due to the strike, for scores of workingmen are emigrating to foreign countries in the hope of securing employment and better wages.

Julius Gerell, a wealthy merchant of Stockholm, has donated 225,000 crowns to the city and to the city will also be donated the remainder of his great fortune after his death. Most of this money will go to deserving and poor young women.

Kristina Nilsson (Countess Casa de Miranda) has been taken suddenly ill in Stockholm and is now confined to her bed at Hotel Rydberg. She is not seriously ill, however, and her physicians hope that she will soon be a convalescent.

H. C. Wikner and G. Lillenhook, two prominent Swedish army officers, have been sent to Germany by the Swedish government to study German military maneuvers. They departed for Germany during the latter part of last month.

Hinke Bergegren, the well known socialist, has returned to Stockholm after an absence of two months. Bergegren spent his time in Norway until the labor troubles cooled down.

"Stockholmstidningen," one of the leading dailies of the capital, has been boycotted by the strikers, because a number of errand boys on that paper were discharged recently.

Dowager Queen Sofia contemplates spending the coming winter in England. She will depart for that country during the latter part of this month.

The city council of Stockholm will spend 13,000 crowns to provide dinners for poor children in Stockholm during the coming winter.

The organized laboring men of Norway have thus for sent 289,124 crowns to the strikers in Sweden.

NORWAY.

There are a number of Spitzbergen expeditions that have proven a failure, and now comes the report of still another. The Sivert expedition, which consisted of seven men, has proved a dismal failure, the entire crew losing their lives in the polar wilds. It was believed at first that the men had died from cold, but it has been later ascertained that they must have been poisoned. A search party found three of the men sitting dead at a table that had a number of dishes on it. A fourth body was found leaning on a bed.

Trondhjem is in need of money and the city fathers are now arranging for a loan of 1,000,000 crowns at 4 per cent. The loan will be made from one of the city banks and the money will in the first place be used for completing the building of the Lerfos electric power station and the Lilleby public school. A sum of 300,000 will be spent for the erection of a new postoffice building.

Magdalena Thoresen, the well known Norwegian authoress, and mother-in-law of Henrik Ibsen, has left the manuscript of a poem entitled "Helhesten," which has never been published. It will soon appear, however, from the press of the Gyldendalske Publishing company in Copenhagen and literary folk in Norway are said to be anxious to read it.

Norwegian fishermen who have been operating along the coasts of Iceland during the past three or four months have secured about 106,000 barrels of herring, which, however, is only half as large a catch as last year. They are receiving a high price though and this will in a measure make up for the shortage.

Ex-Premier Lowenskiold has donated 60,000 crowns, which shall constitute a legacy for lunatics. Mr. Lowenskiold is one of Europe's leading philanthropists and has donated large sums of money to various institutions of charity in Christiania and other cities in the country.

The Norwegians in Hamburg are going to petition their friends in America for some money to build a Norwegian church in that city. There are a large number of Norwegians in Hamburg, in fact there are more Norwegians in that city than in Berlin.

Christian Sinding, the eminent Norwegian composer, will direct at a concert in Brighton, Eng., next month. Mr. Sinding is also scheduled to appear in London in December.

The reconstruction of the Grand hotel is now in progress. The hostelry will from now on be in the hands of a stock company with a capital stock of 1,000,000 crowns.

DENMARK.

The Danish rigsdag has adopted national defense bills which provide for the erection of forts north and south of Copenhagen at various points on the coast of Sjealland to prevent a possible landing and surprise by hostile force. The existing land fortifications at Copenhagen will eventually be razed and the fleet will be further creased by the construction of torpedo boats and submarines. The fortification problem has been the chief concern of the Danish people for a number of years and the rigsdag now appears to have taken a hold of the question in earnest. But it has also created a lot of trouble, indeed, it even caused a cabinet crisis some time ago. The Neergard ministry was forced to resign on account of it, and political parties have been split wide open by the same disturbing factor. Now that the defense bills have been passed, it is expected that J. C. Christensen, minister of war and marine, will resign. Recently there has been a great deal of agitation against his retention in the cabinet because of his alleged connection with the scandal arising from charges of corruption against Minister of Justice Alberti last year when Christensen was premier.

In Copenhagen there arrived the other day a young Norwegian artist, who was a member of Knud Rasmussen's last Greenland expedition. He related that Rasmussen is doing all he possibly can to civilize the Eskimos up there and that he is traveling all over the island and giving lectures in the various colonies. He explains the laws to them and is seeking to have them come in contact with modern methods. The Eskimos are said to evince a great deal of interest in Mr. Rasmussen and come for miles to listen to him and they afterwards discuss what he has said for months afterwards. At Cape York, where Rasmussen met Dr. Cook, he has established the most northerly mission station in the world. He declares that the Eskimos are an intelligent people and are eager to learn.

There was a run on the Roskilde Savings bank the other day and in less than five hours the bank paid out 50,000 crowns. A rumor was circulated to the effect that the bank's finances were in a bad way and owing to the unfortunate circulation of the rumor, which is entirely groundless, the bank may have to close its doors.

To judge from recent reports the finances of the Danish government are in a bad condition. The government's total income during the past twelve months was 8,200,000 crowns less than was estimated. It is believed that the fiscal year will show a deficit of at least 17,000,000 crowns.

There was a railway accident in the vicinity of Randers week before last. Five coaches were ditched and the conductor was killed. There were also several persons injured.

THE DEATH RECORD.

William I. Buchanan of Buffalo, N. Y., former American minister to the Argentine Republic and Panama, who had been closely identified with several important American diplomatic missions, met a tragic death on a London street. He was found lying on a sidewalk in Park lane near the American embassy in a dying condition and died on the way to St. George's hospital in an ambulance. The cause of death is supposed to be heart disease or apoplexy.

Former United States Senator William Lindsay is dead at Frankfort, Ky. Judge Lindsay was formerly chief justice of the Kentucky court of appeals and had served as state senator and representative before going to the United States senate. He was seventy-two years old.

Rev. Edward M. Hickey, aged seventy-two, the most pinturesque member of the Catholic clergy in West Virginia, is dead. He was a classmate of Cardinal Gibbons of Baltimore and Archbishop Kain of St. Louis.

Brigadier General Richard C. Drum, U. S. A., retired, a distinguished veteran of the Civil war and for many years adjutant general of the army, is dead at Drummond, Md. His death was due to old age.

GOES TO PRISON FOR LIFE

Slayer of Two Women Found Guilty of Second Degree Murder.

Pekka Cassovainem, who killed Mrs. Daniel Mursu and Mrs. Paul Kuha near Detroit, this state, last April, was found guilty of murder in the second degree after the jury had been out three hours, and was sentenced to life imprisonment in the penitentiary at Stillwater by Judge M. D. Taylor, who presided during the trial.

The evidence was largely circumstantial. Cassovainem killed the two women in Runeberg township, in the eastern part of Becker county, on April 30, last, supposedly for the purpose of robbing their home. The women were both over fifty years of age and were alone in the house at the time of the crime. Their bodies were found in the charred remains of their burned home and it is supposed that the criminal set fire to the house to cover up the evidences of his crime.

ONE KILLED AND TWO HURT

Locomotive Plunges Off a Trestle Near St. Paul.

Thomas Bird of St. Paul, a switchman, was instantly killed when a locomotive of the St. Paul Bridge and Terminal railroad jumped the tracks at the east end of the company's new bridge at South Park, near St. Paul, and plunged off a twenty-foot trestle, alighting upside down not far from the river.

Bird was caught under the engine and his life crushed out.

James Thurston, the engineer, jumped from the cab as the engine plunged down the embankment. Benjamin Cooke, the fireman, was unable to escape from the cab. Both men were severely injured and a special train was made up at once and they were rushed to St. Paul and taken to the city hospital.

MISSING LAUNCH IS FOUND

Took Refuge From Storm In Harbor for Six Days.

Tidings from the missing launch Sarah L., which had been absent from Walker for six days, were brought to that place by the steamer Northland, which is stationed at Headquarters camp, twenty-five miles from Walker.

After weathering the storm for nearly a day the party managed to reach the camp with no real damage done except the swamping of the rowboats and had remained in the harbor there waiting for the storm to abate.

Luckily the camp was occupied and none of the four women among the party suffered from exposure.

BANDITS FRIGHTENED AWAY

Attempt to Rob First National Bank at Shakopee.

Two robbers made a bold attempt to rob the First National bank at Shakopee. They were frightened away by lights in the rooms of D. W. Daye, a dentist living on First street, directly across from the bank and by the approach of the night watchman. They escaped and the police have no clue.

There was about $20,000 in the vault of the bank and had the robbers been undisturbed they undoubtedly would have reached the cash, as their work bore all the ear marks of professionals.

ITALIANS SEEK VENGEANCE

Murderous Attack at St. Paul Outcome of Recent Trial.

A murderous attack at St. Paul on an Italian named Antonio Polumbo by a countryman, supposed to be Lorenzo Dalma, and which may result fatally, is believed by police authorities to have some connection with the Bova murder trial and even beyond the mystery which surrounds the motive for this latest crime is nearly distinguishable a propaganda in the Italian colony to execute vengeance regardless of civil laws.

TWO MEN PERISH IN BLAZE

Unknown Harvest Hands Meet Death In Fire.

Two harvest hands, identity unknown, perished in a fire which destroyed a livery stable at Greenbush. Ten horses and two cows also burned. The bodies of the men were burned beyond all possibility of recognition. The origin of the fire is not known.

Gets Eight Years in Prison.

J. Jampsa, on trial at Detroit for the fatal stabbing of John Hjelt in Runeberg township, in the eastern part of Becker county, Aug. 16, pleaded guilty before Judge L. L. Baxter to manslaughter in the first degree, and was sentenced to eight years in the state penitentiary. The stabbing followed a drunken quarrel.

Crushed to Death by Logs.

Harry Hubbard, proprietor of the Reidal hotel at Carlton, this state, was accidentally killed at Kimberly. He was assisting in the unloading of a carload of timber for the Soo line. The stakes which held the logs gave way suddenly and Hubbard was caught beneath them as the mass rolled to the ground.

GOLD BRICK IS ONLY BRASS

Confidence Men Manage to Escape With Plunder.

H. F. Chaffee, a well known millionaire land and grain man of Amenia, N. D., was victimized out of $25,000 by the ancient gold brick game in Minneapolis by two clever swindlers. Mr. Chaffee found himself the possessor of eighty pounds of yellow metal, presumably brass, worth probably $15, and two small steamer trunks, while the police department of Minneapolis found itself confronted with one of the boldest swindles ever perpetrated in the Northwest.

The confidence man told a plausible story about a valuable gold mine that he and his half-breed friend, "Oro," owned in Mexico. He said that there was a lien of $25,000 on the mine, he wanted to borrow that amount of money, and as security he would give to Chaffee two gold bricks, which he claimed were worth $40,000. Chaffee had his son examine the "gold brick," together with another assayer, W. H. Harper, who, according to his card, was located in the Rogers hotel. The test was satisfactory and Chaffee counted over to Armstrong, the confidence man, twenty-five $1,000 bills.

The latter then invited the Chaffees to supper and at the close of the meal disappeared. Investigation proved that Harper had also "made his getaway."

The Chaffees investigated and found that the "gold bricks" were brass. The elder Chaffee recognized in the rogues' gallery the picture of the man who claimed to be Armstrong and Chief Corriston says he is one of the most notorious "con" men in the country.

STATE CANNOT INTERFERE

Judge Page Morris Releases Mahnomen County Raiders.

Judge Page Morris, in the United States district court at Duluth, has released William E. Johnson, a special United States officer, and nine assistants, arrested by state authorities for raiding saloons on the White Earth reservation. In his decision Judge Morris says:

"Territory once set aside by the government for the use of Indians is Indian territory until congress by special enactment decrees otherwise. The settlement of the tract by white men and the establishment of counties, towns and villages, incorporated under state laws, does not invalidate the character of the land, and federal officers doing their duty in accord with laws of the United States are not subject to state officials."

The court was appealed to by Johnson and his deputies to nullify a writ of commitment to jail issued by the village of Mahnomen on the White Earth reservation. The men were imprisoned on a warrant charging them with the destruction of property and liquor in the saloon of Alex Lemarre of Mahnomen. Judge Morris ordered that the county officials release the men from custody on the ground that they had no jurisdiction.

The decision of Judge Morris may affect saloons in Duluth and other places within the territory covered by the treaty of 1855.

ALLEGED SHORTAGE GROWING

Minnesota Official Now Said to Have Taken $50,000.

The alleged shortage in the accounts of A. A. Kremer, treasurer of Itasca county, may reach $50,000 or more.

A message received by Public Examiner Anton Schaefer from M. F. Kain, at Grand Rapids, the examiner in charge, and transmitted to Attorney General Simpson, stated that a shortage of nearly $40,000 had been located and that the total was still climbing. Experts are now at work on the books.

Kremer is out on bail furnished by his brothers, but he may be rearrested and the amount of his bonds increased. The bail bond demanded was for $10,000.

BANK ROBBERS GET $1,700

Blow Open Safe in Institution at Avon, This State.

The Bank of Avon, at Avon, a village about fifteen miles from St. Cloud, was entered, the safe blown open and $1,700 stolen. Entrance was effected through a side window and the safe was blown open with dynamite.

Residents in that section of the town heard the explosion and say that the safecrackers used three charges of explosives before they opened the safe. The alarm was given, but before the thieves could be captured they had stolen a team and escaped.

Woman Commits Suicide.

Mrs. Erika Gallickson, a widow, committed suicide at Cambridge by drowning. The woman had been despondent for some time. Her body was found in about two feet of water in Rum river, about fifty rods from her home.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

The highest price ever received for timber sold by the state was received last week when a section containing 4,000,000 feet was disposed of at $15.50 a thousand feet and another section containing 3,000,000 feet was sold at $15. The highest price ever paid before was $13.50, two years ago. The timber from these two sections alone will bring $100,000 into the school funds of the state.

Tobacco growing gives promise of becoming a common and profitable industry in Minnesota, according to Professor C. P. Bull of the Minnesota farm school and experiment station, who says the industry is not new in this state. Last spring, he says, the station distributed plants to farmers who were willing to give attention to the culture and that all the crops so far reported are good.

The twelve hundred members of the Minnesota State Medical society will hereafter be protected by a branch known as the medical defense, maintained through the co-operation of the members, who are to pay $1 each year. Doctors charged with malpractice, which investigation by one of the society's committees shows unfounded, will be protected in the courts by this fund.

The first official announcement of the time of building the new steel plant at the head of Lake Superior comes in a letter from Chester A. Congdon, authorized by Judge Gary, chairman of the board of directors of the United States Steel corporation. The actual construction work on the plant, the first unit of which will cost not less than $10,000,000, will be begun late this fall.

The Anti-Saloon league has announced the appointment of W. I. Norton of Minneapolis as its state attorney to head its law enforcement department. Mr. Norton has for some time been the attorney for the Minneapolis Civic federation.

The publicity committee of the Willmar Commercial club is arranging for a rally with a view to securing desirable farmers. Commercial clubs of neighboring villages and cities are to be invited to participate in the rally.

The legality of the Minneapolis ordinance requiring all milk sold in the city to come from herds treated with the tuberculin test and pronounced free from tuberculosis will be passed on by the state supreme court.

The state will receive this year approximately $300,000 as the income from the iron mines it owns, the largest amount it has ever received. This money goes to the permanent school fund of the state.

The Virginia and Rainy Lake company has started additions to its plant at Virginia that mean an outlay of several hundred thousand dollars and the addition of several hundred men to its payroll.

The Two Harbors docks recently broke all records for quick loading of boats when the Steel company's steamer W. E. Corey was loaded with over 10,000 tons of ore in forty-two minutes.

A state board of appeals to exercise supervision over fire insurance rates is the suggestion of Insurance Commissioner J. A. Hartigan.

More than 2,500,000 bushels of potatoes have been shipped by Minneapolis car lot dealers so far this season.

The sum of $1,084,500 will be needed to run the schools of St. Paul and provide new buildings during 1910.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

J. B. Clapp of St. Paul evidently was not to be killed by falling from high buildings. Last spring he fell seven stories in the new St. Paul hotel and last week he fell with a "shift" elevator seven stories in the same building and he escaped with only slight bodily bruises, as he did in the first instance.

Jules Gitto of the Stevens location, Mesaba range, a man about sixty years of age, shot his son Paul, aged thirty-five years, and it is reported that the wound will prove fatal. The shooting was the outcome of a quarrel betwen father and son about some trifling matter.

Guilty of manslaughter in the first degree was the verdict of the jury in the Antonio Bova trial at St. Paul for the murder of Vincenza Megna April 25 last. The extreme penalty for manslaughter in the first degree is twenty years' imprisonment.

Robbers broke into the Farmers' State bank of Holdingford, a town twenty-five miles from St. Cloud, and attempted to rob the safe. A passerby heard a noise in the bank and gave the alarm, the bandits running away without securing anything.

Fire in the old "Stockholm" block at Minneapolis resulted in injury to two firemen and a property loss of nearly $75,000.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Charles Johnson, the first settler of Edwards township, Kandiyohi county, is dead at the age of sixty-eight. He was born in Sweden and came to this country in 1862, serving fourteen months during the Civil war.

Mrs. Nettie E. Edwards, wife of William C. Edwards and for many years a prominent member of St. Paul society, is dead, aged fifty-six.

Mrs. Dorothy Kreutler, sixty-five years a resident of St. Paul, is dead.

BETTER TILLAGE DID IT.

What can be accomplished by the mere fact of a thorough cultivation of the soil has been brought to the writer's attention very forcibly during the past few weeks. A fifty or sixty acre field belonging to a farm which has been share rented for the past twenty years and hence gradually robbed of its fertility—for it has not been manured or replenished with clover—was given a deep plowing and this year planted to corn. Prior to this year the field had been sort of an agricultural byword, little being expected of it and as little being realized from it. This season, however, different tactics were followed. The field was put in good tilth as a seed bed, good seed planted and a good stand of corn secured. During the growing season it was cultivated thoroughly five times. The result was an eye opener. Not only did this handling result in a good growth of stalks which were well eared, but so mellow was the surface kept that the crop was able to withstand protracted dry weather in much better shape than richer and heavier land which was not so well tilled, notwithstanding it had a coarse gravel subsoil. A lot of farmers who have driven past this field have been wondering what magic was used on it. It was just a matter of cultivation of the soil which unlocked its possibilities, in spite of the fact that its fertility was badly depleted. The same cultivation, coupled with manure and clover, would accomplish even better results. These three things ought to be tried on thousands of farms through the cotton, corn and small grain belts.

PROXY FARMING.

One of the greatest curses of present day American agriculture is the all too prevalent system of proxy farming, or absentee landlordism. Go into any section one will and the most rundown places are almost without exception those owned by men who live in town and have turned the virtual management of the farm over to a cash or share renter, who in all too many cases, being on a short lease, thinks he does best for himself by skinning the land to the limit. Very likely the owner came into possession of the property when land was got for a song or inherited it from some thrifty parent, and it is natural enough if he receives a fair interest return on what he considers is invested that he should not be as alert along the line of seeing that its fertility is kept in repair as he ought to be. Best results are obtained in the farm management when the owner works it himself if he has any business head at all. Next best is the leasing of the farm to a careful man on a long time lease, so that both tenant and landlord may share jointly in the benefit which may accrue from stock feeding, clover growing and dairying operations.

CHEAP PLOWING.

A north Iowa gasoline engine manufactory, the largest of its kind in the world, some little time ago established an experimental farm on which during the season closing all of the plowing, disking and seeding operations have been done with traction engines. In the matter of comparative crop yields the figures have not been fully worked out, but in the plowing operations it was found that the cost in labor, oil, etc., of plowing an acre was 35 cents. While the large areas on which steam or gasoline tractors would give most effective and economical results are in a way incompatible with the widespread tendency toward a division of these large areas and the following of a more intensive type of tillage, the fact remains that there are still a good many sections where the small tractor might be used with decided advantage as a substitute for horses in plowing and other farming operations. A feature of the above machine plowing that ought to be mentioned is that it was done at a depth of from seven to eight inches, which is nearly twice the depth of ordinary horse plowing.

NEEDED INOCULATION.

An Illinois farmer who sowed fourteen acres to alfalfa last year had an experience which might be a help to some of his fellows. He sowed the seed in the spring and did not take the precaution to inoculate the soil with bacteria laden soil from an old alfalfa field or sweet clover patch. The field was a complete failure except for a quarter of an acre, on which the alfalfa grew luxuriantly. He was at a loss to understand this, but after doing considerable thinking he remembered that some thirty-five years before his father had attempted to grow some alfalfa (then called lucerne) on this particular spot. While the stand was not very good, enough of it developed to inoculate the soil with the necessary bacterial life. It is more than likely that many a failure with alfalfa is traceable to paying no attention to the matter of soil inoculation.

It is usually the tabby cats that are most often found kicking around under one's feet which are the poorest mousers and of least account.

It requires from four and one-quarter to four and one-half bushels of wheat to make a barrel of flour, while a barrel of flour will make about 280 one-pound loaves of bread.

A sick animal on the farm should be isolated at once. This not only makes it possible to give the special care needed, but will lessen the likelihood of a spread of the trouble provided it should prove contagious.

Several counties in Wyoming were lately placed under quarantine by the federal authorities for the purpose of preventing what is styled as the lip and leg disease among sheep, an ailment somewhat similar to the foot and mouth disease in cattle.

There is one present day fad which has a deal of common sense to back it, and that is the rapidly increasing tendency of people in cities and smaller towns and in some cases the country of sleeping in tents on their porches or in their back yards. It has healthfulness and solid enjoyment to commend it.

The State Poultry association of Connecticut has brought pressure to bear on the members of the state legislature and secured the passage of a bill which compels dealers to sell eggs for what they really are. A placard must be placed in each receptacle containing eggs stating whether they are fresh or cold storage.

A good, square look at a piece of meat reeking with tuberculosis germs, and the exhibit is being made frequently these days, is calculated to make the consumer of meat and milk products thankful that some one in the past decade had patriotic concern enough for the public health to assist in giving this dread plague its present publicity.

A Pennsylvania farmer we heard of the other day very effectively solved the problem of loosening up the clay hardpan soil of a long cropped field by sowing the field in the spring with seed of the long horn turnip and plowing the whole crop under in August. He found that the long taproots of the turnip had penetrated the hard soil to a foot or more, and when the roots decayed the field was very effectively perforated, making possible a ready circulation of air and moisture. Alfalfa performs a similar service in loosening the soil, but the turnips get action in a much shorter time.

With the long winter evenings approaching, plans for a systematic course of reading or study would be an excellent thing for the ambitious boy or girl who may not have all the advantages he or she desires. A bright young person could outline a very satisfactory course for himself, which, if followed out conscientiously, would be of great value to him, while to him who may have a trifle more spare time excellent courses of correspondence in special and even collegiate courses are offered by schools and universities of high standing. More than one earnest young student has acquired the major part of a college education in this way. The chief requirements are industry, patience and perseverance.

While it is true that a tract set apart as an orchard should not be turned into a hog lot, it is nevertheless worth remembering that it is a real benefit to the trees and results in fruit that is free from worms if a drove of hogs can be given the range of the orchard for three or four hours a day from the time when the windfall apples begin to litter the ground. These drops are usually wormy, and the worms are destroyed when the apples are consumed. When the drops reach a merchantable size the hogs may be kept out of the orchard until after harvest, when there will be considerable more stuff they will clean up. Besides cleaning up the apples and destroying a lot of worms, they will also devour a good many grubs and insects of one kind and another.

A plain spoken friend of the writer, in referring to the practice of those on a rural party telephone line in taking down their receivers and listening to conversations when their neighbors' ring sounded, dubbed it as "harkin' on the line." Not infrequently a telephone patron will not hear a call distinctly and will thus unwittingly overhear a conversation that does not concern him. There is excuse for this, but mighty little for the practice which prevails in some sections where from two to half a dozen receivers are taken down every time a ring is given for some other patron on the line. Those who have got the habit of "harkin' on the line" probably have given the practice little scrutiny, but in the last analysis it is akin to sidling up to two people engaged in private conversation on the street for the purpose of overhearing what they may have to say or secreting oneself behind a door or under a window to hear conversations not concerning him in the least. It makes matters no better that the offender cannot be detected, but rather the more disgusting and small. Where it develops into a habit it is an abject admission of insufficiency and poverty of both character and experience as well as prima facie evidence of morbid curiosity and poor breeding.

WILL NOT MAKESURVEY

Engineer Board of the War Department Made an Adverse Report Last Week.

Congressman Steenerson Will Ask Congress For a Law Mandatory Instead of Discretionary.

The engineer board of the war department at Washington has reported adversely on the proposition for the survey of the Red Lake River east of Thief River Falls, with a view to its improvement for the benefit of commerce.

Maj. Shunk, the engineer officer in charge of that territory, recently submitted a report to the war department, following a preliminary examination, recommending that no survey be made because the interests of commerce along the river would not warrant the expenditure.

Representative Steenerson went to Washington and submitted an argument before the board of engineers, to the effect that Major Shunk's conclusions were wrong, but the board refused to accept Mr. Steenerson's reasoning and approved the recommendation of the engineer.

This ends the matter for the present, but Mr. Steenerson says that if the board of engineers refused to order the survey, he would ask congress at its next session to make the legislation mandatory instead of discretionary, as in the present law.

WITHDRAW THE LANDS

All Homestead Land on Eleven Towns Withdrawn from Settlement by Land Office.

Lands Soon to Be Offered for Sale at Public Auction to the Highest Bidder.

All of the land on what is known as eleven Red Lake towns have been withdrawn from entry. The act of Feb. 20, 1904 provided that at the end of five years all lands that remained unsold be again offered for sale to the highest bidder at not less than $4 per acre and purchasers will not be obliged to live upon or cultivate the same. There are a few choice pieces of land that will be offered at this sale but the most of it is not very desirable. The choice pieces are those forfeited to the government for various reasons. Just when the sale will be held is not known at present, but a list is being prepared by the U. S. Land Office.

Were Well Known Here.

The Minneapolis papers of late have had considerable to say about the departure of "Dr." and Mrs. Hans Oftedal, who conducted a hospital and baby farm in Minneapolis. Both parties are well known to the old-timers of Thief River Falls. Hans Oftedal used to be clerk in Dr. Moeller's drug store and Mrs. Oftedal when she lived in Thief River Falls was Miss Florence Morrell, oldest daughter of Col. Isaac L. Morrell, proprietor of the Arlington Hotel, which stood upon the present site of the armory and auditorium.

Death of Pioneer.

Anton O. Langseth, one of the pioneer residents of this section, died last Thursday in the town of Rockesbury. He was 63 years of age and leaves a son and three daughters, the youngest being 14 years of age. The funeral services were held Sunday afternoon and were largely attended.

ELEVATOR CASE DECIDED

State Supreme Court Reverses Judge Watts in an Important Case.

City Attorney Halvorson Won an Important Victory for Thief River Falls.

The supreme court last Friday handed down a decision of the Red Lake Falls Milling company against the city of Thief River Falls. The case grew out of an attempt upon the part of the city to attempt to prevent the milling company from removing an elevator into the fire limits of Thief River Falls. Judge Watts decided the case in favor of the milling company, but Judge Watts does not always decide cases right—as past experience has shown—and an appeal was taken to the state supreme court by City Attorney Halvorson. Upon every point litigated, the city has won a sweeping victory and the fact is now established beyond a doubt that our fire limit ordinance is a valid one. The milling company, however, is given an opportunity to show that the ordinance as covering the elevator site is an unreasonable one, but as the city council and the mayor are supposed to be the proper judges of this matter there is little or no opportunity for them to win. The following is the decision and opinion in the case:

Red Lake Falls Milling company, respondent, vs. City of Thief River Falls, appellant.

Syllabus: A city ordinance establishing fire limits and declared it unlawful for any person "to erect or attempt to erect within the above described fire limits any wooden building." Held, the moving of an already constructed wooden building, from a point outside to a location within such fire limits, was within the prohibition of the ordinance.

Judgement reversed and new trial ordered.

—O'Brien, J.

Opinion—The council of the city of Thief River Falls by an ordinance approved March 12, 1907, establishing fire limits within the city, provided, "It shall not be lawful for any person to erect or attempt to erect within the above described fire limits any wooden building. On July 16th, 1907, the ordinance was amended by enlarging the protected territory.

The amendment placed within the prohibited territory a portion of the railroad right a way adapted for the establishment of elevators and similar structures. At the time of the approval of the last ordinance the plaintiff had made preparations to move its fully constructed wooden building a grain elevator, to a new location upon the right of way. Neither the original nor the proposed site of the elevator was within the fire limits as first established, the last ordinance, however, extended these limits so as to include the new or purposed site. The plaintiff disregarding the ordinance began to remove the elevator, and the Municipality, through its police force, prevented the placing of the building upon the proposed location. The suit was brought to restrain the city and its officers from further interference. The case was submitted upon stipulated facts, and judgement was entered for plaintiff.

The defendants contend that the complaint did not state a cause of action, and that even if the stipulated facts sustained the trial court's conclusions the action must be dismissed. We cannot agree to this proposition. If upon all the facts properly and without objection before the court a plaintiff is entitled to judgement it should be so rendered, and if necessary, the complaint amended so as to cure any variance between the pleading and the proof. Erickson v. Fisher, 51 Minn. 300.

We hold, however, that the ordinance as amended was sufficiently broad to prohibit the removal of a fully constructed wooden building from a point outside of the established fire limits to a location within those limits.

The language of the ordinance is that it shall not be lawful to "erect" any wooden building, and it is insisted that this language does not prohibit the placing or establishment of a building of that character within the prohibited territory if it was constructed outside the prescribed limits.

This seems altogether too narrow a construction to place upon the language of the ordinance. It is true that ordinarily the word "erect" has a different meaning from the word "move," but it is not true that to erect a building means the present construction and adjustment of its component parts to the smallest detail. Thus in this instance the construction of the foundation, supports or driveways for the elevator in its new location would be pro tanto an erection of the building We think the language of the ordinance is sufficient to make it unlawful to place within the fire limits a building not there before.

The plaintiff claims the ordinance was void because of excessive penalties provided for its violation.

The propriety of the penalties is not involved in this suit and excessive penalties ordinarily do not render void other and independent parts of a law or ordinance adopted by a legislative body in the exercise of its police power. New York v. Consolidated Gas Co., 212 U. S. 19.

We do not agree with plaintiff's claim that the enforcement of the ordinance would deprive it of a vested right under Section 2106 Revised Laws 1905, which requires railways to permit the construction of elevators upon the right of way. The statutes makes no provision as to the materials of which the building is to be constructed and the ordinance, if a reasonable regulation, does not conflict with the statute of the state. The plaintiff has no vested rights under the statute. Pearsall v. G. N. Railway Co., 161 U. S. 646.

If the respondent's claim, that the ordinance was unreasonable, as applied to the particular location proposed for the elevator, had been made an issue, and litigated in the district court, there were, as the record shows, many circumstances tending to sustain that claim, but no such issue was made, nor do we consider it was an issue tried by mutual consent upon which evidence was received. It was not mentioned by the learned trial judge in his findings or memorandum, and the brief description given of the situation is not sufficient to enable this court to come to a final conclusion upon that question. It is unusual to find fire limits in cities the size of T. R. Falls extended as in this ordinance, but, before the ordinance can be held to be unreasonable the circumstances surrounding the locality must be shown with considerable detail as well as each circumstance bearing upon the question. If upon proper application to the district court the complaint is amended so as to present an issue as to the reasonableness of the ordinance, the question will be for trial in that court.

The judgement appealed from is reversed and a new trial ordered.

THE NEWS

BY JOHN W. EASTMAN

ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

In appointing W. E. Hale as Judge of the district court in Hennepin county, Governor Eberhardt made good.

It is estimated that Dr. Cook has already made $100,000 out of his lecture engagements. Is it any wonder that he manages to be so calm in spite of Peary's charges.

Missouri Democrats are beginning to boom Folk for president in 1912. It's a long run from now until next presidential election.

Mr. Roosevelt was recently compelled to get behind a tree for the purpose of escaping from an infuriated bull elephant. Some of the people who have been engaged in encounters with the gentleman will regard it as a lucky thing for the elephant that the tree was there.

It may not be news, but for fear that the three candidates have not been informing you, Thief River Falls is going to elect a mayor on Nov. 2.

The Red Lake Falls Gazette informs us that Theo. Gareeau will not be a candidate for mayor of Red Lake Falls and that John Duffy will have the field all to himself. Mr. Duffy has been mayor of Red Lake Falls for several years, but has never had any opposition. He can scare out the opposition in Red Lake Falls all right, but if he enters the field as a candidate for the legislature next year, he will find that he will have opposition.

Every young man should learn this lesson, then learn it over and again and again: The world does not owe you a living. It doesn't owe any man a living. True, there are those who have gotten a notion in their heads that they have a right to be taken care of by some others, regardless of any exertion themselves. They will out in time that while they are waiting for the procession to come along with a feather bed on which to carry them to fame and fortune, the hustler has gotten a long way to the front, while he who waited for others to "boost" him along, waited for what never came.—Ex.

Congressman Steenerson having been mentioned as a candidate for governor, gives the Crookston Times the following interview which should settle matters along that line:

> "I want to say decisively that I am not now, nor ever have been, and will not not be a candidate for governor of Minnesota. I am a candidate for re-election as congressman and nothing else at the present time.
>
> "I make this statement without reservation and I want all my friends to know it."

Judge Watts has been reversed again by the state supreme court. It is about time that this district had a judge that would decide a case right the first time. There are several appeals in the state supreme court from Red Lake county this term and good lawyers are all confident that he will be reversed in every case.

Lars Backe has been appointed receiver for the Pioneer Sash & Door Factory. The receiver is appointed upon petition of adjusting certain matters and will only be for a short time.

Dr. Gronerud Dead.

Dr. August Gronerud, the "big Bronson Doctor" who was indicted by a Red Lake county jury a year ago for a criminal act committed in Thief River Falls, died last Thursday evening at Bronson from the effects of an over dose of morphine to which he was adicted. The doctor was to have been tried at this term of court.

Examination Made.

A deputy public examiner was at Red Lake Falls last week and made an examination of the records to ascertain the truth of the charges that have been filed with the governor by citizens of Thief River Falls against three of the county commissioners, the county auditor and county treasurer. It will be a few weeks before the deputy files his statement with the governor.

Two New Hotels.

According to reports in circulation, Thief River Falls is to have two new and modern hotels next spring. One is to be built on the Kratka corner east of the Oen store and the other on the Crocker corner on LaBree avenue and Second street. Both buildings are to be modern three story structures, and the promoters of each project say that the buildings will be a credit to Thief River Falls.

Mr. Gillick Promoted.

William G. Gillick, who for the past few years has been located at Thief River Falls, being chief train dispatcher for the Soo line, has been promoted to the position of train master for the Minnesota division and will hereafter have his headquarters at Glenwood.

Mr. Gillick has been deservedly one of the most popular employes of the Soo line in Thief River Falls and it is with general regret that the people here see him and his most estimable family leave.

Court Adjourned.

All of the attorneys of Thief River Falls were down to Red Lake Falls Monday, the occasion being the opening of the fall term of district court for Red Lake county. As is usual court was adjourned until November in order to give the farmers who serve as petit and grand juors an opportunity to finish their fall work.

Big Contract Let.

Warroad, Minn., Oct. 25.—The firm of Backus & Brooks, owners of the pulp mill at Fort Frances have contracted with the local timber firm of Roberts & Marvin for 300,000 cords of spruce to be used for pulp; the entire lot to be delivered at Fort Frances before May, 1910.

The enormity of this contract can better be realized when it is shown that it will keep 500 men busy during the entire winter and will require a shipment each day from Dec. 1, until April 20, of 20 cars, and involve the sum of approximately $100,000.

Two hundred of the 500 men will be working in camps near Warroad, and it will thus easily be seen what an enterprise of this kind will mean to Warroad this winter, in every branch of business.

Besides establishing a number of camps of their own, Roberts & Marvin will buy from the settlers all they want to cut and deliver, thus giving the settlers chance to sell the wood and make wages at cutting it themselves.

Saved the City Money.

Street Commissioner Mellby reports to the News that he has built 27 cement cross walks in Thief River Falls during the past summer at a cost to the city of $1,134. "Had the work been done by contract it would have cost the city $2,025 and probably would not have been as well done as at present. Mr. Mellby feels that he has earned his salary this summer and no one will dispute him.

Wilcox Out of the Fight.

E. S. Wilcox has withdrawn from the contest for mayor of Thief River Falls, and the fight from now on will be between Mayor Hamre and Dr. Gambell. Mr. Wilcox had strong personal following and there are many who believe that he would have been elected had he stayed in the race. He claims, however, that people who induced him to become a candidate are now strong supporters of Dr. Gambell, and that is the reason that he pulled out. Mr. Wilcox is now advocating the election of Mayor Hamre.

LAID TO YOUNG SOCIALISTS

Bomb Received by John Hammar, Manager of the Stockholm Export Society, Believed to Have Been Sent by Them—Hammar's Thumb and Forefinger Torn Off and Face Severely Injured When the Infernal Machine Exploded.

SWEDEN.

John Hammar, executive agent and manager of the Stockholm Export Society received a week ago last Saturday a package, containing a bomb, which immediately exploded. Hammar had his thumb and fore finger torn off and was severely injured about the face. With the bomb there was a letter, signed J. Asker, who stated in the letter that it was a present and that it was a valuable one. Around the bomb itself, was wrapped a copy of the Socialist paper "Brand." It is believed that the attempt was instituted at the hands of the Young Socialists, whose aim it was to thus wreck one of the leaders of the anti socialists. Hammar had in some way offended the socialists during the strike. Another infernal machine was also sent to Gothenburg, but when it arrived to the person for whom it was intended, it did not explode, and the person in question remained uninjured.

A Swedish born songstress, Miss Agnes Janson, is at present visiting friends in Stockholm. She is a citizen of Australia, where she has won fame as a singer. She was at one time a member of the Stockholm Opera company and appeared in Covent Garden in 1900, where she scored a great success. She was later on engaged by an Australian opera company and has been singing in Melbourne during the last five years. She possesses a beautiful voice and will appear in concert in Stockholm prior to returning to her home in Australia.

The anti-emigration society in Sweden is now having all kinds of up hill work and its attempt to check emigration to foreign lands will now be all the more difficult as there are thousands of laboring men, who will go to other countries, having been thrown out of employment at home. Secretary Molin calls attention to opportunities for small manufacturers, but this opportunity is limited to such as have considerable capital, and therefore will not appeal to a great many of those forced to seek fortunes elsewhere.

Recent dispatches from Stockholm inform us that the arbitration undertaken by the government to settle the dispute between the employers' union and the confederation of labor has failed chiefly on account of the proposal to settle future disputes by arbitration. A renewal of the general strike is therefore imminent and consequently feared. In any event the postponement of the resumption of work will entail great suffering on the 60,000 men who are still idle.

The Young Socialists held their third massmeeting in Stockholm the other evening. It was their third annual meeting too, and there was a large attendance. There was no criticism expressed against the leaders of the recent strike, which failed. There were representatives from Denmark Norway and Germany and $500,000 was solicited. A republican propaganda was adopted and the government was severely arraigned for its compulsory military service.

A society has been organized in Stockholm for the purpose of offering protection to those who are willing to work during the strike, should it continue for some time, and any one interfering with workmen with words or actions, is to be prosecuted by the society. It is believed that the concerted action of this society, will greatly simplify matters for employers and give men who desire to do so, an opportunity to make a living unmolested.

The women of Sweden are gradually crowding out the men. In nearly all the railway offices of the country women are now employed and by the first of the year it is possible that there will be only women empolyed in these offices. They seem to do the work faster and more conscientiously than the men and are not so addicted to late hours and carousing as the men are.

In 1842 the first representation of "The Huguenots" in Sweden took place. The Urbain of that early date, Mlle. Fundin, is still living at Stockholm. The old lady is in her ninetieth year. NORWAY.

Says an exhange: "By the terms of a new law all grants of water-power privileges, involving more than 1,000 horsepower, whether made to native or foreign companies, automatically revert to the state after the period of the concession expires. This period is limited to eighty years and may be less. At its expiration, not only does the power become the state's property, but also the regulating works, the power stations and their equipment, change hands. In other words, those who obtain power concessions on the numerous mountain streams that paint white ribbons on the cliffs of Norway, do so on the undertanding that for the privilege of improving and using the power they must in the end turn over the whole plant to the state. This arrangement will, in the course of time, give the people of Norway a chance to try the socialistic plan of running the industrial plants by the government.

Eighteen carloads of Trondhjem herring was exported to Germany the other day over the Ostbanen road. The new academy of art which has recently been opened in connection with the University of Christiana starts out in good hands. DENMARK.

With an old age relief Denmark had a significant experience in proof of the ancient maxium, "the more you do the more may do." In 1893, about 43,000 aged persons were enjoying assistance from the community; in 1905, there was nearly 67,000. There has been no increase in poverty, or in population, to explain this growth and it seems that the larger number must be accounted for by the fact that now, as age comes on, the individual begins to arrange his affairs so that he can get government help. Furthermore the average amount paid out per person has, since 1894, gone up from $18.80 to something more than $26.00. But Denmark is a land of prosperity; the expenditure, if divided up among all the people would be only about thirty cents for each, and even though the Danish old-age provision is expensive, no one cares. One advantage of the Danish law over the German plan is that it protects employes of industry. Except for the demand that the applicant be deserving, no class is selected for protection.

The 250th anniversary of the Battle of Nyborg will be celebrated November 14 this year. The city council is in charge of the preparations, and the occasion will be a notable one. A monument with a suitable inscription will be unveiled outside the city gate where the battle raged. It is a victory of which the Danes are exceedingly proud and the celebration will therefore be an enthusiastic and elaborate one.

On the initiative of Captain Otto Sverdrup, there has been recently organized in Copenhagen a Danish company, which will take up the whaling industry in Greenland. It is the purpose of the company to conduct its pursuit of the whales on the open sea instead of on the coast as hitherto was the case. There is an unusual amount of whales and the prospects of the company to do a big business is the very best.

The operating expenses however, were $556,638.32, which accounts for the deficit.

A party of 125 residents of Prospect Park, an aristocratic residence section between the Twin Cities, among them many prominent business men of the two cities, called at the home of a negro family and read to its members a paper which told them in plain language that members of the colored race were not wanted in the neighborhood and to get out.

Alger, Smith & Co., who own the Duluth and Northern Minnesota road, which runs north from Knife River to the northern part of Lake county, have just purchased the Akeley & Sprague tract of pine in the northern part of Cook county. The road will be extended about forty or fifty miles to get the timber out.

The following officers were elected at the state Baptists' convention at Winona: President, A. F. Gale, Minneapolis; corresponding secretary, Rev. E. R. Pope, Minneapolis; recording secretary, D. D. Smith, St. Paul; treasurer, J. A. Ridgeway, Minneapolis.

The largest warrant ever issued by the state was written one day recently when State Auditor Iverson gave State Treasurer Dinehart a slip of paper for $1,160,007. This covers the October apportionment of the income of the permanent school fund.

Forty-one Red Wing manufacturers and merchants have filed with the interstate commerce commission a complaint charging twenty-six rail and water carriers with discriminating against Red Wing shippers by unreasonable and unlawful rates.

Minnesota had the best yield per acre of any state in the Union in rye and hay and the second best in wheat during the season just closing. Besides that Minnesota had the largest yield of wheat of any state in the Union.

The engineer board of the war department has reported adversely on the proposition for the survey of the Red Lake river in Northern Minnesota with a view to its improvement for the benefit of commerce.

Minnesota carried off the banner for the highest score in the contest conducted by the National Buttermakers' association at Milwaukee.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Death by suffocation, when a mother rolled on a sleeping babe at her side, is believed to have been the fate of the six-weeks-old child of Mr. and Mrs. William Fisman of Minneapolis. Mrs. Fisman awoke in the morning and found the infant dead. Suffocation was given as the cause of the death by the coroner.

Antonio Bova, convicted at St. Paul of manslaughter in the first degree for slaying Vincenza Megna last April, was sentenced by Judge Orr to serve an indeterminate sentence of from five to twenty-five years in the state penitentiary at Stillwater.

Tony Green, a meat cutter employed by a firm at Gilbert, is in a hospital in that village suffering from knife wounds, which may prove fatal. He was one of a number of men that engaged in a free for all fight in a saloon there.

Philip Foley of St. Paul, at work on the lower floor of the building, was almost instantly killed when a plank fell from the top of the new St. Paul hotel and struck him on the top of the head, fracturing the skull at the base.

Patrick Williamson, forty-five years old, was struck by the Great Northern passenger train bound for St. Paul between Bruno and Partridge. He died in the baggage car while being taken to Sandstone.

Discouraged because of inability to obtain employment and being without funds Stephen J. Moulton of Minneapolis ended his life by inhaling gas.

Fred Nelson, a pioneer resident of Warren, hanged himself in a saloon there. He was a victim of drink and worry.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

William Henry Brown, a pioneer resident of Minneapolis, died in the Soldiers' home hospital, where he had been for several weeks for treatment. He was seventy-seven years of age and served in the Ninth Minnesota during the Civil war.

Job Eastman, eighty-two years old, a resident of Minnesota since 1854, is dead at Anoka.

One real estate firm has this season sold forty two Red River Valley farms to Illinois parties. Most of the land sold by them is located in Polk county, Minn., and across the Red River near Grand Forks. The total acreage sold is 11,411 and shows that our lands are appreciated. The same real estate dealer anticipates even a better season next year judging from present inquiries.

School Notes.

Acting on the suggestion of State Superintendent Schulz a collection was taken last week in all the schools for the Johnson memorial fund, no child being permitted to contribute more than five cents. The total receipts amounted to $29.04, of which the Knox subscribed $9.56, the Central $7.67, and the High School, $11.81. The high school students alone contributed $7.18.

The opening enrollment of pupils for the month of September was 907 There were 297 in the High school building, 310 in the Knox, and 300 in the Central. A considerable increase has taken place to date.

48 visitors called at the schools during the month of September.

Hereafter fire drills will occur twice a month. The students have learned to leave the rooms quickly and safely, and can vacate any of the buildings at any time the gong rings in less than a minute, which is faster time than any published to date. It takes the Knox pupils, who have one more exit to their building than the others, about 32 seconds to empty their school, the Centrals about 40 seconds, and the High School people a little less than a minute. The narrow stairs and crowded condition on the second floor of the High School building retard the students not a little.

There are 140 children enrollec in the three primary rooms, all in the beginning classes. The two eighth grades number 56 students. The high school enrollment is 165. There are 23 young ladies and one solitary young man in the normal department and the graduating class contains 27 members.

Some 96 high school eighth grade students are taking cooking and sewing with Miss Stubbing. It costs about $10 per month for material for these classes and in practical results will prove one of the wisest investments made by the school board of education.

An interesting comparison of the four high school at Warren, Crookston, Red Lake Falls and Thief River Falls for the year 1908 and any High School Inspector Aiton. Five years ago the high school enrollment at Warren was 60, at Crookston 172, at Red Lake Falls 65 and Thief River Falls 34. The report for 1908 shows that Warren enrolled 64 school students, an increase of six percent; Crookston 242, an incease of 40 percent; Red Lakes Falls 64, a loss of of about one percent; Thief River Falls 154, an incease of 353 percent. The figures for the percent year will show still greater and more startling differences. The above are official and are indicative of many interesting conditions and changes and make further comment unnecessary.

Scott's Emulsion

is a wonderful food-medicine for all ages of mankind. It will make the delicate, sickly baby strong and well—will give the pale, anemic girl rosy cheeks and rich, red blood. It will put flesh on the bones of the tired, overworked, thin man, and will keep the aged man or woman in condition to resist colds or pneumonia in the winter.

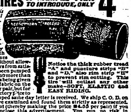
The regular retail price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. Sixty thousand pairs sold last year. Over two hundred thousand pairs now in use.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.



Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

SHOT BY HIS WIFE

Well Known St. Paul Physician Seriously Wounded.

WOMAN CLAIMS SELF-DEFENSE

Tragedy Follows Quarrel Over Domestic Affairs.

Dr. George M. Doran, for many years a well known physician of St. Paul, was shot in the abdomen and possibly fatally injured by his wife following a quarrel in the doctor's office. The wound is such that the physicians at St. Joseph's hospital, where Dr. Doran was taken, are unable to say just what the outcome will be, although they assert that the injury is a grave one.

Mrs. Doran was taken to the central police station, where she was questioned. Later she was placed in the county jail, pending a fuller investigation.

Mrs. Doran says she shot her husband in self-defense. According to her, she quarrelled with the doctor over his indifference and other domestic troubles, following which she was attacked by him. Then, it is said, she fired.

INVESTIGATION IN ST. PAUL

Said to Have Found Peonage to Exist in Minnesota.

State Labor Commissioner W. E. McEwen says that enforcement of the transportation labor contract law of 1901 in the lumber camps of Northern Minnesota brings about a condition of imprisonment for debt, or peonage, under threat of such imprisonment.

Testimony in regard to such condition was given before the federal commission which investigated alleged peonage cases during a session in St. Paul last week, and was startling, according to Mr. McEwen.

Mr. McEwen details a particularly harsh and unjust case of enforcement of the law to which he refers.

For fear of such punishment, he says, many men submit to deception and fraud and continue to work against their will.

ONE ACCIDENT IS FATAL

Two Lumber Company Employes Injured in Minneapolis.

Two employes of the C. A. Smith Lumber company of Minneapolis met with accidents, one of which proved fatal.

O. Bakken, fifty-five years of age, was on his way home from work when run down by a Soo switch engine. Both legs were severed, and he died shortly afterward from loss of blood.

Caught in the belting of a planing machine and carried to the ceiling, Victor Johnson was terribly mangled. His left leg was caught in a pulley and torn from his body. Besides, he sustained cuts and bruises about the head.

He is now in a precarious condition in St. Barnabas hospital.

PRAIRIE FIRE LOSS HEAVY

Many Tons of Hay and Sixteen Stacks of Wheat Burned.

A disastrous prairie fire devastated portions of Fanny and Lowell townships in Polk county. A terrific wind fanned the flames in their work of destruction and 800 tons of hay, all told, sixteen stacks of wheat and 500 tons of spelts on the Buffington farm, were burned. There were many other losers but the details cannot be learned. The total loss is estimated at $30,000 and there was practically no insurance.

ENDS HIS LIFE IN CEMETERY

St. Paul Business Man Drinks Bottle of Chloroform.

Marius Sorensen, manager of the St. Paul knitting works, was found dead in a secluded part of Forest cemetery in that city by Anthony Ambrosini, superintendent of the cemetery.

Near Mr. Sorensen's side was found an empty pound bottle which had contained chloroform. No reason is known for Mr. Sorensen's suicide.

FAIL TO GET INTO VAULT

Burglars Attempt to Rob County Treasurer's Office.

An attempt was made to rob the Washington county treasurer's office in the courthouse at Stillwater, but the robbers got nothing.

The burglars, in their attack on the vault, knocked off the combination lock. The door would not yield to the charge of nitroglycerin they used.

Treasurer's Shortage Grows.

That the shortage of A. A. Kremer, the treasurer of Itasca county, who was suspended two weeks ago for his peculations, will reach $10,000, is the latest report reaching St. Paul from Grand Rapids, where accountants are working on the books in the treasurer's office. The treasurer had given bonds for $10,000, and the shortage may be larger than his bond. It is not thought that the county will lose anything, however.

ARBOGAST MURDER MYSTERY

Indictment Against Daughter Likely to Be Dismissed.

Louise Arbogast of St. Paul will not be prosecuted for the murder of her father, no matter how the case against her mother terminates.

That much was learned from an authoritative source, although the county attorney would not make a specific statement to that effect. Apparently, however, there is little or nothing to show that Louise was in or near the bedchamber when her father was killed.

This new development in the case is the result of the testimony of Mrs. Mary Garvey, when she gave evidence flatly contradicting the statements of Ida Arbogast regarding her mother's presence in the burning room the morning her father, Louis Arbogast, was killed.

Mrs. Garvey stated positively that Mrs. Arbogast informed her that she was in the kitchen cooking breakfast when she was aroused by Ida's cries of fire upstairs. The girl swore that her mother was standing by the burning bedside of her dying father when she rushed in and dragged her away.

The bloody night dress worn by Mrs. Arbogast the morning of the murder, when Mrs. Garvey dressed her burns, was identified by the latter, as were other garments.

WRECK INTERIOR OF STORE

Cracksmen Blow Open Supposed Burglar Proof Safe.

In the course of a brazen raid robbers looted a supposed burglar-proof safe in the grocery store of the George Michel Mercantile company at St. Paul and secured $300, after actually blowing to bits the steel box and wrecking the interior of the store.

In addition to the cash secured about $400 in currency, coins and checks were practically destroyed by two explosions. The front of the store was blown out, the office was completely wrecked, and piles of canned goods were projected in all directions.

The explosions aroused tenants who occupy the two upper stories of the building. They were thrown into a panic and ran into the street in their night clothes. By the time they reached the street, however, the burglars had escaped with their plunder.

MINNEAPOLIS MILLS BUSY

Working Night and Day to Meet Demand for Flour.

Every shipping record in the milling history of Minneapolis was broken when the railroads took out 556 cars, containing 110,560 barrels of flour, in one day.

Solid trains of flour were moved out by most of the roads. If the cars could have been linked end to end, they would have made a train more than three miles long.

The mills have all been in operation for the past ten days, and the industry is active beyond precedent. Running day and night and Sunday to meet the demand, they are producing flour in enormous quantity.

FATAL WRECK AT RED WING

One Man Killed and Another One Is Injured.

In a head on collision in the yards at Red Wing between Great Western passenger train No. 2 and a light freight engine Fireman Einar Hasselberg of the freight was crushed between the engine tender and the tank as he was about to jump and died five minutes after being released.

John Dudley, Minneapolis, colored porter on the passenger, had his right arm broken.

GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER

Three Austrians Convicted of Killing Sawa Price.

After being out more than eight hours the jury at Chaska found John Koresgovicz, Peter Kasomowicz and Steve Oreskowicz, Austrians charged with the murder of Sawa Price in Chanhassen on Aug. 20, guilty of manslaughter in the first degree.

Steve Karicz was not indicted, and Joseph Miller, alleged leader of the gang, was never found.

DEAD MAN AT THE THROTTLE

Northern Pacific Train Passed Stations Without Signals.

Emil Dumrow, engineer on an extra train on the Northern Pacific, was instantly killed at Perham, Otter Tail county. It is supposed he was leaning out of the cab window and that his head struck a standpipe.

The fireman noticed that he was passing stations without giving signals and found Dumrow dead.

Boy Killed by Elevator.

Chester La Pray, sixteen years of age, was crushed to death in a freight elevator in the establishment of the Lavoris Chemical company at Minneapolis. His body was found at the foot of the shaft, where it had fallen from the fifth floor. The manner of the accident is not known, as no one saw it.

Hale Succeeds Brooks.

W. E. Hale of Minneapolis has been appointed by Governor Eberhart judge of the district court in Minneapolis to succeed Frank C. Brooks, who tendered his resignation in person to the governor. Judge Brooks will engage in private law practice with Robert Jamison.

FARMHOUSE SANITATION.

The problem of house sanitation is largely solved by city residents who have drainage from their houses direct into good sewage systems. In smaller towns and in the country, where such an outlet is not possible, the matter of the house drainage and closet should receive careful attention. Where the householder has the means by all odds the best system is an indoor toilet room, coupled with good drainage for the seat, bath and lavatory into a cesspool of ample size located at a sufficient distance from the well so that there cannot be any possibility of contamination of the water supply therefrom. Where such a system is installed pipes from the kitchen sink should be connected with it. Where means are limited or the house is cold and winter weather conditions are such that the pipes are likely to freeze, some other arrangement will have to be made. While a bathtub would still be possible, such disposal would have to be made of the drainage from it as not to result in dampness about the house. A satisfactory as well as sanitary arrangement for the closet is the substitution of a drawer of ample size in place of a cesspool and so arranged that it may be pulled out by a single horse, drawn to some distant spot and emptied as often as may be necessary. The place may be still further sweetened and the danger from flies eliminated if air slaked lime is sprinkled in the drawer during the period of accumulation, and incidentally the lime will probably be good for the land. Another respect in which the health of the farm home may be safeguarded—and here good farming jibes in with correct sanitation—is cleaning out the pens, yards and feed lots as frequently as possible and scattering the fertilizers at once on those portions of the farm which are most in need of them. There are thousands of farm homes where a few or one of the suggestions above made might be carried out and the premises be made more sanitary, more comfortable and more attractive as a consequence.

AN ENCOURAGING OUTLOOK.

The last issue of Secretary Wilson's year book of agriculture contains a good deal of interesting and optimistic information touching the advance which has been made along agricultural lines during the past twelve years. He finds that the agricultural balance of trade favorable to the United States has increased from $234,000,000 to $411,000,000 in twelve years, being a gain of 75.7 per cent. He reports that the employees in the agricultural department, as a result of the recognition of the importance of the work by the people at large, through their congressmen, have been increased from 2,444 in 1897 to 10,420 in 1908. He notes a rapid introduction of better agricultural methods and more effective machinery and a closer and more practical connection between the work of the state experiment stations and the agricultural interests of the country. Secretary Wilson observes that, while there has been a decreasing production per acre of what was originally virgin soil, there has been an increased production per acre for the whole country. He finds that cotton production has increased in ten years from 172 to 191 pounds per acre, that the increase in production of corn per acre in Ohio has been 17.5, of oats in Indiana 17.9, of wheat in New York 16.2 and in Nebraska 45.9 per cent. Along with all of this advance in many lines there has been an increase in financial returns, which has meant better living as well as more comforts and compensations of rural inhabitants. The general tone of the veteran secretary's report is such that the rural citizen would seem to be justified now in laying plans for a large turkey and a generous outlay of plum pudding for the last Thursday in November.

TREATING FENCEPOSTS.

If one has a good deal of fencing to do he is justified in looking into some method of giving the posts a preservative treatment whereby their term of usefulness may be extended. Creosote is one of the materials most commonly employed in preserving wood and where commercially used is forced into the posts in cylinders under pressure. This is called the "pressure method." Another method and one more commonly used by those who have a limited number of posts to treat is the "open tank." It has been found that by immersing the wood first in a hot and then in a cold liquid almost as good results are obtained as in the pressure method. If two tanks are not available for the hot and cold baths one tank will suffice, the posts being left in the hot preservative for several hours and the heat then shut off and allowed to cool in the oil until the proper saturation has taken place.

The stubs of clover hay left in the cow mangers will be eaten up clean by the horses provided their main roughage ration is timothy or wild hay. Even the clover stalks are good for them, and they know it.

A manure spreader seasonably and properly used is one of the best money makers—or money savers—on the farm. The common method of handling with a fork, with its lumpy distribution, is wasteful, extravagant and slow.

If the housewife will tear ordinary newspapers into pieces a couple of inches across, wet them and scatter them over the floor to be swept, they will be found a material aid in laying the dust and in picking it up clean from floor or carpet.

The Giant is the largest tree in the Santa Cruz grove of big trees. It is sixty-five feet in circumference at the base and is 30 feet high, with seventy-five feet of the top broken off. The age of the tree is uncertain, but it is placed by scientists at between 3,000 and 5,000 years.

Not honest failure, ill health, financial reverse or any other external contingency has in it the power to completely dull the brightness of the sun, take pink from dawn or sunset, extinguish the zest and worth of living, but only sin and wrongdoing. This is a simple truth the force of which is all too often little appreciated, yet one that is given everyday proof.

It is the right time now before the leaves in the orchard have all fallen to go through and mark the trees which are dead or so far gone that they cannot be pruned back and given a new start. The health of the tree can easily be noted from the condition of the leaves and the presence of scrawny, undersized fruit, and if marked now the trees may be removed any time before spring.

An advantage of the cement floor in the stable is that it makes possible a saving of the liquid manures, which contain valuable fertilizing elements. These may be absorbed by abundant bedding of straw, or, in the case of cows, earth, leaves or sawdust may be scattered in the gutter at the rear of the animals. The important thing is the saving of these liquids, the method being of minor importance.

A couple of Chicago men are said to have discovered a method of manufacturing alcohol from sawdust whereby it may be produced at a cost of 7 cents per gallon as against 15 cents or more for the distillation of grain alcohol. Considering the prospective scarcity of corn and also of sawdust, the new process would seem to have little to commend it from the commercial standpoint for the future, whatever may be done with it in the present.

We saw a tobacco catalogue the other day in which a pretty good looking saddle was offered as a premium for 3,000 tobacco tags. Since the tags run about five to the pound this offer means that a fellow would have to chew up 600 pounds, four times his own weight, to get the saddle, and this would cost him, at 50 cents a pound, $300. Considering the fact that the tobacco works physical and mental harm rather than good, it makes the cost of the saddle a bit high.

Bulletin No. 180, issued a short time ago by the Wisconsin experiment station, places the annual loss to the farmers of the Badger State through the careless handling of manures at $20,000,000. This estimate is based on a careful chemical analysis of farm manures and the loss in fertilizing value incident to prevalent methods of handling. It would seem in the face of such figures as these as though it were about time for the stock farmer to take measures to stop a big leak.

A walk through a field of standing corn and careful inspection of the ears will bring out the fact that the ears which are high up on the stalk are not so far along and well matured as those which are waist or chest high. This should serve to give point to the suggestion that if early maturing seed is desired the low growing ears should be selected. Another point in favor of the low ear is that its early maturity makes possible a thorough drying of it before the freezing weather comes on.

It was supposed at the time of the enactment of the Payne tariff bill that the eight cent duty which was placed on imported lemons would add that much to the returns of the lemon growers of the country, which, if the reports are true, have not been flourishing in an entirely satisfactory way. But this consummation is not to be, as the transcontinental roads have within a few weeks raised the rate on lemons, which will just about consume the 8 cents in question, leaving the grower where he was before, with the public mulcted what, it is alleged, will be $10,000,000 a year and this snug sum stuck into the coffers of the transportation companies. Thus the lemon duty bids fair in very earnest to be another "lemon" which was handed the dear people in the recently enacted and much cussed and discussed tariff bill. The lemon growers will undoubtedly contest the prospective rate increase, but it is hardly likely that their protest will avail them anything.

How Ed. Wise Found the Wise Way

Ed. was Old Wise's brother.

Lived with him ever since he had typhoid—lost his grip after that sickness—always white, always weak, always thin. Just able to hobble round and live on his brother.

Wise's physician, calling on Mrs. Wise and the baby, noticed Uncle Ed's condition—went over his case right there and started him on DIGESTO.

Ed. first developed ambition—then flesh and strength.

Instead of a burden, he is now Old Wise's mainstay.

In Olden Days.

When Hendrik Hudson landed on the beach of Manhattan Island he gave one of the Indians an uppercut for stealing his snuffbox.

"Ah, captain, that would make a fine picture," laughed one of his gallant crew.

"Methinks so," agreed the great voyager. "I suppose the future artists will call that picture 'Hendrik Hudson Landing on Indian Territory.'"

And the great and conscientious explorer traded a combination whisk broom and toothbrush to the innocent red men for a thousand acres of land. —Chicago News.

Alderman, Second Ward.		Alderman, Third Ward.
Milton Forder	70	Charles Alexander	208
K. A. Sundahl	54	Fred S. Doege	41

T. P. Hamre is to be mayor of Thief River Falls for the next two years. This fact was settled by the sovereign voters of the city Tuesday. Along with Mr. Hamre the following council was also elected: Aldermen at large, Jens P. Jensen and John O. Berg; Alderman, First Ward, A. H. Fasel; Alderman, Second Ward, Milton Forder, and Alderman Third Ward, Charles Alexander.

The day was an ideal one and the voters turned out in considerable number for a city election.

Notes of the Battle.

The way it looks now after the clouds of battle have rolled away, is that the elite of "Nob Hill" will have to walk over sawdust for a couple of years more.

According to rumor the Tri-State Telephone company took a hand in the election of aldermen—and the company may be sorry that it did.

The members of the Socialist party refused to vote at the city election. There were no Socialist candidates and they refrained from making any choice.

The East Side will have two aldermen in the next council, and if they do not get more light—and sawdust—it will be an easy thing to place the responsibility.

The contest for alderman in the First ward was about the tamest in the city and hardly a person could predict the results until the votes were counted.

Much literature was circulated by the Gambell forces, but Mayor Hamre confined his efforts to the glad hand and a straight talk from the shoulder.

The total vote cast was 751. The First precinct of the First ward cast 156, the Second precinct 199, the Second ward had 129 voters while the Third had 237.

Ed Evenson had no opposition for the office of city Treasurer and received about all of the votes.

W. J. LaBree was elected justice in the First ward; A. W. Lang in the Second and Louis Lonson in the Third.

The fight for mayor was between the enemies and friends of Mayor Hamre. Although Dr. Gambell was the opposing candidate, very little consideration was given to him personally. Mayor Hamre is a regular human dynamo and as such has a lot of friends and enemies.

School Notes.

Miss Cora B. Anderson of Redwood Falls arrived Monday last to assist in High School. She takes part of the largest classes, and it is found that in spite of the divisions made, some classes are still larger than what is ordinarily found in a high school.

The Northwestern Teachers Association will convene in annual session at Crookston the latter part of next week. This meeting has the record for being the largest sectional educational gatheringin the state and almost equals the state association in attendance. All the leading educational people of the state will be present and two well known persons from the east will lecture the two evenings of the meeting. Two of the local teachers will take part in the program and Dr. F. H. Gambell of the Thief River board of education will present a paper on some phase of school health before the general assembly on Friday afternoon.

Miss Jonnson's fifth and sixth grades have been moved to the Dobner Meehan building in order to make room for the high school students.

The twenty four normal training students visited a reservation school on Tuesday afternoon. They learned some lessons at first hand as to school organization and administration.

Four more students enrolled in high school last Monday. Two were from east of Middle River, one from Newfolden and one from Thief River. There are now nine students enrolled in high school from Newfolden.

The death of Dorris Tarrant last week removes from the Knox school one of the brightest and most lovable little girls in the city. As a mark of respect, Miss Paine's room, in which she was a pupil, was closed Friday afternoon.

The local schools will be closed on Friday, November 12th, to permit the faculty to attend the Crookston meeting.

Sewing was formally installed in grades four to seven inclusive last week. A few dollars worth of material was the only expense involved and the regular teachers with the aid of manuals can care for this important work. It is expected that next year the boys will be supplied with some wood work to offset this sewing, which the girls now take.

Germantown.

Germantown, Nov. 1, 1909.—Since the middle of last week the ground has been too much frozen for plowing, but the weather otherwise has been ideal and if this is not a regular Indian summer it is an excellent counterfeit. As few or none have as yet quite finished plowing the wish is still general for some more days without frost.

Albert Simonson, one of Germantown's old timers spent a few days here some time ago, being enroute to his claim up in Beltrami county.

John Mortenson and H. Torgrimson, of Moylan township, shipped a carload of choice stock last week.

Miss Adelaide Holden, returned here last week after a weeks visit in Thief River Falls, to remain for a brief stay before leaving for the west.

The town fathers were out to the beaver dam three miles north of here Saturday of last week letting contracts for some much needed repairs on the road at that place, and the work is now about finished. Something over $100 is being expended.

John H. Berve and family who left here about two months ago for Alberta to look over the land out there returned to Thief River Falls last week, not having found anything desirable as homesteads.

M. G. Skogstad was up last week from Silverton, removing the last of his effects from the old place northeast of here.

The creamery closed its doors for business on Saturday after a successful run since April 1st, and will now remain closed until next spring. This may be taken as a sure sign of approaching winter as those who have observed the effect from year to year are positive that it never yet has failed as such.

Ed Wilcox was up from Thief River Falls last Saturday on a hunting trip.

Buttermaker Henry Paulson is attending the convention of the Red River Valley Dairymens Association at Crookston this week. He intends to leave here next week for Glenwood. Mr. Paulson has made good in the creamery besides making a large member of friends who regret the departure.

Natures offering in abundant grass to the north of us that has gone begging for takers all summer is now going back to whence it came by means of the element of heat, and the sight cannot but divert our thoughts from where they belong to the great waste going on year after year only because of a few inches of water about evenly distributed over the almost boundless rich plains now doing only as much service to the world as is measured by the furs of a few measley muskrat and mink. But there is solace in the anticipation of the idea condition that can, and in the near future must prevail over the barren the fertile region when it shall arise in its might being given the opportunity to show its immeasurable possibilities by means of a compartively few dollars expended in drainage.

Agent Smith Goes to Wisconsin.

C. L. Smith, who for the past two years has been the local agent for the Soo here, has been transferred to Waupaca, Wis. Mr. Smith made application last summer for a Wisconsin station, desiring to go there on account of the fact that many of his relatives live in that state. Waupaca is a city of about the same size as Thief River Falls and is a great summer resort town. Just who will be the new agent here is not known at present.

Mr. Smith has held the good will and esteem of the Thief River Falls public to a marked degree and it is with genuine regret that the people learn of his departure.

Viewed the Ditch.

All of the county commissioners were in Thief River Falls Monday, going out to view the ditch just east of the city. They report that the work had been completed in a satisfactory manner and that the ditch will be a great benefit to the farmers living in that section.

A New Meat Market.

S. T. Johnson and Louis Demming have formed a partnership and will open up a butcher shop in Mr. Johnson's building on LaBree avenue. Both are well and favorably known in Thief River Falls and they announce that they will conduct an up-to-date market.

Bought an Engine.

John Bundy, agent for the International Harvester company was down to St. Hilaire the first of the week and sold to the Farmers' Elevator company a twenty-five horse power gasoline engine. The engine will be used to grind feed for the farmers in that vicinity.

La Grippe Then Pneumonia.

BUILD HOUSES IN TREES.

Some Mexicans Thus Sleep Secure From Quakes and Tigers.

In order to protect their homes from earthquakes many of the natives in the territory around Chilpancingo and other towns in the state of Guerrero, in Mexico, live in trees. Some of these tree homes are of large size and are ingeniously constructed. Reeds and grasses are interwoven with the twigs and branches of the tree, much in the manner that a bird builds its nest. The severest wind seldom loosens it from the tree. Where the trees are large and stand closely together houses of two or three rooms are frequently built in their branches. These houses also afford protection from the tigers and other wild animals which are found in that region in large numbers. It is said that a tiger will not attack its prey unless it is upon the ground.

The prime object of elevating these houses into the trees, however, is, as mentioned, to keep them from being shaken down by the severe earthquakes which visit the Guerrero territory at frequent intervals. The rocking of the earth gives the trees a swaying motion, but does no damage to the houses. In some localities whole villages of these tree homes are to be seen. None of them suffered damage from the recent earthquakes which wrought such ruin to the buildings upon the ground.—New York Tribune.

THE PRINCE'S PRESENT.

It Was Given In Exchange For a Magnificent Carpet.

"While I was in Damascus," said a globe trotter the other day, "some royal highness or other potentate passed through that ancient city, and the governor of the town delivered an address of welcome. It was in verse, and everybody who knew of the occurrence felt sure that the governor had been richly rewarded by the prince for his effort. That afternoon, so the story goes, the governor called on a dealer in rugs with whom he had been chaffering for a long time over a magnificent carpet which he coveted for his palace. After several cups of coffee the rug merchant offered the governor the carpet in exchange for the present the prince had given him for his poetic welcome to Damascus. The governor after a little hesitation agreed, and the carpet was rolled up and delivered to an attendant, who started for the governor's palace.

"'Thank you,' said the governor as he arose gracefully to his feet.

"'But the prince's present?' demanded the rug merchant.

"'You have it,' said the governor. 'All he gave me was "Thank you," and this I have given you for your carpet.'"—New York Press.

Janet's Way of Growing Young.

As a matter of fact, Janet was born exactly two years before her brother Fred; therefore in the natural course of things when he was ten she was twelve and gloried in it. When Fred was known to be fourteen she still confessed to sixteen. When Fred boasted eighteen years she timidly acknowledged herself just over nineteen. When Fred came home from college and had a party in honor of his twenty-first birthday Janet said to her friends: "What a boyish fellow Fred is! Who would think he is only a year younger than I?" When Fred declared himself twenty-five and old enough to get married Janet said to a gentleman friend: "Do you know, I feel very jealous of Fred getting married. But, then, I suppose twins always are more attached to one another." And two years later at Fred's wedding she said, with a girlish simper to the guests: "Dear old Fred! To see him married today, and to think when he was only five years old they brought him to see me, his baby sister; I wonder if he thinks of it now?"

Thought He Was Mad.

The late Count de Lesseps was traveling on one occasion in a French railway train in a compartment with two commercial travelers.

"I beg your pardon, sir," said one of them, fancying that he belonged to their fraternity—"are you not a traveler?"

"Certainly I am," said the count.

"We thought so! What is your line?"

"Isthmuses."

"Wh-wh-what," asked the puzzled commercial—"what are they?"

"I am introducing ship canals," said De Lesseps gravely.

The commercial travelers feared that they had fallen in with a lunatic and were making preparations to escape when the count handed them his card and put them at their ease.

The Architecture of Madeira.

We saw no suggestion of modern architecture or European innovation, no blot anywhere except a single motorcar. Without knowing anything on the subject I should say that the architecture of Madeira is a mixture of Spanish and Moorish, like that of Mexico, only it is better than anything in Mexico. From the ship the stucco, tile roofed city is flawless, and as we steam away and night comes down and lights break out and become a jeweled necklace along the water's edge our one regret is that we are leaving it all behind.—Albert Bigelow Paine in Outing Magazine.

The Easiest Way.

Dickson—Dobbins formerly opposed my views, but now he agrees with me in everything. Wickson—How do you account for it? Dickson—Don't know. I'm not sure whether I convince him or only make him tired.

The first and worst of all frauds is to cheat oneself.

Contentment and satisfaction in living, in whatever the calling, depend more largely upon folks themselves than upon their financial condition or environment.

Cuss words and clubs never were a source of profit in the conduct of a dairy and never will be as long as dairies are. Caresses, rather, and the snatch of a tune are better milk producers.

A curious fact in connection with the teredo, a wormlike bivalve mollusc, which does much damage to marine piling, timbers and wooden ship bottoms, is that it will die at once if placed in fresh water.

The sires in flock, drove or herd should be changed often enough so that the vigor of the offspring will not be impaired by inbreeding. In many cases a sire in every way first class and well bred may be exchanged for another of a different strain in a different locality.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of two thousand one hundred thirteen and 30-100 dollars ($2113.30), which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by the Pioneer Sash & Door Company, a corporation, Mortgagor, to Henry Reinhardt, Mortgagee, bearing date the 15th day of February, 1909, and with a power of sale therein contained, which said mortgage was duly filed for record in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Red Lake county and state of Minnesota, on the 16th day of February, 1909 at 11:10 o'clock A. M., and duly recorded in Book 10 of Mortgages, on page 94, which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby was duly assigned by Henry Reinhardt, Mortgagee, to the Merchants National Bank of Detroit, Minnesota, a corporation, on the 20th day of February, 1909, and the said assignment was filed for record in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Red Lake county and state of Minnesota on the 25th day of October, 1909, at 9 o'clock A.M., and duly recorded in Book 2 of Mortgages on page 58; and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

Lots twenty-seven (27), twenty-eight (28), twenty-nine (29) and thirty (30) of Block sixty-four (64) of the original townsite of Thief River Falls, Minnesota, according to the certified plat thereof now on file and of record in the office of the Register of Deeds within and for Red Lake county, Minnesota, with all the hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging or in anywise appertaining, which said sale will be made by the sheriff of said Red Lake county at the front door of the court house, in the city of Red Lake Falls, in said county of Red Lake and state of Minnesota on the 18th day of December, 1909, at ten o'clock A. M., of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of two thousand one hundred thirteen and 30-100 dollars ($2113.30) and interest and the taxes if any on the said premises, and seventy-five dollars ($75.00) attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of sale as provided by law.

Dated October 30, 1909.

The Edge of Night.

There are only twenty-four hours to the day—to the day and the night. And how few are left to that quiet time between the light and the dark! Ours is a hurried twilight. We quit work to sleep; we wake up to work again. We measure the day by the clock; we measure the night by an alarm clock. Life is all ticked off. We are murdered by the second. What we need is a day and a night with wider margins, a dawn that comes more slowly and a longer lingering twilight. Life has too little selvage; it is too often raw and raveled. Room and quiet and verge, are what we want, not more dials for time nor more figures for the dials. We have things enough, too—more than enough. It is space for the things, perspective and the right measure for the things that we lack—a measure not one foot short of the distance between us and the stars.

If we get anything out of the fields worth while it will be this measure, this largeness and quiet. It may be only an owl or a tree toad that we go forth to see, but how much more we find in things we cannot hear by day—things long, long forgotten, things we never thought or dreamed before.

The day is none too short, the night none too long, but all too narrow is the edge between.—Dallas Lore Sharp in Atlantic.

The Real Napoleon.

At a review of the national guard at the Tuileries shortly before Waterloo I had for some time a most complete opportunity of contemplating this extraordinary being. His face is of a deadly pale, his jaws overhanging, but not so much as I had heard. His hair is short, of a dark, dusky brown. He generally stood with his hands knit behind him or folded before him and three or four times took snuff out of a plain brown box. Once he looked at his watch, which, by the way, had a gold face and, I think, a brown hair chain, like an English one. His teeth seemed regular, but not clean. He very seldom spoke, but when he did smiled in some sort agreeably. He looked about him—not knitting, but joining, his eyebrows. As the front of each regiment passed he put up the first finger of his left hand quickly to his hat to salute, but did not move his head or hat. He had an air of sedate impatience.—From "Recollections of a Long Life," by Lord Broughton.

Clearly Understood.

They seldom gave dinner parties, and those they gave were small. But they liked things done decently and in order and generally had the best. On the afternoon of one of the little parties the host summoned the boy in buttons and said to him, "Now, John, you must be careful how you hand round the wine."

"Yes, sir."

"These bottles with the black seals are the best and these with the red seals the inferior sherry. The best sherry is for after dinner. The inferior sherry you will hand around with the hock after soup. You understand—hock and inferior sherry after soup?"

"Yes, sir; perfectly," responded the boy in buttons.

The evening came and with it the guests. Everything went on swimmingly till the boy went round the table asking each of the guests, "Hock or inferior sherry?"—London Tit-Bits.

When the Fairies Are Noisy.

Among the flowers which are said to be very popular with fairies are bluebells, harebells and wood sorrel. All these flowers are used by the fairies to attract the attention of their friends who are at a little distance. If you are ever out in the woods when the bluebell or wood sorrel begins to peal in delicate, soft tones you will know that the little flower is being swayed to and fro by some visiting fairy. The foxglove, known also as the fairy bells, are also said to be used by the fairies for chimes, but when the little people wish to sound a real resounding blast that shall awaken from slumber some tiny friend in a nearby flower bed or thicket they use not a bell, but a rose leaf rolled up into a very charming horn.—Lexington Leader.

The Beggars of Madeira.

There is only one fly in the ointment of Madeira comfort—the beggars. They begin to beg before they can walk, and they call "Penny, penny!" before they can lisp the sacred name of "mamma." However, one good thing has come of our experience with them. They have prepared us for beggars elsewhere. We are hardened now—at least we think we are. The savor of pity has gone out of us.—Albert Bigelow Paine in Outing Magazine.

A Prize Watchdog.

Gentleman—But I am afraid he wouldn't make a good watchdog. Man (with bull terrier)—Not a good watchdog! Why, Lor' bless your 'eart, it was only last week that this wery animal held a burglar down by the throat and beat his brains out with his tail.—London Tatler.

Better Dad Than Editors.

Judge—How do you earn your living? Prisoner—By writing, your honor. Judge—And what do you write for? Would you mind telling us? Prisoner—Not at all. I write for money from home.—Judge's Library.

Could He?

If a man saw his sister fall into a well, why could he not rescue her? Because he could not be a brother and assist her too.

He Knew Better.

Mr. Budd—Life is full of contradictions. Mrs. Budd—And I say it isn't.

Life is a great bundle of little things. —Holmes.

His Generosity.

"Yes," said the tired looking woman, "I have a very generous husband, and this is the way he gets that reputation. The other day I worked and slaved in the kitchen for about ten hours making jelly. It was my first attempt, so I had considerable trouble and burned my fingers about seventeen different times. It turned out pretty good, however, and of course I was proud and delighted. That night I put some on the table for dinner, and husband got enthusiastic.

"Next day he was visiting a sick friend of his, a man, by the way, quite able to buy anything he might want and whose wife never lifts her finger. On leaving Mr. Generous Husband says: 'My wife made some pretty good jelly the other day. You might like some. I'll send you up half a dozen jars.'

"Now, wouldn't that frost you or rasp you or whatever they say. Half a dozen jars! After all my work to hand that jelly over to a man whose wife is too lazy to breathe! I made exactly eight jars, so we will have one more unless he has already promised it to somebody else."—New York Press.

Sunshine and Dust.

There is more dust in the places illuminated by the sun's rays than in those which we call shady. If you look along a beam of light as it streams through a window or a chink in the door you will see innumerable dust particles dancing about in the light. You will be told by most persons that there is just as much dust in the nonilluminated parts of the room as in the more favored spaces, but you cannot see the particles because the rays do not fall directly upon them. You will think that this is eminently plausible, but it is not the case. The sun falling upon the air creates irregular currents, and these currents stir up the dust and collect it in layers along the line of light; hence there is more dust where the sun shines than elsewhere. A curious experience in a museum gave proof of this. It was noticed that there was always more dust on the glass cases exposed to the sunbeams than on those which were never touched by the rays of the great orb, and this led to an inquiry, with the above result.

Traced by a Thermometer.

One night many years ago Dr. Whitelaw was walking along with the messenger when he was set upon and knocked down in a lonely part of the road. His pockets were rifled, and he was left lying on the road with a fracture of the fibula. One of the articles stolen was a clinical thermometer with which he had that evening taken the temperature of a patient suffering from enteric fever. He remembered the temperature registered, also that he had not shaken down the mercury before putting the thermometer back in his pocket, and he communicated these facts to the police. Some time afterward a thermometer registering the identical temperature was discovered in a pawnshop in Glasgow, and by this means the police were enabled to track the doctor's assailants and to arrest them in one of the Glasgow theaters.—Glasgow Medical Journal.

Shell Sculptors.

The workman manipulated the comb of pale, translucent tortoise shell like putty, molding the top with his fingers into small balls.

"You thought we carved shell, hey?" he said, with an Italian accent. "No, no. We heat it up and mold it. We are shell sculptors."

He took three pieces of shell from a pot of steaming water and laid them very carefully, one on top of the other, in a press.

"Shell is like glue," he said. "These three pieces will weld together, and not a sign of a seam will show. Sometimes we weld nine, four, twenty pieces together. I learned my trade in Naples. I don't want to boast, but we Neapolitans are the best workers in shell and coral that there are in the world."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Her Transformation.

Irene was a little street waif. A kind hearted woman called her into her home one day, gave her a bath, brushed her hair and arranged it becomingly, tying it with a clean pretty ribbon, then stepped back to view the result. A friend who was present remarked that there was such a change one would scarcely know that it was the same child. Then the little girl spoke up timidly, "But my name's Irene yet, ain't it?"—Delineator.

Mr. O'Donnell and the Hour.

An excellent bull was perpetrated in the house of commons one morning at half past 1 o'clock. Mr. O'Donnell was the author. He rose suddenly to his feet and cut into the debate with, "At this late hour of the morning, Mr. Speaker"—

"Early hour you mean," from the government benches.

"Well, Mr. Speaker," he continued, "at this early hour of the following day."

True Enough.

Irritated Citizen—Aren't you ashamed of yourself, going about with that street organ and leading such a lazy life? Street Organist—Lazy life? Why, sir, life with me is one long daily grind.—Echo.

He Lived Well.

He—Yes, he lives on the fat of the land. She—What is he? He—An anti-fat medicine manufacturer.—Comic Cuts.

Life's a reckoning we cannot make twice over. You cannot mend a wrong subtraction by doing your addition right.—George Eliot.

THE NEWS

BY JOHN W. EASTMAN

ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

Now that election is over, we can again love one another.

News item—John Duffy was elected mayor of Red Lake Falls without opposition.

The Olberg Journal is one of the Northern Minnesota papers that is enjoying prosperity. A Bagley firm has instituted a $10,000 suit against the editor.

The Standard Oil Company was fined $65,000 in Texas the other day for violating the anti-trust law. If Texas wants cool weather it will probably get that kind when the fine is paid.

Rushmore Enterprise: Good roads cannot be overdone. Good roads shorten the distance to market. Good roads bring backward communities to the fore. Good roads make work pleasanter. Good roads makes it easier to build new homes. Good roads increase the value of the farm land, city property, save horse flesh, harness and vehicles, bring neighbors closer together, increase attendance at school, prevent profanity, ugliness and cruelty to animals, keep everybody in good humor most of the time and are a source of continual satisfaction. Good roads are worth all they cost, no matter how much.

James J. Hill is writing for the Word's Work a series of articles entitled "Highways of Progress." The first of these appears in the November issue. "The value of our annual farm product," says Mr. Hill, "is now about $8,000,000,000. It might easily be doubled. When the forests are all cut down and the mines are nothing but holes in the ground, the farm lands of the country will remain capable of renewing their bounty forever. But they must have proper treatment. To provide this, as a matter of self interest and of national safety, is the most imparative present duty of our people. Indolence, bad farming methods, greed and the idea that it needs no brains to run a farm, have prevented agriculture from taking its true place in the national life and multiplying the value of both the soil and its product. They should not be proof longer against the progress of new ideas. The armed fleets of an enemy approaching our harbors would be no more alarming than the relentless advance of a day when we shall not have sufficient food nor the means to purchase it for our population. The farmers of the nation must save it in the future, just as they built its greatness in the past."

A Most Wonderful Cure.

Joseph D. Underhill, of Doland, S. Dakota, says: I have received great benefit from your White Wine of Tar Syrup. I had a deep seated cough and the doctors gave up all hope of my recovery and pronounced it consumption. I tried everything that we could hear of. Finally one of my friends prevailed upon me to use your White Wine of Tar Syrup. I used 1½ bottles and am entirely cured. Such medicine I can recommend to those who were afflicted as I was." County Commissioners Meet.

The county commissioners held a meeting last Saturday and the strange thing about the gathering was that no bills were allowed. Another meeting, however, will be held on the 6th of November and at this time the usual number of bills will be allowed.

The contract was ordered let for the cleaning out of the ditch just west of Thief River Falls, the estimated cost being $2,000 and the farmers will have to pay this cost.

A new ditch in the town of Highlanding which runs in a southeasterly direction and empties into the Red Lake River near Kratka was established.

Wanted—An Interpreter.

It was a case of assault, and the literally downtrodden wife was laying her grievances before the magistrate.

"He started by giving me a biff on the nut," explained the angry complainant.

"My good woman," rebuked the magistrate, "you mustn't talk like that here. I suppose you mean he gave you a blow upon the head."

"Yus, yer washup. An' then 'e tried ter do me in by chuckin' 'is 'baccy box at me."

"By which I presume you mean," interposed the justice of the peace severely, "that he tried to injure you by precipitating his box of tobacco at you. Pray proceed and avoid slang and inform the court what other injuries he inflicted upon you."

"Well, then, he—er—he"—

"Come, come!" snapped the magistrate, really beginning to lose his temper. "Don't waste the time of the court."

The ill used wife looked about her helplessly.

"Excuse me, yer washup," she exclaimed at length, "but I was wonderin' what was the pet name in this 'ere court for a biff on the jib!"—London Answers.

Woman—and Her Master.

The philosopher and his friend sat far into the night discoursing on things in general and smoking strong shag.

"Woman," said the former, oracularly, "was meant to fill a subordinate position in the scheme of creation. Man is naturally her master. She cannot rationally oppose his will. He is instinctively and by the law of natural selection the dominant animal. Woman may learn to revolt, but she can never learn to rule. She has one mission in life—that of obedience. Man is born to lead, woman to follow. Man is born to command, woman to comply. She is secure only in her weakness. It is at once her duty and delight to obey her superior and"—

Then the door opened, and there appeared the head of a female thereat.

"Theophilus," said a stern voice, "how often have I told you not to smoke your horrid tobacco in the library? It's half past 2, sir. Come to bed instantly."

And the philosopher sighed, shook his friend silently by the hand and went.—London Sketch.

A Tempest In a Teapot.

What war was caused by a clay teapot?

For an answer to this question we must go, as might be supposed, to the land of pigtails and porcelain. The story goes that a Chinese emperor in olden days gave as a mark of special favor a magnificent clay teapot of rare design to Lo Hung Chang, his favorite mandarin. This was laid up as a priceless possession among the treasures of Lo Hung or borne at his side by two attendants at all high public festivals and functions. A rival mandarin saw these signs of distinction with the green eyes of jealousy and hired a man to break the obnoxious pot. The clumsy fellow was caught in the act and betrayed his master. War followed between the two mandarins and their respective followers, which resulted in the overthrow and death of Lo Hung Chang and the reception of his rival into royal favor in his place.

Soot on His Suit.

They were having a spelling lesson at a certain district school the other day, and the little scholars were all arranged in front of the teacher, spelling away for dear life, trying to see how near they could get to the head.

The word "chimney" was given out to a little black eyed girl who had been spelling words correctly throughout the morning, but she missed this one by inadvertently leaving out the "h."

Quick as a wink the little boy next her pounced on the word and spelled it correctly.

"You may go up one, Johnnie," said the teacher.

"I don't want to," whined Johnnie, getting ready to cry. "My mother would whip me if I did, because I'd get all over soot."—London Fun.

Might Have Been Put Differently.

We cut the announcement below from a New Zealand paper: "Notice.—The Maoris who are breeding pigs in Takahue, such as Mrs. Peter and Mr. Sam Yates, are supposed to look after their pigs and keep them away from rooting my paddocks, or else if they do not I shall shoot every pig I come across. Secretary L. Howell."

This is decidedly one of the things that might have been put differently.—Westminster Gazette.

On the Road to Learning.

"You say you know nothing at all about our railway?" said the official.

"Nothing whatever," answered the applicant for employment.

"Well, you come highly recommended. I suppose we'll have to put you in the bureau of information and let the traveling public educate you."—Washington Star.

Probably.

Myer—I wonder why Browne added the "e" to his name after inheriting a fortune? Gyer—He probably figures out to his own satisfaction that rich people are entitled to more ease than poor people.—London Globe.

The Water Jet.

The idea of driving piles with a water jet was borrowed by engineers from the clam, a small shellfish which burrows twelve to fourteen inches into hard sand or mud by this process.

The Iowa experiment station has lately issued bulletin No. 105 on the "Eradication of Weeds," including a discussion of methods of spraying as well as means of combating weeds which cannot be killed or seriously injured by sprays. The problem of weed eradication is coming to be a serious one for Iowa farmers, and the bulletin, which is timely and helpful, should be in the hands of all who are interested in the weed problem.

In the eye of the law one person has no right on the premises of another except through invitation or special permission. In common practice one is not considered a trespasser unless he remains on the premises of another after being ordered off or unless notice has been given in some public manner that people must not go on to the place. It is apparent that the property owner has the law on his side and can easily recover damages from those who trespass on his premises.

One of the secrets of the careful fruit growers' success in the famous apple valleys of the west lies in the thinning of overloaded trees when the green fruit is the size of a hickory nut or a little larger. It costs less to pick a green apple than a ripe one and as a tree has capacity to bring only a given weight of fruit to proper maturity, the grower secures in increased size what he loses in number of apples, with the result that at harvest time he has apples of much larger size and superior quality, and these two things mean an increased return.

Notwithstanding the fact that clovers have not been considered good feed for horses, Professor Merrill of the Utah experiment station has made some feeding tests which seem to convey a different impression, at least in the case of alfalfa. He made six tests of alfalfa hay in comparison with timothy as a feed for horses under varying conditions of work and found that it was easier to maintain their weight with alfalfa than timothy. The general appearance of the horses in each of the six tests was in favor of those fed alfalfa, and no ill effects were noted from extended feeding of it.

The Connecticut experiment station under Professor Graham has been collecting some data relative to the cost of egg production from several experiment stations, and some rather surprising information has been gathered. He finds that under varying conditions the cost of production per dozen has ranged from 8 cents to 18 cents, including the labor involved. Where the poultry had free range the cost per dozen ran as low as 8 cents and from this figure up to 12 cents per dozen on limited range. He concludes from the data received that it is very difficult for a man to run an extensive poultry plant with hens confined and compete with the farmers in egg production.

Dropped the Subject.

"Five thousand dollars for a dog!" he exclaimed as he looked up from his newspaper. "Do you believe any one ever paid any such price, Maria?"

"I'm sure I don't know, James," she returned without stopping her needlework even for a moment. "Does the paper say that much was paid?"

"Yes. There's an article on valuable dogs, and it speaks of one that was sold for $5,000. I don't believe it."

"It may be true, James," she said quietly. "Some of these well bred animals bring fancy prices, and there's no particular reason why the paper should lie about it."

"I know that, Maria. But just think of it—just try to grasp the magnitude of that sum in your weak feminine mind! You don't seem to realize it. Five thousand dollars for a dog! Why, hang it, Maria, that's more than I'm worth!"

"I know it, James, but some are worth more than others."

She went calmly on with her sewing, while he fumed and sputtered for a moment and then dropped the subject, especially the weak feminine mind part of it.

Cosmic Dust.

A particle of dust one-hundred thousanth of an inch in diameter is held in its place in space by the force of gravitation, but a particle smaller than this is pushed outward into space by the weight of the sun's light, because as the particle becomes smaller its surface, which is subject to pressure, becomes greater in proportion to its weight.

The sun's corona, the zodiacal light, the aurora borealis and the comet's tail are all composed of these infinitely minute particles, in some cases white hot and in others merely illuminated by the sun, which are being constantly driven away from the sun by the pressure of its light.

In the case of the aurora borealis there is a movement of the light both away from and toward the sun. This is explained by the theory that the weight of the sun's light presses the particles outward into space for a certain distance and that then a certain number of them cohere together until they have sufficient weight to be attracted toward the sun once more by the force of gravitation.

Rarely Disturbed.

Two spiders who dwelt in different parts of a church chanced to meet together in the aisle one day when out for a constitutional.

"How are you getting on?" said spider No. 1 to spider No. 2.

"Oh, moderately!" was the reply. "I don't feel very comfortable on Sundays. I live in the pulpit under the cushion, and on that day the parson comes and bangs the book and sends his fists on the side, and I have to keep very close or else some day I think he'll hit me. He bangs with such a force that I know he'll squash me to a jelly."

"Oh, you come and live with me!" said his companion. "I'm never troubled. I'm always comfortable and never disturbed from one year's end to the other."

"Indeed!" said the other spider. "And where do you live?"

"Oh, I live in the poorbox!" was the reply.—Pearson's Weekly.

Antiquity of Fishing.

Probably no branch of industry can lay claim to greater antiquity than that of fishing. Its origin would seem to be coeval with the earliest efforts of human ingenuity, for the oldest monuments of antiquity show the fisherman in full possession of the implements of his calling, and even those tribes of savages which have learned neither to keep flocks nor to till the fields are skilled in the fabrication of the hook, the fish spear and the net. The earliest civilization of the eastern Mediterranean was begun with fishing. Sidon, which means "fishery," was originally a fishing village, and its enterprising inhabitants devoted their attention mainly to the collection of a certain kind of mollusks, from which they prepared the famous tyrian purple, prized more highly for the richness and variety of its hues than any other dye known to the ancients.

The Aurora Borealis.

Whatever may be the cause of the aurora borealis, its height does not appear to be limited by the atmosphere. The rays sometimes touch the earth in Scandinavia, coming between the observer and elevated places, but Flogel years ago obtained data showing that a large aurora seen in northern Germany must have had a height of sixty miles and that the rays often rise to 450 miles, their points glowing with red light.

Seeking For Danger.

"I'm going to lick Smith."

"Why?"

"He said I was a horse thief and a liar."

"Did he prove it?"

"No."

"Then let well enough alone and don't get him any madder."—Cleveland Leader.

Imperiled Treasure.

Indignant Wife—That new chauffeur has only just brought the children and me home, and now he's taken the cook out for a spin. Husband—Great heaven! He doesn't half know how to manage a car, and she's the first decent cook we've had in a year.—Brooklyn Life.

Either Way.

"Happiness merely consists of getting the things we want," remarked the wise guy.

"Or of not getting the things we don't want," supplemented the simple mug.—Philadelphia Record.

Passing of the Organ Blower.

"The organ blower is passing. He will soon be, like the armorer, extinct," said a musician. "It's a pity. He was a quaint type.

"Most of my blowers were simple minded old chaps who firmly believed they must suit their blowing to the music. In soft, light passages they blew soft and light. When the crescendos thundered forth they worked frantically, blowing with all their might and main.

"Often a facetious reporter on the local paper would refer to 'the excellent blowing of the organist's assistant, Mr. Bellows.' Then the blower in his vanity would develop all the affectations of a Paderewski or a Sousa. Now he'd blow delicately, a dreamy smile on his lips, his eyes half closed. The music would change to a march, and he'd stamp his foot in time, while up, down, up, down, the old bellows, in time also, would be jerked. At a climax his face would redden, he'd bend to his task and blow so fast and furious that the organ would nearly burst."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Another Case of Faith.

"I wrote a medical friend of mine in London about a curious discovery which I made recently quite by chance, but which I shall never publish to the world through the scientific journals," said a Brooklyn doctor last week.

"Not long ago this friend sent me about fifty little dark colored pellets, and he wrote me that they were a new combination of drugs that he had found particularly good in cases of brain fag. He asked me to try them on my patients and report. During the next month or so I doled out the pellets to several of my patients who came around complaining of tired nerves. All of them said that the medicine did them a lot of good. Yesterday, however, I was going through my office desk and discovered those pellets from London intact in the plain envelope in which I had placed them. A hurried but anxious investigation disclosed that I had been administering to my nerve weary patients some wistaria seed that my wife had gathered, put in a plain envelope and laid inadvertently on my office table."—Exchange.

No Lie After All.

They were telling fish stories, and at last the tall, lank man on the cracker barrel said:

"I went down to the river this morning, and, although the water was high almost to a flood, I took a ten foot pike"—

"Stop there!" exclaimed the fat man with the corncob pipe. "Tell us you took an eight pound trout, and I'll sit idly by, but a ten foot pike—never! Ananias died for less than that."

"I took a ten foot pike pole," continued the unruffled tall, lank man on the cracker barrel, "and in less than five minutes I hooked out a fifteen foot bass"—

"See here! See here!" yelled the man who owned the grocery. "You'll have to go way from here to finish that lie. I hain't got no lightnin' rod on this store yit."

"I hooked out a fifteen foot basswood log," persisted the tall, lank man, "and I want to ask how much you think I kin git for it."

Not Aptly Worded.

An absurdly worded statement of a fact which was not in itself remarkable recently tried the gravity of the listeners. It was on the occasion of the funeral of an elderly woman in a New England town. She had left an old mother, nearly ninety years of age, and an only son who was well on toward fifty.

The services were conducted by a timid young clergyman recently settled over the parish. After praying for many and various things he said:

"And two we especially pray that the Lord will comfort and sustain in their loss and sorrow. One is the orphan, who, although no longer young, is an orphan still and must so continue. The other is the mother, far advanced in years, who has survived her daughter, although considerably her senior."—Youth's Companion.

Physicians In Japan.

Medical students in Japan must have had eleven or twelve years of preliminary training in the lower schools. No one may practice medicine who has been convicted of a crime. All physicians for the first ten years during which they follow their calling must keep full written records of all their cases, and they must not issue boastful advertisements or claim the exclusive right to any healing invention with a secret formula.

The Best Proof.

Little Ted, seven years old, was sent to the bathroom for a "good scrub" before dinner, but returned so quickly that his mother declared he couldn't possibly have washed himself. He replied, "Truly I did, mother, and if you don't believe it you can just go to the bathroom and look at the towel."—Delineator.

Cutting.

Miss Homeleigh—Perhaps you won't believe it, but a strange man tried to kiss me once. Miss Cutting—Really! Well, he'd have been a strange man if he'd tried to kiss you twice.—Illustrated Bits.

A Great Success.

First Young Wife—Do you find it more economical, dear, to do your own cooking? Second Young Wife—Oh, certainly! My husband doesn't eat half so much as he did.—London Punch.

To shock people is often better than to please them. The majority of mankind need the shocking.—Emerson.

What a Poet Writes.

"You never can tell whether poetry is loaded or not," said a Columbia professor descanting upon the muse, "and what a poet writes in the moments of his fine frenzy rolling may be susceptible of changes which would make him curse the pen did he but know whence it pointed. Now, listen to this couplet:

"Help us to save free conscience from the paw
Of hireling wolves whose gospel is their maw.

"It sounds like some kind of a family poem, doesn't it, with paw and maw coming in to make the rhyme? Do you imagine the poet when he wrote the lines ever thought of the parents represented in such a homely way and how the meaning of the whole thing could be changed by changing the meaning of the end words of two lines? Was he a beginner? Oh, no; he was not a beginner. He had written several very classy things. He was John Milton. You remember he wrote 'Paradise Lost' and two or three other pieces of considerable merit, though he never quite got into the 'six best sellers' list, and these two lines I have quoted close his sonnet to Lord Protector Cromwell, written in 1652."—New York Herald.

The Southerner and Corn.

The southerner feeds himself, his pigs and his progeny upon corn. He slept in his frontiersman's cabin upon a mattress made of the husks. Today he contributes some of its pith to the manufacture of gun cotton with which to blow the enemy to Beelzebub and some more of it to the manufacture of cellulose to pack behind the armor of his country's battleships to prevent them from sinking when projectiles pierce their plates. He plants corn as early in the springtime as the season will permit and gets up at dawn to go into the fields and tickle its spreading roots with a double shovel plow. In midwinter he smokes his corncob pipe before a corncob fire. Looking into a bed of glowing embers through a blue haze of the smoke of incense burned to Mondamin, he returns thanks for the cornmeal in the cupboard and dreams happily of the "ros'n ear" of the golden summer to come. His appreciation of the value of Indian corn is high. His affection for it in its various forms is abiding.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Argyll and Longfellow.

The great Duke of Argyll was visiting his son, then governor general of Canada, and met Longfellow in the American poet's ancient colonial mansion at Cambridge, Mass. As they sat together on the veranda the duke persistently asked the names of the various birds he saw and heard singing in the poet's trees as well as of the flowers and bushes growing in his extensive and beautiful garden. Longfellow was neither botanist nor ornithologist and did not know.

"I was surprised to find your Longfellow such an ignorant person," said the duke subsequently to an American acquaintance.

"Indeed! Pray, on what subject?"

"Why, he could not tell me the names of the birds and flowers to be heard and seen in his own garden."

"May I ask how many languages you speak?" the American asked.

"Certainly—but one."

"Mr. Longfellow," was the answer, "speaks six and translates freely from almost all the languages of Europe."

Rise of Russia.

In the history of Europe down to the middle of the eighteenth century Russia is a blank. The foundation of the kingdom was laid by Rurik the Norseman in the ninth century. In the tenth century the Russians were Christianized, adopting the Greek form of Christianity. In the thirteenth century the Russians were completely overrun by the Tartars under Genghis Khan. From the Tartars Russia was delivered by Ivan, who became czar in the time of Elizabeth. It was Peter the Great (1672-1725) who gave Russia for the first time a place in the states system of Europe.—New York American.

The Mistletoe.

The mistletoe is a Druidical contribution to Christmas. It was held in great veneration by the Druids in ancient England, and the cutting of it was attended by sacrificing and feasting. With weird incantations the priest climbed the tree on which the mistletoe grew and cut it away with a knife of purest gold, no base metal being allowed to touch it. As the twigs fell they were received below in a mantle of spotless whiteness.

Modest Greatness.

Reporter—Senator, to what do you chiefly attribute your successful career? Eminent Statesman—Entirely to heredity, young man. I deserve no credit for it whatever. My father had ambition, and my mother had talent, and I happened to inherit both those qualifications.—Chicago Tribune.

From Experience.

Mrs. Enpeck—I learned today that Bob Smith and Mary Jones were secretly married ten months ago. Just think of it! Married nearly a year and nobody the wiser! Mr. Enpeck—Oh, I don't know! I'll bet Smith was a whole lot wiser before he had been married a month.

KEEP WATCH ON ANARCHISTS

"Reds" Have Made Several Attempts in Sweden During the Past Two Weeks to Wreck Electric Cars, Being Successful in Two Cases—Bomb Exploded on the Rails of the Karlsburg Line, but Fortunately No One Is Injured by the Blast.

SWEDEN.

During the past two weeks there have been several attempts on the part of anarchists to wreck the street cars. On one of the northern electric lines in the vicinity of Ropsten road, a big and strong piece of iron had been screwed fast to one of the ties and when an electric car came passing by it was thrown off the track. Fortunately no one was hurt. The same evening out on the Karlsberg line, a small bomb had been placed on the track and when the car passed over it, there was a terrific explosion, but not in this instance either was any one injured. The police are watching matters pretty close and deputies have been placed all along the line and a rigid watch is being kept in all parts of the city where the electric lines are passing through.

Dr. Otto Nordenskiold is another south polar explorer, who has confidence in Dr. Cook and believes that he had reached the pole. Says Dr. Nordenskiold in a recent interview with a prominent Swedish daily: "The report from Rasmussen convinces me that Dr. Cook has reached the pole. I regret that he did not leave his observations and data to the Copenhagen University as soon as he arrived in Copenhagen, for that would have prevented Dr. Peary from making the accusation that they had been manufactured. The claims of Dr. Peary will have no effect on people who are as well acquainted with Dr. Cook as I am. I know him to be an earnest and honest man of research and have all confidence in him."

In Berlin and Paris, there is, as is well known, magnificent ice palaces, where irrespective of weather conditions, people can go and enjoy skating to their heart's content. Now a couple of enterprising Stockholmians are going to put up a similar palace and there is one thing certain that they will be in a position to get ice under fully as favorable conditions as Paris or Berlin. The gentlemen figure on erecting such a building at an expense of 200,000 crowns. It will contain an immense skating rink, where at least 1,000 people can find room to skate at one time. There will be a cafe in connection and the best of music will be furnished for the skaters while they are gliding along the ice.

John Forsell, the eminent Swedish opera singer has now arrived in this country. It is not announced in just what connection Mr. Forsell will appear, but it is thought that he will sign a contract with the Metropolitan Opera company of New York. During the past two months, Mr. Forsell, has been giving series of farewell concerts in Sweden. Mr. Forsell has appeared twice before in the United States and each time he created a very fine impression, on all his audiences. He sang in Minneapolis at the great Swedish saengerfest in 1904, and ever since people all over the northwest have been wanting to hear him again. At any rate, Forsell is considered to be Sweden's greatest baritone.

Frans Svanstrom, paper dealer and manufacturer, died in Stockholm a few days ago, aged seventy-seven years. The deceased started in business in Stockholm in 1844 and has been there ever since. He has been very successful and it is believed that he gave away thousands of crowns to the poor every year, but he never said a word about it to any one, so there is really no way of determining just how much he gave away. Had it not been for many just such good hearted men as he was, the poor people in Stockholm would have had to perish during these troublesome times which have drained the country especially during the past year.

A gymnastic troupe from Stockholm gave an exhibition in St. Petersburg, Oct. 18-20 under the auspices of the Russian Tourist Society. The exhibition was attended by thousands of people and the participants in the exhibition were roundly applauded and received much praise for the St. Petersburg papers. The result of this exhibition may be that the Russian government may officially adopt the Swedish gymnastic system and have it introduced in the schools and universities.

The Emperor and Empress of Russia have presented the Stockholm Yacht club with an immense silver service, which is reported to be one of the finest in the continent. The gift was made as an appreciation for the way in which the club arranged a pleasant visit for them to Sweden last summer.

Every year during the past ten years the public school boards of Stockholm have distributed shoes among poor children on or about Oct. 1. This year it was impossible to do this owing to the big strike. This is only another evidence of the misery that has been brought about by the strike.

The average daily attendance in the Stockholm schools during the month of September was 25,270. There is a slight decrease in the attendance over that of last year, but it amounts to only about 100, a figure that may be exceeded for the present month.

The Chilean government have ordered a complete set of light-house materials from Sweden. The Swedish Dalen system for light houses will be used exclusively after this on the entire Chilean coast, where light houses naturally are much in demand.

NORWAY.

Oline Staven, the seventeen year old girl who two months ago murdered her mother by choking her to death by means of holding a pillow over her face, and afterwards attempted to shield the crime by putting fire to the house, has been sentenced to fifteen years imprisonment. The remarkable thing about it all is that the girl has a splendid education and is an exceptionally bright young woman. She had on several occasions robbed her aunt of considerable sums of money and even purchased books for same. It took a long time for the authorities to discover who had committed the crime and meantime the young girl attended school and the teachers all state that she knew her lessons and that her deportment was the very best.

While making excavations under the old German church in Bergen recently, there were found the walls of the old St. Peters church and a number of corpses which were in a petrified condition. The corpse of a child was found, which was remarkably well preserved and had evidently been very carefully embalmed. There were also found numerous samples of pottery from the early times and the excavators have only begun their work. Much interest attaches to these excavations and a number of Christiania professors are coming to Bergen to study the specimens. They will all be placed in the museum in Bergen.

"Verdens Gang" wonders if it would not be a good idea to use rein deer in future polar explorations. They eat less than a dog, are several times as strong and can stand the cold better than other animals. The paper suggests that the next attempt to reach the pole should be with rein deer, instead of dogs. As interests in polar explorations are quickening in these days, it is very possible that some one will try the scheme.

A large floating derrick is under course of construction at Fredrikstad. The frame is to be 109 by 52 feet and the apparatus is to have a depth of 13 feet and 9 inches. There will be two different hoists the larger one of which will be strong enough to raise a load of 200 tons. This will be the largest floating derrick ever constructed.

Kristoffer Janssen is giving a series of lectures in the coast towns this fall. His subject is "Peer Gynt," also "Hans Nielsen Hauge" and "Ameline Skram" are included in his course. He is an able lecturer and has drawn large audiences wherever he has appeared.

There is a majority of the committee on military affairs that are ready and in favor of building a new cruiser at the Horten navy yards. The vessel is to be a duplicate of "Haraal Haargagre," and will cost, when completed, $1,600,000.

Bergen has this year over 12,500 school children. There are seven public schools in the city at present and they are considered the best in the country.

Consul W. Wilhelmsen of Tonsberg has donated 10,000 crowns each to the Tonsberg and Gamlehjem orphanages.

Bjornson is again reported better and his physicians are becoming more and more hopeful for his recovery.

DENMARK.

A young Norwegian arrived in Copenhagen the other day and created quite a demonstration by claiming that he was possessed of a sixth sense and that he was able to tell where things were hidden, etc. He is being closely watched however, and if his "sixth sense" will not amount to any more than that boy Flottums did, why there is nothing doing. Still he is the object of much curious attention at present. He has however done wonderful things. A week ago last Tuesday, he steered blindfolded a steamer into the harbor of Copenhagen which is a difficult thing to do for even a pilot with two eyes and with years of experience. A number of Danish specialists were present on this occasion, all of them being men of repute who have been eye, ear and throat specialists in the city for years and they all agree that the young man is possessed of a wonderful gift, which baffles them entirely.

King Frederick has now officially accepted the resignation of premier Christensen. The direct cause of Christensen's resignation was the almost unanimous demand for his resignation owing to his apparent connection with the Alberti scandals. While Christensen was not accused of anything direct, it is believed that he in a measure attempted to shield Alberti. At any rate, there was a public demonstration against him which served to make his position a most delicate one. His successor has as yet not been named.

The Danish government's polar yacht "Godthaab" arrived a week ago last Tuesday at Copenhagen from Greenland. Its commander, Captain Schoubye, was the first white man who Dr. Cook encountered on his return from the north pole. The captain was at first a little doubtful if Dr. Cook had really been to the pole, but after looking over his data and journal he became convinced that it was so.

Knud Rasmussen cabled his father in Copenhagen from Greenland the other day that he would arrive in the Danish capital on or about Nov. 1 and that he would bring conclusive proof that Dr. Cook had been at the north pole.

FOREIGN NEWS.

General Chamorros' Nicaraguan insurgent forces fought an engagement with 1,000 of President Zelaya's troops at a point below Boca San Carlos, on the San Juan river. The revolutionists won a decisive victory, 100 of the government troops being killed and 300 wounded. General Chamorros' losses were slight.

Lieutenant General de Luque, minister of war in the new Spanish cabinet, confirmed in an interview a report that the government had decided not to push further the Moroccan campaign. From now on, the minister of war said, the work of the army would be that of pacification and not of domination.

Some storm records were broken in the recent typhoon which crossed Northern Luzon and the Benguet mountains, in the Philippines. Eighteen inches of rain fell in nine hours and twenty-six inches fell in the twenty-four hours the storm lasted. The Bued river rose sixty feet.

Prince Ito, the famous Japanese statesman, was assassinated by a Korean at Harbin, Manchuria, where he had gone for the purpose of conducting negotiations for the Russian railway lines in Northern Manchuria. Prince Ito was seventy-six years of age.

A score of miners were killed by an explosion in the Rhymney Iron company's colliery in Glamorganshire, Wales. Manager Bowen and two companions, who attempted a rescue, were themselves overcome by the afterdamp and perished.

An enormous waterspout coming swiftly in from the sea caused serious damage at Genoa, Italy. Many houses in the vicinity of the Piazza del Popolo were unroofed. A large number of persons were injured, but no one was killed.

Hundreds of houses were washed away, thousands of cattle drowned and immense damage done by a flood in the state of Tabasco, Mex. Two persons are known to have perished, but the loss of life is expected to be much heavier.

The mutiny in the Greek navy is at an end. The government has taken formal possession of the arsenal, the leaders surrendering. The ringleaders have been ordered into solitary confinement and will be courtmartialed.

One thousand and thirty-eight persons were condemned to death in European Russia during the first nine months of the present year and 447 of them were executed.

Vital statistics for the first six months of the present year show an excess of deaths over births in France of 28,205. In 1908 the excess of deaths was 20,508.

Senor Dr. Don Radolfo Espinosa, minister from Nicaragua to the United States, has resigned.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

With the expressed opinion that the present policy of the United States in the Far East is being shaped solely in the interest of a group of Wall street financiers and that no possible benefit to the nation at large can result from it Henry George, Jr., son of the great single taxer and publicist, declared that trouble is certain to result which will end in the American navy and army being called on to fight the private battles of the American monied interests under the guise of "upholding American honor."

Horses, like men, should have regular work to keep them in best condition and to enable them to properly digest and assimilate their rations. If there is not work for the horses to do they should be turned into a paddock, where they can get the exercise needed. Were more care exercised in this particular a good deal of veterinary service could be dispensed with.

Smoking a wound in foot or hand caused by rake or rusty nail with a burning woolen cloth for twenty minutes is said to be an effective means of reducing pain and inflammation and preventing the development of tetanus or lockjaw. The remedy has the merit of being inexpensive and easily applied and, considering the claims made for it, should be well worth trying.

Not "How much money did he leave?" but "How much character did he take with him?" as evidenced in his conduct as father, husband, neighbor and friend, is the query that should be oftener asked when a citizen closes his earthly account. The teaching of the best religions of the world points to the fact that it is not his possessions, but the man, that will determine his rating in the world to be.

The sod cover for an orchard is a very convenient one at harvest time in the matter of cleanliness in the handling of the fruit, but in most sections it is detrimental to the best growth of the trees and the development of the fruit. Much can be done for orchards in sod that have not been doing well by merely breaking up this sod covering and giving clean cultivation, which makes possible a better circulation of both moisture and air in the soil.

CONDUCTOR HIT WITH BRICK

St. Paul Man Is Probably Fatally Injured.

A. Nelson, a street car conductor, whose home is at St. Paul, is at St. Mary's hospital at Minneapolis in a critical condition as the result of an assault which occurred in the latter city. Four men were taken to the Minneapolis Central station suspected of being his assailants.

According to the story so far obtained by the police four men boarded the Snelling-Minnehaha car at Lake street. All were noisy and an altercation took place between them and the conductor when the latter tried to collect the fares. When one of the passengers noticed that serious trouble was threatened he notified the motorman, S. E. Chaffen. By the time he came to the relief of the conductor the four men had been ejected and Nelson was just in the act of giving two bells as a signal for the car to proceed.

Before the motorman could get back to his post a brick was hurled by one of the men. It struck Nelson between the eyes and he was hurled against the side of the rear platform and sank to the floor unconscious.

CHARLES H. GRASTY RETIRES

Sells Interest in St. Paul Pioneer Press and Dispatch.

The following announcement signed by Charles H. Grasty appears in the St. Paul Dispatch:

"I have sold to George Thompson the stock in the Dispatch Printing company purchased from him by my associates and myself last November and my active connection with the company has ceased. Mr. Thompson thus becomes the sole owner of the Dispatch and Pioneer Press. While I have been the active head of the Dispatch Printing company since November of last year Mr. Thompson and I have been in the fullest accord and the only public significance of my sale to him is that he will henceforth personally assume the management of the Dispatch and Pioneer Press."

ENGINE HITS AN AUTOMOBILE

Mayor Pogue of Bemidji, Minn., One of the Injured.

While Mayor J. P. Pogue of Bemidji, G. Meyer of St. Paul, C. Eppelin, T. R. Symons of Bemidji, local manager for the Minneapolis Brewing company, and a woman were crossing the railroad track at Wilton, the automobile in which the party was riding was struck by a freight engine and the entire party hurled into the air.

The automobile was demolished and Pogue and Symons were lodged on the pilot of the engine.

Mayor Pogue sustained a broken hip and his back and side was severely strained. Symons was also injured in the hip and back and was unable to move.

ROAMED WOODS FOR MONTHS

Demented Homesteader Captured by Authorities.

Herman Carlson, a wild man, who has roamed the woods on the Mesaba range since last spring, subsisting on whatever he could pick up, was captured near Chisholm and landed in the county jail at Duluth to be tried by a commission in lunacy.

Carlson was encrusted from head to foot with dirt. He is gaunt and hollow eyed. He resented the removal of his garments and the bath he was forced to take.

Carlson once had a claim on the range and it is supposed that he became mentally unbalanced through long solitude. He is forty years old.

BURGLARS WRECK GROCERY

Blow Safe in Fashionable Residence District of Minneapolis.

The safe in the Kenwood grocery store, in the aristocratic Kenwood Park residence district of Minneapolis, was blown open by unknown men and $500 in cash stolen. The cash register in the store also was robbed.

The men entered the store through a rear door, which they broke open with jimmies. It is supposed they rifled the cash register first and then drilled a hole in the door of the store safe and inserted a charge of nitroglycerin.

The explosion partly wrecked the store and broke windows in several houses in the neighborhood.

ACCIDENT IS A MYSTERY

Two Farmers Meet Death on Railway Tracks.

Nieberg Nielsen was found dead and Nicholas Brna fatally injured on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railway tracks by the crew of a passenger train on the Southern Minnesota division near Money Creek.

An obstruction was noticed on the track and the train was brought to a stop. Both men were badly mangled and the survivor was too far gone to explain the cause of the accident. It is supposed the men, who were farmers living in the vicinity, were struck by a train ahead of the passenger.

Quarter of a Million Loss.

Fire which started in the basement of the Columbian block at Brainerd destroyed that building, the Odd Fellows' block, in which the postoffice was located; the Ransford hotel, the Wise block, Jamieson's saloon and two frame buildings. The total loss is about $250,000.

THE STATE RESTS

Concludes Its Case in Arbogast Trial at St. Paul.

LOUISE DOES NOT TESTIFY

Daughter Not Allowed on Stand for Prosecution.

"I was willing to tell all I know," said Louise Arbogast to County Attorney O'Brien after she had refused to testify on the stand when she was called as a witness against her mother, who has been on trial at St. Paul for the murder of her husband Louis Arbogast, the second week in May.

The refusal of Louise to testify against her mother was a hard blow to the state. She insisted on her rights as an indicted person and consequently could not be compelled to testify. She is charged with the murder of her father, but is at liberty under a $20,000 bond.

Louise was the last witness called by the county attorney, and when she refused to testify Mr. O'Brien announced "the state rests."

While the state has called many witnesses in an effort to prove its charge against Mrs. Arbogast no evidence directly connecting her with the crime has been brought out and no motive has been shown.

UNKNOWN TRAMP SUSPECTED

Two Men Killed and a Third Seriously Wounded.

A shotgun, a knife and gallon of clear alcohol caused two deaths, a perhaps fatal stabbing and one fugitive from justice in a small hut on the edge of Cannon lake, several miles west of Faribault.

Thomas Murray and Arthur La Rose have been living in the hut and spent their time fishing. Two unknown tramps have also been staying with them for several weeks. They secured a gallon of clear alcohol and, with a number of other fishermen, spent the night drinking. After the neighboring fishermen had left for their shacks, leaving the four occupants to themselves, a row started.

One of the strangers with a razor slashed La Rose in the face, injuring him seriously. La Rose made his escape and managed to reach a farmer's barn, where he was found later in a serious condition.

The tramp doing the cutting was whipped by the other two men, left the hut, went to a neighboring fisherman and borrowed his gun. He returned to the scene and shot his tramp partner and Murray, the owner of the shack.

WOMAN INSTANTLY KILLED

Her Husband Fatally Injured by a Train.

Mrs. Walter McNallan, seventy years old, of Kellogg, was cut in two and instantly killed, and her husband is dying, following an unsuccessful attempt to cross the St. Paul railroad tracks at Lake City before the east-bound passenger train.

They had been spending the day in the city on business and were intending to take the train that killed them to their home. The train was pulling into the station four minutes ahead of time.

In crossing the tracks before the oncoming locomotive Mrs. McNallan stumbled and fell. Mr. McNallan stopped to assist her. The engine was upon them immediately. The wheels passed over Mrs. McNallan's body and cut her in two. The pilot hit Mr. McNallan and threw him a considerable distance, from which he sustained internal injuries and fractures.

POURED INTO THE STREET

Ten Barrels of Whisky Seized on White Earth Reservation.

Special Deputy United States Marshal Larson and three Indian policemen descended onto the village of Calloway, within the boundary of White Earth reservation, and discovered ten barrels of whisky stored in an old warehouse.

The heads of the barrels were knocked in and the liquor poured out into the street. The whisky was the property of J. H. Quinlan, a former reservation saloonkeeper, and was valued at $1,500.

WOUNDED DOCTOR IN COURT

Absolutely Refuses to Prosecute Woman Who Shot Him.

Pale and emaciated from his wounds and sickness Dr. George M. Doran of St. Paul risked his health to save his wife further annoyance and was brought into police court in a cab and assisted into the courtroom.

Dr. Doran told Judge J. W. Finehout that he absolutely would not prosecute his wife and as the principal witness in the shooting affray refused to make a complaint. Judge Finehout said he would dismiss the case.

Car Inspector Killed.

While performing his duties as car inspector in the Milwaukee yards at Minneapolis Andrew Bjorklund, forty-five years old, was caught between two cars and so badly crushed that he died a short time afterward.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Under the ruling of the attorney general and the courts that an inheritance tax is due the state, not only on property transferred by death but on gifts made before death, the widow of Thomas Lowry, the Minneapolis street car magnate, will pay to the state $41,216 as the 5 per cent tax upon $824,325 transferred to her some time before Mr. Lowry died.

The Minnesota state supreme court has upheld the authority of the state legislature to pass laws providing for the inspection of animals brought into the state. In a decision the court says that the inspection law does not violate the provision of the United States Constitution vesting in congress the power to regulate commerce among the several states.

The annual election of the Minnesota Educational association concluded with the following result: President, E. M. Phillips, Albert Lea; secretary, John M. Guise, St. Paul. W. F. Webster, Minneapolis, the retiring president, becomes vice president under the rules. F. J. Sperry of Mankato, the treasurer, holds over.

Michael Odland of Holyoke, Colo., has purchased the W. H. Hotchkiss farm of about 150 acres, on the eastern edge of Fergus Falls, for $16,000. The farm has excellent buildings and the price, which is about $110 an acre, is the highest ever paid for farming land in that vicinity.

Minnesota will be officially represented in the National Farm Lands congress in Chicago Nov. 16 by twenty-four delegates appointed by Governor Adolph O. Eberhart. Most of the delegates are practical farmers and are men who have achieved substantial success.

The poultry and egg product of Minnesota is valued at $27,000,000 for the current year. Only five other products are produced in this state in larger quantity, namely: Live stock, $100,000,000; wheat, $94,000,000; corn, $50,000,000; dairy products, $42,000,000; oats, $36,800,000.

The Northern Pacific road has begun to assemble structural material in the vicinity of Northtown Junction for the new Northern Pacific-Great Northern cutoff, which is to be an elevated air line from Northtown Junction into the Union station at Minneapolis.

State Treasurer C. C. Dinehart has paid out to county treasurers $498,482 of special state aid to high and graded schools. All of this had to be borrowed temporarily from banks and banks outside the Twin Cities furnished $100,000 of the amount.

A warning against too low rates for life insurance by fraternal orders is contained in the annual report of Insurance Commissioner J. A. Hartigan.

Minnesota was awarded the W. B. George silver loving cup prize for the largest delegation at the dry farming congress at Billings, Mont.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

C. A. Stay of Lester Prairie, a brakeman, died at Litchfield as the result of injuries. While looking out of the cab window, watching the rear end of the train, the back of his head was struck by the semaphore. He was taken to a hospital at Litchfield, where he died from concussion of the brain.

An unknown man was killed in the Great Northern Mississippi street yards at St. Paul when he was run down and horribly mangled by a train. His left leg was severed at the hip and his left arm and skull were crushed.

Mrs. Joseph La France, wife of a Northern Pacific engineer, died at a hospital at East Grand Forks from blood poisoning, resulting from mere scratch of a pimple on her face several weeks ago.

Julia Olson, twenty years old, committed suicide at Minneapolis by taking carbolic acid. In a note explaining the act she said "she loved a man better than her life and he led her to the bad."

Michael Mickel, aged five years, was fatally injured by a freight train in the Omaha yards at Duluth. He was chasing birds and in his excitement got under the wheels.

Ambrose Colliton, twenty-five years old, whose back was broken when he fell down stairs in a Minneapolis rooming house June 28, is well on the way to recovery.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Charles D. Gendes, a prominent attorney of Mankato, hastily summoned a physician by telephone. When the physician arrived at Gendes' office he found the lawyer dead from tuberculosis. He was forty five years old.

Henry R. Baker, Ph. D., for more than twenty-five years connected with the St. Paul public schools, is dead at St. Anthony Park, aged sixty four years.

James R. Rochford, a resident of St. Paul for half a century and one of the pioneer business men of the city, is dead at the age of seventy-nine years.

Albert J. Schweizer, president of the St. Paul board of fire commissioners and manager of the Hamm Brewing company, is dead at St. Paul, aged fifty.

Andrew J. Cleland, eighty-eight years old, for many years a resident of Minnesota, is dead at Minneapolis.

No Case on Record.

There is no case on record of a cough or cold resulting in pneumonia or consumption after Foley's Honey and Tar has been taken, as it will stop your cough and cure your cold quickly. Refuse any but the genuine Foley's Honey and Tar in a yellow package. Contains no opiates and is safe and sure. A. Bjorkhoel.

Not Much Damage Done.

Halloween was not celebrated by the kids of the city in as boisterous or destructive a manner as they have in past years. Outside a few overturned outhouses and a few torn up fences and doorsteps no damage was done. Owing to the fact that the 31st fell on Sunday the boys were a little premature in their tricks and began to celebrate last Saturday night.

A Card.

This is to certify that all druggists are authorized to refund your money if Foley's Honey and Tar fails to cure your cough or cold. It stops the cold, heals the lungs and prevents serious results from a cold, prevents pneumonia and consumption. Contains no opiates and is safe and sure. Refuse substitutes. The genuine is in a yellow package. A. Bjorkhoel.

Mrs. Louie Hite, 428 Outlen St., Dansville, Ill., writes Oct. 1st: "Foley's Kidney Pills started me on the road to health. I was treated by four doctors and took other kidney remedies but grew worse, and was unable to do my housework, and the doctor told me I could live only from two to six months. I am now so much better that I do all of my own work, and I shall be very glad to tell anyone afflicted kidney or bladder trouble the good results I received from taking Foley's Kidney pills." Commence today and be well. Do not risk having Bright's disease or Diabetes. A. Bjorkhoel.

Farmers In No Rush.

Elevator men throughout the country are still complaining that grain is coming onto the market very slowly. The farmers are doing the wise thing in holding their grain whenever possible. There can be no doubt but that the practice which has been followed in the past years of rushing the grain to market in the early fall has been the most important factor in keeping prices down to the point where grain growing was unprofit. There is a science in marketing farm produce as well as in its production and farmers, in order to be successful, must study both.

Dorris Tarrant Dead.

Dorris Tarrant, the ten year old adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Tarrant, died last Thursday of typhoid fever after a long illness. The funeral services were held Saturday morning. Dorris was an exceptionally bright little girl and her untimely death is mourned by all who knew her.

Two Large Potatoes.

There is on exhibit in Daniel Shaw's real estate office two potatoes raised by Mr. Watchman, who resides on the old Langseth farm north of town. Each of the potatoes weigh three pounds and are sound and well formed.

Minnesota in the Lead.

Minnesota had the best yield per acre of any state in the Union in rye and hay and the second best in wheat for the year just closed. These are facts taken from figures just compiled by George Walsh, immigration commissioner from the government report. Minnesota's wheat crop is figured at 94,562,000 bushels, an average of 16.5 bu. per acre. Wisconsin was the only state having a larger yield than Minnesota. North Dakota's average was 13.7; the average of Iowa was 14.71 and South Dakota and Nebraska had an average of about 14 bu.

THE NEW YORK WAY.

The New York city board of health has recently inaugurated a vigorous warfare on the common housefly as a prolific spreader of disease. Among the more important recommendations to the public whose co-operation is asked in the campaign of extermination are the following: Keep flies away from the sick and kill those appearing in the sickroom; do not allow decaying material to accumulate near the premises; cover piles that do accumulate with lime or kerosene; keep receptacles containing garbage covered and the contents sprinkled with lime or kerosene; keep all stable manure screened in pit or vault or sprinkled with lime and kerosene; pour kerosene into the drains; burn or bury all table refuse and screen all windows and doors, especially in the kitchen and dining room. The same instructions give the following as the most effective method of killing flies: Place in plates or saucers about the house a weak solution of formaldehyde in water (two teaspoonfuls to the pint). It has no offensive smell, is fatal to disease germs and is practically nonpoisonous except to insects. The youngsters could drink a saucerful of this without suffering serious inconvenience, and enough formaldehyde could be bought for 10 cents to last all summer.

A SANER ATTITUDE.

One of the hopeful aspects of the campaign which is being waged along the line of a conservation of our country's natural sources is the remarkable change which has taken place in the attitude of the lumbermen of the north and west toward the aims and work of Gifford Pinchot, chief of the forest service bureau. But a short two or three years ago they viewed and styled him as a well meaning but enthusiastic idealist who had a whole lot of notions that wouldn't dovetail in with the cold dollar and cents considerations which were uppermost in their minds. But now that he has succeeded in demonstrating to them that the only thing he is after is such administration of the forests as will give them a maximum usefulness and make them a perpetual source of revenue they are unstinted in their praise of him as their chief benefactor. As a result they are co-operating with him in every way possible, including adequate measures for the fighting of forest fires, the cutting of timber by selection and the protecting of the seedling conifers, as well as the introduction of methods of preserving wood and timber which will add greatly to their life and usefulness. This change of attitude is most wholesome and bodes well for the coming years.

BUYING UNSIGHT.

There are a number of fruit ranch promotion schemes in several sections of the west which the cautious investor would do well to investigate thoroughly before wasting his money on them. We refer to tracts which are being developed by men none too scrupulous and advertised as "ready to bear" at the end of five years, when inspection of the tracts reveals the sorry fact that not only were poor and cheap trees set out to begin with, but they have not been properly pruned or cultivated during the five year period. Before investing in any such fruit ranches the prospective buyer should not only inspect first hand the condition of the tract which is later to be his at from $300 to $500 per acre, but should inquire with even greater pains into the financial standing and reputation for integrity which the men backing the scheme have with bankers and other conservative and reliable people in the community. If a fellow has his senses with him he would not become engaged to a woman a thousand miles away without seeing her or buy a horse unsight on a stranger's recommendation. He should use as much judgment in buying a fruit ranch.

The no breakfast fad is commendable as a fat reducer if the one practicing the self denial doesn't eat just that much more at dinner time.

The art of cheesemaking is said to date back to 350 B. C., but notwithstanding 2,250 years' experience there's altogether too much inferior stuff put on the market.

If the boys and girls would rather be over at Neighbor Smith's or somewhere else than at home it is fair to assume that the home is not as attractive a place as it might be, and something ought to be done to give it some drawing force.

It is a matter of regret that the poison ivy and poison oak, both shrubs of attractive leaf form and marvelously beautiful coloring, cannot be handled with impunity and plucked to add beauty to autumn decorations of the home. But they add their brilliant touch of color to copse or roadside hedge and in this perform a mission.

It is not the boy or girl in school today who is doing as little as possible, and that in a shabby and listless way, who is going to be heard from twenty years hence, but rather the student who does the task assigned in the most thorough manner and, besides, is all the time seeking to find out a little more about a subject than the lesson contains.

According to the bulletin issued by the government crop reporting board, the condition of the cotton crop on Aug. 25 was 63.7 per cent of a normal crop as compared with 71.9 on July 25, 1909, and 76.1 on Aug. 25, 1908. Thus is briefly described in official language the heavy damage done the cotton crop by the July and August drought.

Instead of trying to get rid of extra flesh—in the usual advertisement called "adipose tissue"—by drugging the system with anti-fat dopes the sensible person will adopt a simpler and less expensive remedy—eat half as much food and perform twice as much physical labor. This will usually be found effective in reducing the most obstinate cases.

Running exclusively to one line has drawbacks as well as advantages in agricultural pursuits as well as in some other vocations. The raising of diversified crops may not yield as large financial returns as a single line under specially favorable conditions for the latter, but in a series of years the average returns from diversified crops will be larger, while if conditions are unfavorable the farmer will lose only part of the eggs in his basket.

Nature intended that the cow in her primal state should give just enough milk to suckle the calf at her side until it reached an age when it had acquired a taste as well as a capacity for digesting other forms of food. Any cow of later day whose calf is allowed to run with her tends to deteriorate in the matter of milk production until she reaches the above standard. On this account the practice should be discouraged with any animal that has capacity for dairy purposes.

One of the interesting sights to the visitor at Miles City, Mont., is the horse sale, which is held every two or three months. During the course of the year 50,000 horses change hands at these sales, while the type of horses disposed of varies from the absolutely wild yearling cayuse, which has not known bridle or saddle and very likely has never seen a cowboy to know who he was, which sells for $20, to the pure bred draft or coach horse, which sells from $150 and up.

One of the manual training courses lately introduced into the high schools in the famous Wenatchee fruit valley in Washington aims to instruct both boys and girls in the latest and most scientific methods of packing apples. They are quick to pick the work up and on passing a satisfactory examination at the end of the course of instruction are given certificates of efficiency. Not only do the boys and girls enjoy this course, but it fits them for practical work at harvest time, when one of the biggest problems that the ranch owner has on his hands is the question of help. The idea ought to take root in other places.

The ginseng plant is an interesting one apart from the high value which is placed on the medicinal properties of its roots by the Chinese, who buy most of that produced in this country. The natural home of the herb is the moist, shady wood lot, where no direct rays of the sun strike the carpet of decaying leaves and where domestic animals do not browse or tramp. The plant is a perennial in habit, the stalk, which is from eight to fourteen inches high, dying down in the fall. This bears three divided leaves, which have a close resemblance to those of the hickory seedling. The plant bears a cluster of small bluish flowers, which produce bright red two-seed berries in the fall about the size of peas. Roots which have a commercial value are produced on plants two years old and more. The dried roots are said to sell from $5 to $7 a pound and the berries from 50 to 60 cents per dozen. If reports are to be credited, good money is made raising ginseng commercially under artificial shade, but it is the few who succeed rather than the many.

YOUNG GIRL IS SHOT

Serious Halloween Accident That Happended Up North of Here Last Week.

Man Fired a Rifle Shot Into a Crowd of Youngsters With Serious Results.

Roseau Region:—While disporting themselves halloween a group of young girls at Pitt, a station east of Roosevelt, entered the yard of one Mr. Thompson, amused themselves by holding jack o' lanterns to the window of his house and otherwise played innocently about his house.

Without warning, Mr. Thompson appeared in the door and fired a rifle into the crowd of youngsters. The bullet struck Miss Hazel Ferrier, about 16 years old, in the shoulder, causing a frightful wound from which it is feared she will die. Miss Hazel is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Ferrier, well known in Roseau.

It seems that this man Thompson had got married a few days previously to the sad occurrence, and having told that a party of young men intended to charivari him and believeing the crowd there for that purpose, he flew into a rage and shot. When the news spread, violence was about to be done with him, the authorities interceded and succeeded in getting him safely lodged in the Bemidji jail, where he will be held until the outcome with Miss Ferrier is known.

Rival Threshers.

Reports from out west of town are to the effect that threshermen are finding all kinds of bolts, matches and other articles in the grain bundles calculated to wreck operations. It is thought to be the work of rival threshermen, and considerable care is being taken. The separator of Ole J. Melbuse while threshing on the Erickson farm last week was quite badly wrecked.

Getting Ready For the Opening.

At a meeting of the city council held last week, Mayor Hamre, City Attorney Halvorson and Capt. Wistie were given authority to purchase scenery for the stage in the new auditorium now in course of construction and also to engage some theatrical company for the opening attraction. The new auditorium is going to be one of the finest buildings in the Northwest and the contractors expect to have it completed in February.

Married Yesterday.

Yesterday at the home of the bride's parents in the town of Sanders, occurred the marriage of Miss Emma Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nels K. Anderson, to Sigrud Myron, of the town of Norden, and a son of Amond Myron. Both are well known and popular young people and the News extends congratulations.

Fred Sollie, one of the first settlers in the town of Goodridge and who still owns a quarter section in that township, was in the city last week. He is at present residing upon a farm near Hayfield but expects to remove here in the near future.

Former Resident of This City to Answer Charges.

Bemidji Pioneer: Chris Rogers, of Shotley, who was in the city today, has been served with notice to appear at a special meeting of the board of county commissioners which will be held in this city on Tuesday, November 16, and answer to complaints against him, charging him with having violated the state law with relation to furnishing liquor to Indians.

One of the charges is that he has "sold and disposed of liquor to persons of Indian blood habitually since he has carried on a retail liquor business."

Another complaint charges Mr. Rogers with having, in October, 1909, supplied two Indians with bottles of liquor, thru the medium of one Ole Miller, and supplied one Indian thru the medium of one Arthur Haines.

Mr. Rogers stoutly maintains that he has never at any time sold liquor to Indians, and that he never allows them in his saloon at Shotley, under any pretense and he will be here to fight the charges before the board Nov. 16.

Some Fine Corn.

Daniel Shaw has in his office six ears of corn grown in the town of Terrebonne, Red Lake County, that will compare very favorably with any corn grown in this state or Iowa. If there is any as good or better raised in Red Lake or Marshall county he wants to know it and offers a prize of $3 to any farmer that will bring him six ears of corn that will equal the six ears he now has in his office.

Elected Officers.

At a business meeting of the Antlers Club held last Wednesday evening the following officers were elected W. A. Wyman, Pres. H. G. Hieber Vice Pres. W. H. Ackre Sec. W. W. Prichard Jr. Tres. Math Barzen; T. L. Melgaard and P. W. Mabey were elected Trustees.

Disposed of His Interests.

R. A. Kromer last week disposed of his interest in the East Side Grocery to his partner, W. H. Schmitt, who will conduct the business in the future. Mr. Kromer has accepted a position at the Soo roundhouse and could not devote any time to the business.

TRAPPERS TOO EARLY

Two Men From East Valley Will Spend Thirty Days in the County Jail.

Were Trapping Out of Season and Did Not Have Money to Pay a Fine.

Game Warden William Munch, of Crookston, was in the city last Friday, having with him W. M. Graves and Ed Albertson, of East Valley township, who are charged with violating the game laws in that they trapped out of season. The men were each fined $30 and costs by Judge Grear, of Middle River, and being unable to pay the fine they were sentenced to a term of thirty days in the Marshall county jail at Warren.

Game Warden Munch also confiscated the hunting outfit of the men which consisted of a tent, two guns, three axes, stove cooking utensils, bedding, etc., and 116 furs.

Something of a controversy has arisen among local trappers as to what is the lawful time in which muskrat, mink and other fur bearing animals may be trapped in pursuance to the state law regulating the open season for those animals.

Last winter the legislature adopted two laws relative to the this matter. One of them known as "Chapter 317—H. F. No. 518," was approved April 21, 1909. The other, "Chapter 412—S. F. No. 331," was approved April 22, 1909.

"H. F. No. 518" provides no one shall take, catch or kill, any mink, muskrat or racoon between the first day of May and the first day of November, following.

"S. F. No. 321" provides that no person shall catch, take or kill beaver at any time, or mink or muskrat between the 15th day April and the 15th day of November following; and that no person shall molest, injure or destroy the muskrat house at any time.

The two sections clearly conflict as to the date of the open season for fur-bearing animals, one giving the date as November 1st, the other as November 15th.

Carlos Avery, executive agent for the State Game & Fish Commission, was requested to give a ruling as to which was the proper date—Nov. 1 or Nov. 15—for the opening of the trapping season.

Mr. Avery replied that the attorney general had ruled that the bill approved April 22, 1909, making the open season for trapping begin November 15, was the law which governed.

A bill was passed at the last session of the legislature which makes it imperative that any person not a resident of of the state be prohibited from trapping mink, muskrat, otter and beaver unless he shall first procure a license therefor from the State Game & Fish commission, the license fee being $10.

Rollis' Annual Prairie Fire.

Another destructive prarie fire is to be recorded. This is a yearly occurrence and the fire is nearly started at about the same place, and it is believed by the same person. These yearly fires have destroyed more than $2,000 worth of property in the last six years. It seems strange that this should be allowed to occur year after year in the face of such stringent laws, which make it a criminal offence, and it is hoped that sufficient proof can be brought to have the guilty punished. Such fires are a menace to the property of the whole neighborhood and the persons who start them cannot but know this. The last fire destroyed two stacks of hay for John Elliots, one large stack for R. A. Elwick and the house and barn on the Helen Crummie place, and we don't know how much for others.—Rollis Correspondence in Middle River Pioneer.

Lots of Cows in Red Lake County.

The personal property assessment list of Red Lake Co. reveals a significant fact regarding the dairy industry in Red Lake county. The remarkable development of this industry in recent years shows that in this branch of farming alone there is a large investment and there is no doubt that the investment pays greater returns than any like amount invested in any other undertaking on the farm.

The personal property assessment shows that there are 11,028 cows in Red Lake county. Nothing could indicate more clearly than these figures the remarkable growth of the dairy industry in Red Lake county.

Lambert is the banner town of the county, having 679 cows. Terrebonne is a close second with 650 cows. Rocksbury has 625 and Equality 547.

C. J. and D. N. Winton, of Minneapolis, heavy stock holders in the Thief River Falls Lumber company and Walter S. Roseberry, sales manager, were up from Minneapolis last Saturday attending to business matters.

Grand Forks, N. D., Nov. 6.—Important changes in the corporation organization of the Grand Forks college became effective at a meeting of the board of trustees held Wednesday in this city.

They included the retirement of Rev. J. Strand of Grand Forks from the position of president of the corporation and the taking up of that work by Vice President I. T. Aastad of Thief River Falls, Minn.; also the retirement of Rev. Strand from the board of directors and the election of H. C. Olson to fill the vacancy.

These important changes in the college organization are made necessary by the decision of Rev. Strand to accept a call from Bowman N. D., which work he will take up very soon. He has been pastor of the First Lutheran church in Grand Forks and also leaves that work in favor of Rev. H. Normann, principal of the college.

Accidentally Shot.

While out practicing target shooting on Sunday, Ed Ashley, traveling salesman for the Marshall-Wells Hardware company, was accidentally shot through the leg. The wound was painful, but not serious and Mr. Ashley was able to resume his duties on the road Monday.

County Commissioners.

At the meeting of the county commissioners held last Saturday, very little busines was transacted. Two bills were presented for the building of the court house. One was by M. Brady for $350 for excavation and one for $340 by August Morin for removal of buildings. As County Attorney Michelet refused to O. K. their bills, the Commissioners did not allow them and it is quite likely that no more work upon the building will be done for some time.

Proceedings Commenced.

Proceedings to foreclose the chattle mortgage on the Red Lake River Transportation company's boat were instituted last week. The debts against the boat amount to nearly $1,000 and, a meeting of the stockholders will be held next Sunday at Kratka to consider the matter. It is understood that A. M. Arpin is willing to buy the boat if it can be secured at a reasonable price, but if Mr. Arpin purchases the boat he will throw out the steam engines and replace them with gasoline engines. In case Mr. Arpin does not secure the boat he will build a new one next spring as he has a large amount of coal, etc., to haul up river next spring to his ditching machines.

A Correction.

In the advertisement of S. H. Sharbach which appears upon the fourth page of this issue, the printer made a mistake by stating that "Coweads coffee is to be served." It should have been Conrad's coffee. This the coffee sold in Northern Minnesota by John J. Kelly, known better as "Coffee" Kelly, and he will have his demonstrator here during the days advertised to see that it is properly prepared.

Lewin Prosperous.

Herman Lewin, who conducted a clothing store here a number of years ago, was in the city Monday evening for a few hours, coming in on the Wheatline and leaving on the 10:10 for St. Paul. Mr. Lewin left this city nine years ago for Chicago, but for the past two years has been conducting a general store at Munich, N. D., and is prospering. Last year, he said, he cleared $10,000 and this year he expects to do even better.

Smith's Successor Not Named.

No announcement has been made by the Soo line as yet as to who will succeed C. L. Smith as agent here. Quite a number of business men in the city have requested that W. E. Baker, agent for the Great Gorthern here, be selected by the Soo, and it is understood that had Mr. Baker been willing to make a change he could have received the position.

No Case on Record.

There is no case on record of a cough or cold resulting in pneumonia or consumption after Foley's Honey and Tar has been taken, as it will stop your cough and cure your cold quickly. Refuse any but the genuine Foley's Honey and Tar in a yellow package. Contains no opiates and is safe and sure. A. Bjerkhool.

The poultry raiser needs grit, and so do his hens.

Not much headway can be made along the line of breaking in false teeth for everyday use when they are carefully removed at mealtime. It is a bit like learning to swim, yet never going near the water.

With every year that goes by that easy way of harvesting corn, hogging it down, makes new friends, and this because it saves the job of husking and because hogs fed corn in this fashion do better and make more rapid gains than in the usual method of pen or lot feeding. Not only do the hogs get the corn, but at the same time a good deal of green forage, which keeps their systems in good condition, enabling them to consume a generous ration of corn with the largest possible advantage. This method requires good fencing, but the gain in one season will usually pay for this.

A bunch of lambs will find abundant feed in the average cornfield from the time the corn dents until December. One who has tried this plan states that the lambs will clean up the grass and weeds first and, while they will later browse some on the leaves of the corn, rarely disturb the ears or break down the stalks. Not only is such forage a waste that would count for nothing, but the devouring of it and the trampling of many seeds into the soil mean an infinitely cleaner field the next season. Sheep will do more for a weedy, unkept farm than almost any other single agency at the disposal of the tiller of the soil, and a flock of them should be kept on every well managed farm, when the above plan can be given a test.

A Polite Waiter.

"Here, waiter," exclaimed an irascible diner, "this beef you have given me isn't fit for a pig to eat!"

"Well, sir, don't eat it then!" the waiter advised pleasantly.—London Scraps.

O. Tessum Branches Out.

Messers. O. Tessum of Thief River Falls and V. E. Lindholm of Spooner, desire to announce that they will within the coming week open up a general feed store, in Baudette, locating in the building one door north of the N. G. Johnson Hotel, now called the River View.

Mr. Tessum has a large feed store in Thief River Falls, thus the new firm will be the better in a position to serve the public in their line.—Spooner News.

A Card.

This is to certify that all druggists are authorized to refund your money if Foley's Honey and Tar fails to cure your cough or cold. It stops the cold, heals the lungs and prevents serious results from a cold, prevents pneumonia and consumption. Contains no opiates and is safe and sure. Refuse substitutes. The genuine is in a yellow package. A. Bjerkhool.

Court Again in Session.

The adjourned term of the district court for Red Lake county reconvened at Red Lake Falls Monday and all the attorneys of Thief River Falls together with a large number of jurors and litigants from the north end of the county went down Monday evening. Few cases of any importance to the north end of the county are to be tried at this term of court.

THE GUNNISON TUNNEL.

The first as well as the most remarkable of the great irrigation projects undertaken by the United States reclamation service under terms of the Carey irrigation act is the Gunnison tunnel, which carries the turbulent waters of the lower Gunnison river by a bore 11 by 13 feet through six miles of solid mountains. The work was started several years ago, following a survey of the river by a courageous engineer who made the trip down the raging stream on a rubber raft. But many months preceding were consumed in building a wagon road on which necessary machinery and supplies could be transported to the scene of the work. In constructing the tunnel through the mountains a variety of rock and earth formations was encountered, besides natural gas, hot mineral waters and underground lakes. The tunnel is lined throughout with cement and is practically indestructible. The main canal, which receives the water from the tunnel, is thirty feet wide at the bottom, eighty-three feet wide at the top, and the average depth of water is ten feet, the capacity being 1,300 cubic feet of water per second. The tunnel was formally opened Sept. 23 at Montrose, Colo., on the occasion of President Taft's visit. The cost of the tunnel and distributing canals will be $5,000,000. The government will be reimbursed by the sale of perpetual water rights to actual settlers at about $35 per acre, ten years' time being allowed for payment without interest. The system will redeem and give a value of from $75 to $300 per acre to 150,000 acres of land that without water would not be worth $10 an acre. The land is marvelously fertile and with the water which the system will provide will blossom like a garden.

MAKING VINEGAR.

As often as the apple harvest comes round recurs the question of a conversion of the unsalable cull stock into vinegar. After the juice of the apples has been squeezed out the barrels in which the first fermentation is to take place should be filled about two-thirds full and the bunghole filled with a cloth plug to keep out dirt and flies. When the "working" has ceased the clear portion of the liquid should be poured out and strained, if necessary, the barrels carefully rinsed out and the contents replaced, together with a couple of gallons of old vinegar with some mother in each barrel. If a few cakes of commercial yeast are added the process will be hastened, while if the original apple juice lacked in sweetness a few pounds of coffee A sugar will help matters along. When the second step in the process is completed—the conversion of the alcohol into vinegar—which sometimes takes place in six months and sometimes requires a couple of years, the barrels should be filled full and plugged tightly to prevent further chemical changes. Cider changes to vinegar most rapidly and with best results under a temperature of about 60 or 70 degrees F.

WATERWITCHING.

Although the world is getting along in years and the days of witchcraft and spooks are supposedly outgrown, yet not a few folk believe firmly in waterwitching as a reliable method for selecting a place for a well. A forked stick cut from a plum or other tree is held in the hand, a fork in each hand and the V of the crotch elevated slightly. Those who have faith in the plan contend that when the person carrying the stick comes to a place where a vein or supply of water is this elevated crotch will bend toward the earth, often with sufficient force to twist the bark from the portion of the branches held tightly in the hands. In the absence of a single physical law or principle which could possibly be cited to account for such a remarkable phenomenon the average person of inquiring mind, like the gentleman from Missouri, would have to be shown before he would believe and even then might not be fully satisfied.

IS IT GRAFT?

A leading northern agricultural journal speaks in a sarcastic vein of the benefits conferred by the Gunnison tunnel because 100,000 acres of the land to be watered belong to private parties and will be worth from $75 to $300 per acre as soon as the water is turned on, belittles the pride which government officials feel in the completion of the tunnel and closes with: "Talk about graft—but what's the use? It is love's labor lost to paint the lily." The discerning reader will likely say that this graft—if graft it is—is not essentially different from that perpetrated when the government sold land fifty or sixty years ago for $1.25 an acre which has benefited individual proprietors to the tune of $100 an acre.

Georgia has 10,000,000 peach trees, and 13,000,000 of them are said to have been in bearing the past season.

Kerosene poured through the drains will not only cut accumulated grease and filth, but make it hard sledding for the bugs and bacteria that may be in them. It's cheap too.

If the cold storage egg fellows clean up a profit next spring on eggs which have been laid by at from 18 to 22 cents per dozen during the past six months, the consumer will be entitled to public sympathy.

There is seldom a cat so black but some tiny white spot may be found in its coat and rarely a person so depraved but the divine spark of moral sense and capacity to do better exists in him somewhere if one but look closely.

Of all cheap things that a fellow should keep shy of are serums for the treatment of animal diseases. The federal government has a force of men who do little else than hunt down frauds of this character, but findings are published too late to be of help to fellows who have already taken the bait.

An advantage of early fall plowing that is often overlooked lies in the fact that the greener the weeds and trash on the land when turned under the larger is the number of seeds which will be killed, while the decomposition of the growth turned under will be more complete. Weeds that do germinate and show head above ground will be nipped by the frost.

The continued difficulty found in securing sufficient help to properly handle, quarter section farms and larger is pointing inevitably to a reduction in farm areas as about the only effective way out of the difficulty. When this comes it will mean a more thorough cultivation of the remaining acres, more satisfaction in doing the work and as large a net income when the books are balanced at the end of the year.

If that row of celery cannot be sufficiently protected from the cold by covering it with straw or other litter where it is, it should be dug up with good roots and packed in earth in a box in the cellar. After being placed on a thin layer of soil in the bottom of the box the roots should be moistened and enough earth sprinkled in between the stalks to prevent drying out and to complete the bleaching process.

The women folk should not overlook the matter of tastiness and neatness in their house dresses, for the reason that they are seen in these more than in their street or company gowns. If the kitchen dress looks like a meal sack or worse, with a string at the middle, John can hardly be blamed if he thinks Mary is not quite as careful as she used to be. It might be added, however, that this shoe fits the former as well as the latter.

The question is now and then discussed whether bees do primary damage to fruit—that is, whether they have the ability to make a puncture of the skin and thus render fruit liable to further injury by themselves or other insects. The best opinion seems to be that bees cannot from the formation of their mandibles puncture the skin of fruit, though it is conceded that they will suck the juice from fruit which has already been punctured.

There is some compensation after all in the way climate and temperatures are distributed. From May 1 until Nov. 1 north state folks have a season that could hardly be improved upon, while those of the southwest have dust and dryness and those of the southeast heat and humidity. During the winter months the tables are changed, and the latter have their innings, while their northern neighbors are harassed with coal bills, frozen water pipes and frosted noses. It is perhaps well so if the country is to be uniformly peopled.

A difference of 15 degrees in average winter temperatures as between two localities is a factor which will largely determine whether certain shrubs, fruits and flowers can be successfully grown or not. In latitudes or sections where a winter temperature of 20 below, F., for a considerable period is likely the pear, peach, European plum, many choice varieties of roses and other shrubs are virtually proscribed. In rare instances this lower temperature may come for thirty-six hours in a latitude where the warmer temperatures usually prevail, and as a result havoc is wrought with the tender things.

A long step will be taken ahead in the matter of a discriminating public charity when laws are passed applying to all the country making it an offense to give to the professional tourist beggar. In nine cases out of ten if they are physically able to gad about the country, eating all kinds of grub and drinking all kinds of water, they would be able to stay where they were raised and earn an honest livelihood without prostituting their self respect by launching into the field of confirmed beggary. The eyes of those whose tenderness of heart leads them to give to such folk would be opened could they see the snug sums which they convert into drafts every Saturday night—in many instances more than the weekly wage of those who contribute to them. If travelers of this type want to work for a meal, feed them; if not, direct them to the town or township trustees, who have an arrangement for providing for such folk.

Bonemeal, crushed oyster shell or plaster should be provided so that the fowls can have a feed of it at least once a week.

A pig is a long way better off with hog cholera at three months than a boy is with the cigarette habit at thirteen. Circumstances don't justify one in indulging in very heavy speculation in either case.

The present is distinctively an era in which experts in some one line are winners. In no realm is there greater demand for the expert, the one who is equipped and tried, than in agriculture, and in no fields is toil more healthful or reward for effort more sure.

The eyes and teeth of young people are entirely too precious physical assets to be neglected in the shameful way in which they so often are. If boys and girls doubt the truth of this statement, let them question those who are helpless without their glasses or can't properly chew a square meal without store teeth.

The conditions existing in the cow stable, coupled with the care given the utensils in which the milk is kept, are the chief factors in determining whether the butter product resulting from the dairy operations is gilt edged "western extra" or rancid stuff that is barely fit for food. It is just a matter of filth and bacteria or absence of it that largely determines butter quality.

Owing to conditions of drought prevailing during the growing season in many of the western and southwestern states corn is grown but little and that only where irrigation is possible. Another condition in the coast states that is unfavorable to the proper maturity of a corn crop is the almost universal cool night, the result of the invigorating breezes which set in from the ocean just before sundown.

Land worth from $150 to $250 an acre in France and Germany devoted to forestry is so scientifically and wisely managed that it gives a nice interest return on this valuation. In America the landowner begrudges devoting even fifty dollar land to the growing of trees and thinks it is poorly used at that. It is evident that we have much to learn from the foreigner along the line of forestry.

A headache is nature's warning that something is wrong in the physical economy, the pain being the danger signal; hence the taking of any of the so called headache medicines, whose opiate properties kill the pain, do not go to the root of the difficulty at all, but merely patch it up, often working more permanent harm than they accomplish of temporary benefit. The proper course is to right the disorder which is responsible for the ache.

Among other good habits which young people should develop in the formative years is the habit of work—the ability to take hold of a job and carry it through with thoroughness and persistence. There are lots of youngsters who are not bad in the way of having bad habits, yet are not worth a continental when it comes to doing anything definite and positive. In striving to be good there should be a definite purpose to be good for something.

Whether land prices in the newer fruit sections of the west are being boomed beyond a reasonable limit can be pretty readily ascertained by consulting bankers in such localities and finding out just how much per acre they will lend you on a given piece of land after it comes into your possession. If they tell you little or nothing, it is evidence of their belief that in practical operation the land will not give a return which represents a fair interest rate on the price which you are asked to pay. If they are willing to lend generously on the proposition, it is likely not in the boom class.

A whole lot of town and country dogs rush out on passersby as frequently as they do because they are ill-bred and either don't know or have not been taught any better. If they were collared two or three times returning from such jaunts as these and taken out behind the woodshed and given a good larruping with a lath, they would soon cultivate better manners. It's all right for a dog to bark and advance toward a stranger when he comes into the yard, but when he chases out into the road and scares passing teams he is an all round nuisance.

There's many a man with gray coming in his hair today who will tell you with all seriousness that he would give almost anything if he could be a boy again and have the opportunities for schooling which he once had, but did not prize and take advantage of. A sad thing about such regrets is that they seldom come until it is too late to rectify the loss. The right time to fully prize the educational opportunities is when the boy is going to school and still has in his hands the saying of whether that which he gets out of them will be much or little. Parents who appreciate their lack of advantages along this line or who did not make use of opportunities that were theirs should do everything in their power to make their boys realize the high value of school days and the wisdom of making the most possible of them.

WANTED—A RIDER AGENT IN EACH TOWN and district to ride and exhibit a sample Latest Model "Ranger" bicycle furnished by us. Our agents everywhere are making money fast. Write for full particulars and special offer at once.
NO MONEY REQUIRED until you receive and approve of your bicycle. We ship to anyone, anywhere in the U. S. without a cent deposit in advance, prepay freight, and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL during which time you may ride the bicycle and put it to any test you wish. If you are then not perfectly satisfied or do not wish to keep the bicycle ship it back to us at our expense and you will not be out one cent.
FACTORY PRICES We furnish the highest grade bicycles it is possible to make at one small profit above actual factory cost. You save $10 to $25 middlemen's profits by buying direct of us and have the manufacturer's guarantee behind your bicycle. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you receive our catalogues and learn our unheard of factory prices and remarkable special offers to rider agents.
YOU WILL BE ASTONISHED when you receive our beautiful catalogue and study our superb models at the wonderfully low prices we can make you this year. We sell the highest grade bicycles for less money than any other factory. We are satisfied with $1.00 profit above factory cost. BICYCLE DEALERS, you can sell our bicycles under your own name plate at double our prices. Orders filled the day received.
SECOND HAND BICYCLES. We do not regularly handle second hand bicycles, but usually have a number on hand taken in trade by our Chicago retail stores. These we clear out promptly at prices ranging from $3 to $8 or $10. Descriptive bargain lists mailed free.
COASTER-BRAKES, single wheels, imported roller chains and pedals, parts, repairs and equipment of all kinds at half the usual retail prices.
$8.50 HEDGETHORN PUNCTURE-PROOF SELF-HEALING TIRES A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80
The regular retail price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).
NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES
NAILS, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. Sixty thousand pairs sold last year. Over two hundred thousand pairs now in use.
DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.
Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.
We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.
IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.
DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

AS TO LEGISLATIVE CANDIDATES.

The Bemidji Pioneer publishes the following information regarding the legislative candidates of this district. Not all of the Pioneer's articles should be taken seriously, but there is considerable foundation for a part of the article. It is as follows:

There has been considerable quiet talk of late, hereabouts, as to who would enter the field as candidates for legislative honors in this, the Sixty-first, legislative district, and there has been some interesting discussion.

Representative Opsahl of this city, asked direct as to whether he would be a candidate for re-election stated, rather guardedly, that he was not a candidate, this year, but only smiled when pressed for a more definite answer.

It is intimated that both Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls have "Willing Barkises" who would not be averse to serving the people in the legislative chambers at the state capitol, during the winter of 1910-'11.

Some time ago it was announced that J. A. Duffy, the Red Lake Falls banker, would be a candidate for representative and would have substantial backing in his candidacy. This statement was followed closely by the assertion that, if Mr. Duffy became a candidate for the republican nomination at the primaries, Thief River Falls would present either ex-senator D. P. O'Neill or Dan Shaw as its candidate and would wage a warm contest to land their man.

And now, some person, in all seriousness, suggests that Albert Anderson, the belligerent editor of the Olberg Journal, and W. G. Hunt, the boss of Sunbeam, were really considering entering the race for representative.

Hunt lives on the Red Lake river, and wants a bridge across the river—in fact, asserts, with much vehemance, that he must have one at Sunbeam.

Anderson has busied himself pretty much with all public matters and some there be who really think he would make a good race for representative.

There appears to be considerable unanimity of sentiment to the effect that Senator Hanson should be deposed and a more active man elected to represent this growing district—a man who can "mix" and get what he goes after for his constituents. And it has been intimated that Beltrami county can get the senatorship, if the right kind of a man is named.

In the meantime, no concerted action has been taken along any prearranged line relative to any legislative candidates; and there are liable to be some surprises in store for those who are watching "the game" in this district.

WHO ARE THE OWNERS?

Very few of the readers of the St. Paul and Minneapolis daily papers know what interests are the owners of these organs. A St. Paul gentleman who is "on the job" gives some inside information regarding the recent sale of the Pioneer Press and Dispatch which is authentic. He says:

There has been a great deal of speculation here in the last few days relative to the significance of the sale of the Dispatch and Pioneer Press to George Thompson. The most plausible explanation, and the one generally accepted, is this: The Eastern Democrats, in the anxiety to eliminate Bryan if possible from the next presidential contest decided to pick a western man, and coached Johnson to make the play for the West, promising him Eastern support for the nomination at least. To play this game properly it became necessary to have some papers act as the official organs of Johnson, so the money was advanced and Grasty sent to St. Paul to take part in the fight. The Minneapolis Journal was also subsidized and the Duluth News Tribune and the Minneapolis Tribune were to be later corralled. When Governor Johnson died, of course there was no further need of the papers so far as the Democrats were concerned, but certain Eastern republicans, included in which were some of the Aldrich crowd, paid the Democrats what they had put in, Grasty pulled out and we shall soon have regular Aldrich-Cannon organs "in our midst." The last part may not be true, as some claim that Johnson raised enough money to take the proposition over, first deducting what Grasty had realized from the sale of the Pioneer Press manufacturing plant and the building. But I believe that the Johnson deal is O. K. If the Stalwarts do get big boosts from the P. P. and Dispatch, it will look as if the other story had some foundation—but where do the "peepul" come in?

Germantown.

The Marshall county schools' industrial contest held at Germantown on Saturday was a crowning success in every way, both in attendance of exhibiting school children, officers and others interested in the development of our schools along industrial lines, and in the exhibits numbering close to 200. The exhibits were all very good, and, but for asking too much space, would each be worthy of mention, showing conclusively the fact that the farm boys and girls can and will under proper direction take a live and active interest in practical things. About 100 prizes were awarded, the prize money being divided about equally between the display of agricultural products and that of sewing and cooking. Emil Hanson and Nels Lee acted as judges of the former and Miss Holden and Mrs. Edseth judged the latter, all performing their arduous tasks with painstaking care. To County Superintendent Mithun much credit is due for his tireless work in the industrial education in our public schools and the untiring efforts required in working up the necessary interest with the teachers and patrons for this work, which so far as the rural population is concerned is so certain to bring about good results in future time when the coming generation is called on to take up the work on which the welfare and very existence of all the people depends. During the working time of the judges Mr. Mithun entertained the crowd at the church with an interesting magic lantern trip around the world. Among the teachers present at the contest, besides the local teacher, Miss Fallman, were the Misses Wilson and Ohlberg and Mrs. and Miss Kipp, and Mrs. Hoard. Although no fault is to be found with this contest it was the first experiment of its kind in this part of the county and in view of that fact we do not hesitate in the least to predict that next year, with the idea more thoroughly understood and more prize money available, we shall have both attendance and display of exhibits no less than trebled.

At the last meeting of the Ladies Aid at the Roller home it was decided to have the annual sale of sewed articles, etc., in the church on Saturday, Nov. 27th. The proceeds are to be used in improvements to the church building for which the ladies have set their minds at raising about $100. Besides the sale, lunch will be served in the church and it is hoped the house may be kept well filled all day.

The Farmers' club held another of their successful meetings at the Thomas Clausen home on Sunday, the same interest and enthusiasm being shown here as has followed this organization from the time of its birth last winter. Beside local talent that never fail with us the club was fortunate in having in attendance our county school superintendent, L. M. Mithun, who augmented the regular program with an address on matters pertaining to education, given in his usual pleasant manner.

School Notes.

School will be closed Friday of this week to permit the teachers to attend the Northwestern Minnesota Teachers' Association which convenes at Crookston on Friday and Saturday. Had Thief River Falls the facilities to care for the number who attend this meeting—some five to eight hundred people—an effort would be made to induce the association to honor this city by meeting here. Possibly, in the near future such conditions may be obtained.

State Truant Officer Walz is again in the city looking into the delinquent cases which presented themselves during the last four weeks. An attendance at school of some three or four days out of a whole month can hardly be taken as a regular attendance at school. He states that he will visit the city regularly.

The Bemidji football team outweighed the locals by, at least, fifteen pounds per man. The two teams were not in the same class as to size and weight, but the Thief River boys made up in speed what they lacked in weight. On a hard ground, it was thought by all the members of the team, that they could defeat the big fellows from the pines. One giant on the Bemidji team was six feet four inches in height and when he fell his length over the heads of the short ones from Thief River he made a pretty fair gain every time. The soft sand field handicapped the Thief River boys seriously.

New wiring for the high school call bells was installed by Ward Sharbach and William Rinker on Monday.

The English room in the high school building has been greatly improved by the addition of some simple but effective ventilating apparatus which janitor Ronnestrand's well know ingenuity contrived.

The high school now enrolls 171 students, five having entered last week and two thus far this week.

A receipt has been received from B. F. Nelson, treasurer of the Johnson memorial fund, for the $30.00 which the pupils of the local schools contributed two weeks ago.

HORRIBLE CATASTROPHE UP NEAR WARROAD

Six Are Dead and Another Seriously Injured as Result of an Explosion and Fire.

Six dead and one dying is the result of a fire starting from a kerosene or gasoline explosion in the dwelling of Nels Johnson, residing four miles south of Warroad at an early hour this morning.

Johnson arose early to kindle the fire in a heater and the fire first started having died out he applied a quantity of what he supposed was kerosene from a can containing three gallons of the fluid. An explosion occured immediately from the oil poured into the smouldering embers, followed by another terrific explosion when the contents of the can were blown into every part of the rooms, enveloping the entire house in flames in an instant. The family consisted of a father and mother and eight children, all of whom were in the house except the oldest son, and when the conflagration started all were in bed except the father. The oldest daughter, a girl of fifteen, who with a younger sister, aged five, were sleeping upstairs saved herself and her little sister by jumping from a second story window, and, thus escaped with but slight injuries.

The mother, with the remaining five children, were all sleeping down stairs and when the last explosion occurred the fire spread so rapidly to their sleeping apartments that in less than twenty minutes they were cremated.

The father sustained terrible burns about his hands, face and feet and also inhaled some of the flame, and but for the timely arrival of T. Gerrie, a neighbor who heard the explosion, he would have shared the faith of his wife and the five children. The catastrophe had rendered him frantic and it taxed Mr. Gerrie's strength to the utmost to keep him from re-entering the burning house. Mr. Gerrie himself in the struggle with the crazed man sustained severe burns about his face and hands. It is not expected that Johnson will live and should he die the total loss of life will be seven.

It is supposed that the cause of the explosion was a mixture of gasoline and kerosene which Johnson had purchased the previous day at a Warroad store, which had received a shipment of gasoline in kerosene tanks, the contents of which were dumped into the kerosene reservoir at the store. As several sales of the same mixture had been made to others, some of it to parties living across Lake of the Woods, fifty miles from Warroad, some anxiety is felt until reports from those places can be secured.

A relief committee has been organized to collect money for aiding the stricken family and the citizens of Warroad are contributing liberally.

Col. Marshall Coming.

The above is a photo of Col. Stephen Marshall, of Minneapolis, who is our new Provincial Leader of this, our Northern Province. He will be with us Thursday evening, Nov. 11th, to conduct a special service in the Salvation Army Barracks. He will be accompanied by Staff Captain Storey and they are both worth hearing, having had several years experience in the ranks of the Salvation Army.

The service will begin about 8 o'clock, all seats are free and we want to give them a hearty welcome to this city.

We will also be welcoming our new Lieutenant who comes to assist Captain Pitt.

Now don't forget this please and come and bring a friend. Yours to serve,

CAPT. C. L. PITT.

After the Truants.

George M. Waltz, who was in the city a few weeks ago, returned Tuesday and before Judge Bishop caused ten Warrants to be issued. Nine of the warrants are for parents who have children of school age and have refused to obey the state laws, and one is for John Tanom, who had been sent regularly to school by his parents but failed to make an appearance. The parents for whom warrants have been issued are as follows. Ed Losie, Ed Ellifson, Fred Lecount, Joseph Dostol, Peter Coe, Louis Borgen, E. Erickson, Charles Carlson and F. D. Dahl.

In case where parents agree to send their children to school in the future or show good cause why they have not been sent in the past, only a small fine is given. Mr. Waltz says that the law must be observed and he will make frequent trips here in the future to see that it is observed.

Gov. Eberhardt Does His Duty.

On Tuesday Gov. Eberhardt removed County Auditor Wilmann, of Beltrami county, from office for nonfeasance. It looks as if Gov. Eberhardt was made of the right stuff and is not going to show any leniency to public officials who do not do their duty. The charges against County Auditor Wilmann are not nearly as serious as those against the Red Lake county officials and we may be prepared to hear something drop.

Death of Mrs. Hoernig.

Mrs. Carl Kretzschmar was called to Oshkosh, Wis., last week by the death of her mother, Mrs. John M. Hoernig. As Mrs. Hoernig has often visited in Thief River Falls the following taken from the Oshkosh Northwestern will be of interest:

Mrs. Augusta M. Hoernig, wife of John M. Hoernig, died Sunday morning at 5:50 o'clock.

The death of this well known lady was a sudden one, attended by unusual features. Thursday morning she was in excellent health, apparantly, and it was while finishing preparations for dinner that she fell to the floor in the dining room of the residence at 316 Washington street, stricken with paralysis.

The last sign of recognition given members of the family by Mrs. Hoernig was when her son, W. A. Hoernig, lifted her into the bed, following the attack. One of her arms were thrown about his neck and she patted his face feebly. "Have you any pain mother?" the son asked. The stricken woman replied without words by pressing one hand weakly to her throat and side, showing that she knew she was paralized and could not talk. The son assured her saying that his father had been stricken three weeks ago, but that he had recovered. To this she seemed to nod slightly, and after that she never gave any further indication of consciousness.

Added to the stroke kidney trouble set in and her condition was practically without hope. A daughter, Mrs. Carl Kretzschmar, of Thief River Falls Minn., arrived in the city Sunday morning 50 minutes before the death of Mrs. Hoernig.

Tuesday of last week Mrs. Hoernig entertained the Ladies' Aid Society of the Evangelical St. Paul's church, and Wednesday evening she entertained a small card party.

Mr. Hoernig had a stroke three weeks ago. He recovered gradually. A niece, Mrs. Charles Borgman, of Otter street, and a grandson, Master Patton, of Red Lake Falls, Minn. have been stricken with paralysis within the last few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Hoernig celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary August 9 1907. Mrs. Hoernig was Miss Augusta R. Meinert before marriage, and the nuptials were celebrated in this city. Mr. Hoernig was for many years in the meat business, and was a pioneer in that line. He retired twenty-three years ago, his son succeeding him.

Mrs. Hoernig was well known, especially in German circles in the city. She was a woman who had always enjoyed robust health and that she should be stricken so suddenly was a deep shock to her family, and her friends.

Those who survive are the husband, John M. Hoernig, a son, W. A. Hoernig; and two daughters, Mrs. W. A. Schreiter, of Red Lake Falls, Minn., and Mrs. Carl Kretzschmar, of Thief River Falls, Minn. There are several grandchildren.

A Most Wonderful Cure.

Joseph D. Underhill, of Doland, S. Dakota, says: I have received great benefit from your White Wine of Tar Syrup. I had a deep seated cough and the doctors gave up all hope of my recovery and pronounced it consumption. I tried everything that we could hear of. Finally one of my friends prevailed upon me to use your White Wine of Tar Syrup. I used 1½ bottles and am entirely cured. Such medicine I can recommend to those who were afflicted as I was. THE FORBIDDEN FRUIT.

No Authority For Saying It Was an Apple That Eve Ate.

"What a vast amount of trouble the human race might have avoided if Eve hadn't eaten that apple," remarked the grouchy individual when something especially displeased him.

"How do you know it was an apple?" asked the accurate man.

"Why, the Bible says so, doesn't it?"

"No. It has come to be a popular belief that the fruit which was eaten by our first parents in the garden 'eastward in Eden' was an apple, but there is no authority for this.

"It is called simply the fruit of the tree of knowledge of good and evil. 'And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food and that it was pleasant to the eyes and a tree to be desired to make one wise she took of the fruit thereof and did eat and gave also to her husband with her, and he did eat.' What is there here about an apple?

"A great many popular quotations are attributed to the Bible when in fact they had other sources.

"'God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb' is not from the Scriptures, but from 'A Sentimental Journey to Italy,' by Sterne.

"'In the midst of life we are in death,' which is found in the burial service, can be traced to Luther.

"From St. Paul's utterance, 'The love of money is the root of all evil,' we have twisted the saying, 'Money is the root of evil.' 'Cleanliness is next to godliness' was uttered by John Wesley in a sermon on dress. 'The merciful man is merciful to his beast' is a popular rendering of the proverb, 'A righteous man regardeth the life of his beast.' 'The tongue is an unruly member' appears in the epistle of James as 'The tongue can no man tame; it is an unruly evil.'"—Philadelphia North American.

A BEAVER DAM.

The Feeling It Inspired In a University Professor.

I have yet to meet the man who can walk for the first time through a beaver works, as the range of a colony of beavers is called, and not feel something of the sentiment of human association.

It is a sensation very similar to what we feel when we come out unexpectedly into a woodland clearing after a long day spent in the unbroken solitudes.

I once stood with a learned professor of Columbia college on the bank of a stream in eastern Canada and looked down on a freshly made beaver dam—one of the best in point of construction that I had ever seen. It was, indeed, a really stupendous affair for a beaver to have made. Built of alder poles and brush, weighted with mud and small stones, it was fifty feet long, six feet high and raised the level of the water by about sixty inches.

Seen from the upstream side, it presented the appearance of a more or less evenly disposed array of short sticks protruding from a long mound of mud just level with the surface of the restrained water. From below the brushwood supporting the dam proper was plainly visible and the ingenuity of its placing at once apparent.

There was of course none of that pile driving or basket weaving which at one time played so large a part in the picturesque descriptions by fanciful writers, but despite its roughness it was a really remarkable piece of animal engineering. My companion inspected it for several minutes in impressed silence.

"I should be afraid to kill a thing that knew so much," he said thoughtfully.—Bailey's Magazine.

A Dog Story.

We brought from Scotland a collie about six months old. He was allowed to be with us at the breakfast table, but never to be fed in the dining room. This rule was enforced by my daughter. I was the only member of the family who ever broke over the rule. And often when I offered him a tempting bone he would glance across the table, and if he caught the forbidding eye he would resist the temptation. But one morning she left the table abruptly. Rab followed her into the hall and watched her till she had closed the door of her study. Then he scampered back, nudged my elbow, as if to say, "Now is our time." He seized the bone and was soon crunching it with the greatest satisfaction.—London Spectator.

Illustrating a Definition.

In proving a match to the browbeating lawyer the woman witness is probably in the majority. At a recent case in court a woman witness was giving very damaging evidence against the prisoner, and the attorney for the defense, nettled at her manner, decided to embarrass her if he could.

"In giving your testimony, madam, I observe that you are constantly using the word 'irony.' May I ask if you comprehend its true meaning?"

"Well, I think I do. I will illustrate. If I were to call you a gentleman I should unquestionably be indulging in most decided irony."—Ladies' Home Journal.

A Considerate Husband.

New Husband—Did you make those biscuits, my dear? His Wife—Yes, darling. Her Husband—Well, I'd rather you would not make any more, sweetheart. His Wife—Why, not, love? Her Husband—Because, angel mine, you are too light for such heavy work.—Chicago Record-Herald.

If wisdom was to cease throughout the world no one would suspect himself of ignorance.

THE HUDSON RIVER.

It Has Been Known by at Least Twenty Different Names.

In the course of the past 400 years the Hudson has been known by at least twenty different names, and even today—in New York, at any rate—it is indifferently referred to both as the Hudson and the North river.

While Henry Hudson is universally acclaimed as the discoverer of the noble river which bears his name, it is well known that nearly a century before Hudson's successful exploration John da Verrazano, a Florentine, entered the mouth of the Hudson and reported that he had passed up the river about a league in a boat, not venturing to sail his vessel, the Dauphine, up a river with which he was unfamiliar. A sudden squall impelled him to return to his ship. Verrazano called the Hudson "the river of steep hills." This was in 1524. Some years later Verrazano's brother made a map of the region, and he named the mouth of the Hudson "San Germano."

In 1525 a Spaniard named Gomez, who came to America on an exploring trip, made a chart upon which he designated the Hudson as "San Antonio."

When some eighty years later Henry Hudson in his efforts to reach the East Indian possessions of the Dutch East India company by a northwestern route accidentally ran into the Hudson he promptly dubbed it the "Manhattes," from the name of the Indians who dwelt at its mouth.

Hudson sailed slowly up the river as far as Albany, and his experiences with the Indians and his observations of the surrounding country were so gratifying that he returned home with glowing reports of the new found country.

The Dutch at once realized that great commercial advantage might be gained in the new territory, and various companies were organized to colonize and exploit it.

In 1616 a charter was granted to the New Netherlands company, and the river was there referred to as "De Riviere van der Vorst Mauritius" in honor of Prince Maurice of Orange.

In various other charters granted at this time and public documents in which the river was mentioned it was spoken of as the "Groote Riviere," the "Noordt river," the "River of the Manhattans" and the "Rio de Montague."

In addition to these names, the Indians had a number of others for it, among which may be mentioned "Sanatatea," "Shawnotawty," "Cahobatatea" and "Cohongorontas."

As late as 1754 the river was referred to by a French writer as the "River Orange."

When the English took possession of New Netherlands they persistently called the river "Hudson's river," and despite the many other names by which it was known that name finally "stuck," although many of the early colonists spoke of it as the North river in contradistinction to the Delaware river, which was commonly known as the South river.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Story of Stevenson.

After one of Dumas' plays which he saw presented in Paris and in which a man employs an unworthy stratagem against a woman Robert Louis Stevenson wrote:

"I came forth from that performance in a breathing heat of indignation. On the way down the Francais stairs I trod on an old gentleman's toes, whereupon, with that suavity which so well becomes me, I turned about to apologize and on the instant, repenting me of that intention, stopped the apology midway and added something in French to this effect: 'No. You are one of the persons who have been applauding that piece. I retract my apology.'

"Said the old Frenchman, laying his hand on my arm and with a smile that was truly heavenly in temperance, irony, good nature and knowledge of the world, 'Ah, monsieur, vous etes bien jeune' (Ah, sir, you are very young)."

Sickness and Superstition.

For the cure of epilepsy, or the falling sickness, numerous were the charms that were invoked long ago. A very common remedy among the poor people about London and particularly in Essex was to cut the tip of a black cat's tail in order to procure three drops of blood, which were to be taken in a spoonful of milk and repeated three days successively. If the patient was informed of the composition it lost its efficacy. The patients also were to creep head foremost down some three pairs of stairs three times a day for three successive days.—London Answers.

The Cosmological Question.

The business of life allows no spare time any more. One cannot get rich nowadays in office hours, nor become great, nor keep telegraphically informed, nor do his share of talking and listening. Everybody but the plumber and paperhanger works overtime. How the earth keeps up a necessary amount of whirling in the old twenty-four hour limit is more than we can understand. But she can't keep up the pace much longer. She must have an extra hour. And how to snatch it from the tail end of eternity is the burning cosmological question.—Dallas Lore Sharp in Atlantic.

A Kindly Inquiry.

Fairlie—Jack, have you that ten pounds I lent you the other day? Flyntie—Not all of it, old chap, but what I have will do me a day or two longer. Jolly kind and thoughtful of you to inquire, though.—Illustrated Bits.

The bow cannot possibly stand always bent, nor can human nature subsist without recreation.—Cervantes.

The Wise's Kept No Maid

This was economical and satisfying to Mrs. Wise. Things seemed right only when she did them.

It worked fine—everybody satisfied. Busy hands are happiest;—but the strain told—physically first, then mentally. One day she gave out—had to quit—"All run down" she said.

The facts were—complete physical exhaustion and ragged nerves, due to never-ending monotonous tasks.

The Wise's doctor said "DIGESTO"—a wine glass three times a day.

That did it.

The doctor made good, DIGESTO made good and both made Mrs. Wise good, and equal to her tasks with energy to spare.

Moral: Don't wait—take DIGESTO now. A perfect liquid food and body builder.

PLAN TO CHECK EMIGRATION

Sweden Will Raise a Fund from Which Men Out of Employment Can Borrow Enough Money to Purchase a Small Piece of Land on Which They Will Be Enabled to Make a Living In Their Own Country.

SWEDEN.

A national subscription has been started throughout Sweden for the purpose of checking emigration, especially among the agricultural classes. The money thus collected shall constitute a fund from which such men as are out of employment now, can borrow money with which to purchase a small piece of land on which they will be enabled to make their living. It is also a scheme on the part of the government to open up government lands, the same as is done in America and thus give the buyer a period of ten years time in which to pay for his land. The plan may be a feasible one, but in the meantime, emigration of young men is going on at an alarming rate, and America is getting the most of it. It is especially noticeable that there are unusually large numbers of young men who leave the country. They are the very ones that the government is loathe to let go, because they constitute the citizens on which the future country depends.

Carl Cederstrom, member of the Swedish nobility, who some years ago was a vaudeville artist in Chicago, has recently returned from Paris to Stockholm, where he has informed the public that it will only be a matter of a few months before he will return to the capitol and give a flying exhibition in an aeroplane, which will have all the others beat a city block. He is a deciple of Bleriot, of course, and it seems that Bleriot had much to teach him. He is willing to be taught too, and will return to Paris soon and complete his aeronautic education there if possible. He will return to Stockholm next year with his improved monoplane, which he says is easier to run than an automobile, and it will, according to "Baron" Cederstrom, only be a short time before his monoplane will be so popular that all Stockholmians in average good circumstances can afford to have them.

Lieutenant Shackleton, the English south polar explorer gave a lecture on the evening of Oct. 12 under the auspices of the Swedish Anthropological Society in Stockholm, in one of the lecture rooms in the Grand Hotel, which was filled to its utmost capacity by eager listeners. He described the expedition to the South pole most vividly to the crownprince and princess, the Swedish premier, Royal Antiquarian Montelius and many other men of note in the scientific world. Lieutenant Shackleton was made an honorary member of the society and after the lecture a dinner was given in his honor.

Sir E. Nordenskiold, who had made an expedition to the interior of Central South America during the early part of 1908, has written a letter to D. C. Forsstrand of Stockholm, dated August 7, St. Antonio, Rio Parapiti. In this letter the explorer states that his ethnological and archaeological researches in that section of the earth, have been crowned with success, and that his collection from the interior of Boliva and Brazil are of the most unique character. The explorer further states that he will soon return to his native land, stating that he "longs for some good books and civilized people."

To Stockholm arrived the other day a Chinese commission from the emperor in China, which came to formally advise the Swedish king of the fact that here is a new emperor and empress on the Chinese throne. The commission consisted of China's new minister in Brussels, Yang Shoo, the emperor's special messenger. He was accompanied by Lynn Tong-Sih, Liou-Sy-Tschang and the attaches Chung-Yun-Ho, Chang-Chung-Chen and Yang-Tienchuen.

The university collection of pictures of Swedish kings is now complete from the time of the two Carls down to King Gustaf. The new picture hangs beside that of Karl II, the great warrior king, possibly because too, there was such a great contrast between the character of these two kings. Oscar II appears in civil dress, without either military or royal emblems, thus expressing the man of peace.

Anonymous letters are still being circulated among prominent men, stating that on such and such date, they will be blown up in the air or words to that effect. Nothing however, of any startling nature has happened recently and not a great deal of importance is attached to these letters.

The widow of the late King Oscar has presented the Lund University with a fine oil painting of her husband.

NORWAY.

An exchange says: Miss Hannah Larsen writes that Professor Carl Lorentsen, of Columbia University, has just returned from Norway, Sweden and Denmark, where he spent some time in the interest of the American-Scandinavian society, of which he is secretary. He speaks enthusiastically of the results accomplished since the organization of the society less than a year ago. The interchange of professors and of students is already an actual fact. The next step will be to extend the activity of the society to the middle west where the Scandinavian element is more powerful in the universities. "Wherever I went I met with a cordial response," said the professor, "and I may say that Norway has taken the lead. I met no man on my travels who took a keener interest in our plans than Professor Broegger of the University of Norway. He hopes that they may be the means of making the Scandinavian countries at home draw closer through a common union with America. During our talk he became so interested that he jumped up and said he would present me to the King. That could not be done as the King was in Bergen at the time, but Rector Broegger will no doubt lay the matter before the King in the not distant future." Professors S. P. Dutton of the Columbia University, was sent to Europe by the American Scandinavian society. He has just finished his course of lectures in Sweden after first having given a similar course in Norway and Denmark. Professor Dutton's lectures have been extensively reported in the papers of Norway. His subject was "The Influence of Education in the United States." He dwelt on the great power for good of the small college which is really the spiritual and intellectual pioneer of the new states. At the close of his lecture in Christiania, a dinner was given in his honor by the University and the Scientific society. In Denmark he was received in audience by the King and entertained at dinner. Three Scandinavian students have already arrived in the United States and are studying at the Carnegie Technical school in Pittsburg. They are Harald Erbing from Sweden, Frode Kjems of Denmark and Haakon Styri from Norway. The institution has invited them as guest students, which means that they have no tuition fees to pay. The work of the American-Scandinavian society has thus been successfully begun and it is urgently hoped that it will be productive of much good.

In Vaerdalen there are an abundance of wolves this season and people are complaining that they are hungry and attacking cattle and sheep. The authorities are going to do their utmost to kill them off. They seem to be fully aware of a person coming upon them with a gun, but the minute a person comes near them unarmed, they are almost ready to make an attack at any time.

The Wilson Line Steamship company have placed two new steamers on the Christiania-Trondjem route, viz., the "Olso" and the "Aaro." Both steamers are modern and splendidly equipped in every way to suit the passenger traffic.

Bjornson's new play "When the Vine is in Bloom," is being rendered at the Bergen theater at present. The theater is packed to its utmost capacity every night, and seats are sold for many days in advance. Mme. Ivarson takes the leading part.

There were severe frosts during the early part of last month all through Trondelagen, considerable damage was done to fruits and vegetables. Many fruit and vegetable raisers lost their entire crop.

An Englishman, Albert Kroger of London, has donated a sum to the city of Trondhjem, which shall constitute a legacy, the interests accrueing to be divided among the poor of the city.

The head station for wireless telegraphy is located in Bergen and has now been completed at an expenditure of 100,000 crowns.

DENMARK.

Count Hostein-Ledreborg's cabinet resigned last Friday after receiving a vote of censure from the Folkethinget, where the cabinet has been the object of much criticism owing to the recent budget proposition, which it has prepared. The cabinet has been shortlived. It was organized in the early part of August after the Neergaard cabinet had been dissolved. The radical leader Zahle has now taken it upon his shoulders to form a new ministry to take the place of the one which just resigned. Zahl's proposition is for the folkethinget to appoint a committee of fifteen to examine the Alberti affairs, eventually seeking to bring to justice Alberti, J. C. Christensen, another premier, who recently resigned and Sigurd Berg. The country is now awaiting the outcome of it, but there will evidently be more trouble in store in the near future.

Prince George of Greece, who has been sojourning for some time in Copenhagen as the guest of Prince Waldemar, announced in the Copenhagen papers recently that he desired to buy a palace and estate in the vicinity of Copenhagen. He offers a cool million crowns for a suitable place. The fact that the prince has made this announcement, would indicate that he intends to spend the remainder of his days in Denmark. He has tendered his resignation as admiral in the fleet to the Grecian government.

Knud Rasmussen arrived Tuesday of last week with his steamer "Nans Egede." He asserted in an interview with a correspondent for one of the Copenhagen dailies, that he was fully convinced that Dr. Cook had reached the north pole. He positively stated that he had seen Dr. Cook's data and believed that they were genuine. Rasmussen intends to return to Greenland next spring and then hopes to meet the two Eskimos, who went with Cook to the north pole.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

Mrs. William Marlow, wife of a coal miner, and four of her children were burned to death in a fire that destroyed their home in Penn township, near Pittsburg. Mrs. Marlow saved one of her children, but in attempting to rescue the other four lost her life.

The reflection of illuminated smoke near the New Jersey state prison at Trenton led to an alarm of fire from the institution, followed by a panic among the 1,300 convicts. The prisoners were kept locked in their cells and quiet was restored.

Five persons were killed and six seriously and a score slightly injured in a collision between Pennsylvania railroad train No. 104, from Philadelphia, and an engine running light on the elevated tracks of the railroad in Jersey City.

Sixty-eight persons were injured, three probably fatally, when a crowded University place car at Des Moines jumped the track and turned on its side on the Nineteenth street hill following a thrilling coast down the long incline.

Fast mail No. 28 of the Great Northern ran into an eastbound stock train on the main line a mile west of Rugby, N. D. There were no fatalities, but a dozen men were more or less seriously injured.

Forest fires are raging in many parts of the Kentucky mountains. Already vast amounts of the most valuable timber of that section have been destroyed.

POLITICAL NEWS.

Tammany elected another mayor of Greater New York, but lost its grip on city finances. William J. Gaynor of Brooklyn swept the five boroughs to victory as mayor by at least 70,000 plurality. He failed, however, to carry his ticket with him and the Republican-fusion forces will control absolutely the board of estimate and apportionment, which will disburse approximately a billion dollars during the administration.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

The little log schoolhouse is not yet extinct in Minnesota and will not be for some years. The tables being prepared by the state superintendent from the reports of the county superintendents for the last school year show that twenty-nine log schoolhouses were built in the state during the year, leaving a total of 261 such buildings in the state.

The Minnesota free employment bureau found jobs for twice as many during the six months ending Oct. 31 as they did the corresponding six months in 1908. W. E. McEwen, state labor commissioner, ascribes the large increase in positions secured to improved industrial conditions and partly to greater efficiency in the three bureaus.

St. Paul is tenth among the cities of the United States in the value of the buildings for which permits were taken out during October, according to the current Construction News. The percentage of increase over last year is 36, which is exceeded by only six of the larger cities in the country.

According to figures just compiled by the state educational department the enrollment in the public schools of the state for the school year closing July 31, 1909, was 435,109. This is against 420,748 for the previous year, showing a decided gain.

Mayor Meyer of Mankato has been served with a written notice by several pastors that he must enforce the Sunday closing law as it relates to the saloons. The attitude of the pastors is that he must do this or give way to some one who will.

Senator Nelson W. Aldrich of Rhode Island will be the guest of St. Paul bankers and business men at a dinner and reception Saturday evening, Nov. 13. He will explain his central bank proposition to the financiers of St. Paul.

An agreement has been entered into by the members of the Minnesota Wholesale Liquor Dealers' association not to do business with retailers who sell to the Indian wards of the government.

The Pittsburg Coal, Dock and Wharf company a subsidiary company of the Pittsburg Coal company, is going to build a million dollar coal dock in Duluth.

As a parting token of esteem the Democratic employes at the state capitol presented Frank A. Day with a solid silver tea and coffee set of six pieces.

The strike of the 500 marble and tile setters of the Twin Cities has ended, the men securing practically all their demands.

Tag day at St. Paul netted the anti-tuberculosis committee $22,000. Minneapolis tag day receipts were $19,500.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Paul Thompson, Jr., living six miles east of Baudette, angered at the noise of a charivari party, fired into the crowd, it is alleged, wounding sixteen-year-old Helen Ferrier, daughter of a neighbor. The bullet passed through her body. She has been taken to Winnipeg for treatment.

Safeblowers made another attack on the Midway district between St. Paul and Minneapolis and completely wrecked the office of the John A. Lytle cow market. They got nothing for their pains, however, as Mr. Lytle had removed all the money from the safe before locking up.

Edward Erickson, proprietor of a saloon at Duluth, is dead from a blow received in a fight in his place two weeks ago. He was struck on the head with a cuspidor and Edward Fling, who was arrested for the assault and was released on bail, has been rearrested.

While walking across a short trestle near Pettis Station Oliver P. Ball, a veteran of the Civil war and an old resident of Le Sueur county, was struck by a Milwaukee freight train and so badly injured that he died in three hours.

Donald Wisner of Chisholm, aged eleven years, was killed by a tree which he felled. He and other boys were out in the woods cutting shinney sticks and then amused themselves cutting down some good sized trees.

An unknown man about thirty-five years old committed suicide at Alger Station, on the Duluth and Iron Range road. He drank carbolic acid and was dead when discovered lying on the floor of the waiting room in the depot.

Frank Murphy, who had been working with a ditching gang on the Northern Pacific at Sturgeon Lake, killed himself at his boarding house in Pine City by taking laudanum. He had been drinking heavily.

Deputy Sheriff Thomas Orren of Wells has been bound over to the grand jury on a charge of setting fire to his own home. Orren is a brother of former Mayor Eric O. Orren of Wells.

Albert Johnson, a farmer residing near Tower, was killed by a train near that city while crossing the track with his team. A boy who was with him and the team escaped serious injury.

Nels Lans, a liveryman, thirty-two years a resident of Red Wing, was dragged to death in a runaway accident while driving a team of ponies from Spring Creek to Red Wing.

ST. PAUL WOMAN A SUICIDE

Mrs. Anna Seegar Ends Her Life While Despondent.

"Mamma is dead!" cried seven-year-old Ethel Seegar as she ran into the street from her home at St. Paul and attracted neighbors to the house. Investigation discovered Mrs. Anna Seegar, wife of R. C. Seegar, hanging from a rope in the cellar of the house. She was cold in death and had evidently been hanging for several hours. The suicide was discovered by the children when they returned from school.

Mrs. Seegar had stood on a chair and, after tying the rope to a rafter in the cellar and then adjusting the noose around her neck, kicked the chair from under her feet.

It is said that Mrs. Seegar had been in delicate health and that for a long time, on account of illness and business reverses of her husband, she had been melancholy and morose.

SWAMP LANDS IN MINNESOTA

State Will Get Valuable Tracts From Federal Government.

Attorney General Simpson of Minnesota, in Washington, has arranged for the patenting of between 6,000 and 10,000 acres of swamp land within the next sixty days. The land has valuable timber on it and the state will be enriched more than $1,000,000 by the one transaction.

Mr. Simpson took up the question of patenting these lands with Secretary Ballinger and Land Commissioner Bennett, and Mr. Bennett instructed subordinates in his office to prepare patents immediately for the smaller body of land, which was examined more than a year ago and found to be due the state under the swamp land act of 1860. All this land is in what was formerly Indian reserves.

PASTOR HANGED IN EFFIGY

Rev. Grant B. Wilder, pastor of the First Congregational church of Fairmont, was hanged in effigy on the front porch of the parsonage. The figure remained suspended for some hours after daylight and caused much excited comment.

The action is attributed to the feeling aroused by a special election to be held in that city shortly to amend the city charter. The proposed amendment, if carried, will permit the freeholders to vote on the question of license at the next regular election.

RESTS ON THE STATE'S CASE

Defense Offers No Evidence in Arbogast Trial.

Declaring that the state had failed to make a case against Mrs. Mina Arbogast of St. Paul, charged with the murder of her husband, Louis Arbogast, Attorney Patrick J. McLaughlin made an impassioned appeal to Judge Orr on a motion to direct the jury to return a verdict of not guilty.

This was after he had formally announced that the defense rested on the state's case. Judge Orr denied the motion to direct the jury to return a verdict of not guilty.

Watchman Burned to Death.

Nicholas Meyer, watchman at the Abbott Manufacturing company at St. Paul, was frightfully burned and died soon after. Meyer was subject to epileptic fits and while he was starting the furnace of the plant he fell into the open firebox, his right arm, almost to the shoulder, extended into the fire and was burned to the bone before he recovered.

Lund Indebtedness Heavy.

The administrator of the estate of John G. Lund, who committed suicide at Minneapolis about a year ago, has announced that the estate of Mr. Lund is valued at $183,000, with claims amounting to $750,000. The creditors will receive about 20 cents on the dollar.

Sickness Causes Suicide.

That Alois Schrier, forty-two years of age, who leaped from the high bridge at St. Paul, had decided to end his life because he was melancholy on account of sickness, is indicated by a letter found in his pocket by Coroner A. W. Miller.

LAW VIOLATES CONTRACT

Contention of Railroad Attorney in Gross Earnings Tax Case.

Washington, Nov. 9.—Arguments in the case of the Great Northern Railway company against the state of Minnesota involving the 4 per cent gross earnings law of 1903, were resumed in the supreme court by W. R. Begg, counsel for the railroad company.

Mr. Begg based his argument against the validity of the law on the ground that it is a violation of the contract previously entered into between the St. Paul and Pacific and St. Anthony and St. Vincent roads, under which the tax was to be limited to 2 per cent of gross earnings.

Mr. Begg cited a number of cases, claiming that the decision of the state supreme court in all of them has borne out the road's contention that the state was bound by contracts made by the territorial legislature to earlier companies. He also claimed that these decisions declared that the state should be bound by these earlier contracts.

Assistant Attorney General Peterson opened for the state.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

MRS. ARBOGAST IS ACQUITTED

St. Paul Woman Freed of Charge of Killing Husband.

Mrs. Mina Arbogast has been acquitted at St. Paul of the murder of her husband, Louis Arbogast, by a district court jury.

When the verdict was read there was a subdued babel of whispers, tears coursed down the cheeks of the widow's daughters, while the woman herself, with head still bent, burst into tears and wept silently.

Judge Orr briefly thanked the jury for the attention they had given the case and discharged them.

Louise Arbogast, a daughter, is now out on $20,000 bail on the same charge as the mother and her case has been set for this term, so that the probability is she will be tried within a week or two.

The murder of Louis Arbogast was one of the most brutal affairs in St. Paul criminal history.

MINNEAPOLIS MAN SLAIN

Stabbed to Death in Fight Over a Card Game.

C. G. Chase, twenty-nine years of age, a barber, was stabbed to death at Minneapolis by James T. Nelson, forty-seven years old, a chiropodist, following a game of cards for a "can" of beer.

Shortly after the murder Nelson was arrested at his home and taken to Central police station and, after a three-hour inquisition, the police say, admitted stabbing Chase, but thought he had merely torn the man's clothes and frightened him.

The coroner's examination showed that the little knife had made a gash three inches deep, cutting the heart.

Nelson has a wife and seven children dependent on him.

Nelson's defense will undoubtedly be self-defense.

FREIGHT TRAINS COLLIDE

Fireman Killed and Five Other Persons Injured.

In a head on collision between two freight trains on the Canadian Northern at Pitt, west of Beaudette, one of the firemen was killed instantly and five other members of the train crews were seriously injured and have been taken to a hospital at Winnipeg.

The collision occurred in a fog. It is reported that the operator at Beaudette turned the signal for the westbound freight and let it pull out before the order from the dispatcher's office to hold it for the eastbound freight had been received.

ITALIANS IN DRUNKEN ROW

One Man Is Killed and Several Are Wounded.

Two factions of Italian miners, filled with blind pig liquor, terrorized Stevenson, a mining town nine miles southwest of Hibbing, in a fight, during which the proprietor of a lodging house was shot to death while trying to stop the row, three others were wounded and two were arrested. Others, also probably wounded, escaped before the officers arrived.

SON SHOOTS HIS FATHER

Slayer of Minnesota Man Thought to Be Insane.

Jens Johnson, thirty-three years of age, residing with his father near Caledonia, shot his father in the head with a 38-caliber revolver, the bullet coming out at the right eye. He died instantly.

Jens Johnson admits he committed the act and assigns no reason, except that he thought it was best to do so. He is thought to be partially insane.

Married Three Days, Ends Life.

The lifeless body of Nels Olson was found in the woods near Northome by a searching party that had been at work three days. A bullet hole through his head and a 38-caliber revolver still clutched in the dead man's right hand plainly told the tragedy that had been enacted in the lonely spot. Olson had been married but three days.

Former Treasurer Again Indicted.

A. A. Kramer, former treasurer of Itasca county, has again been indicted on five counts for the alleged embezzlement of funds. Bail was fixed at [illegible] and was furnished. Mr. Kramer has turned over securities amounting to $10,000, and his shortage may reach that sum.

Two Johnsons End Their Lives.

Two Johnsons took their own lives in Minneapolis the other day at about the same time. Andrew Johnson, aged forty, killed himself by shooting on a vacant lot. Paul Johnson, twenty-five years of age, committed suicide at the Brunswick hotel by drinking carbolic acid.

A GREAT CENTRAL SUN

Madler's Theory Is That It Is the Star Alcyone.

THE CENTER OF GRAVITY.

According to the Astronomer, the Principal Star of the Pleiades Is the Body Around Which All Created Matter Within Our Ken Revolves.

It has been the dream of all the romantic astronomers since the time of Copernicus to prove the existence of a central sun, says Lawrence Hodges, writing in the New York Tribune. By this is meant a heavenly body as much larger than the sun as the sun itself is larger than the earth, round which the sun, with all its planets, must revolve. It has been proved that the sun and all its satellites are rushing forward through space with enormous velocity, but whether the motion was in a straight line or a circular path was not proved for some time.

But even if it was proved a curved path and that there probably existed a central sun that transcended the earth's lord in size, why couldn't we see it? The only answers are that it would have to be nonluminous or else so far away that the light hadn't reached us yet. But if all the stars, including our sun, were children of this big sun, just as the earth is the child of the sun and the moon of the earth, they would have had to have been flung off from the big sun with a greater velocity than that of light in order for the big sun not to be visible and still be luminous; also the big sun would have to be luminous if any of its children were, for that is the invariable law of the heavens. So the problem simmered down to finding a star or group of stars that would take the place of the central sun.

The motion of the solar system having been settled as to fact, quantity and direction, astronomers set about to find the center of gravity of the whole astral system, for there, if anywhere, the central sun was to be found. An astronomer named Madler thought he had found the star to satisfy the necessary conditions in the constellation known as Taurus, or the Bull. A closer search proved the special star under examination to be lacking in some of the conditions, so this one was left and the search begun anew. This same astronomer persisted in his search with a wonderful faith in his theory and at last found a star fulfilling in the most wonderful and complete manner the necessary conditions. Every one is familiar with the beautiful little cluster known as the Pleiades, or seven stars. The telescope, however, shows fourteen stars clustered about the beautiful and brilliant star Alcyone, which is the optical center of this group.

The proper motions of all these have been determined with great exactness. They are all in the same direction and are all nearly equal to each other, and, what is still more important, the mean of their proper motions differs from that of the central star, Alcyone, by only one-thousandth of a second of arc in right ascension and by only two-thousandths of a second in declination. Here, then, is found a magnificent group of suns either actually allied together and sweeping together through space or else composing a cluster so situated as to be affected by the same apparent motion produced by the sun's progression through the celestial regions.

But an extension of the limits of research round Alcyone exhibits also the wonderful truth that out of 110 stars being within 15 degrees of this center there are sixty moving south—that is, in the same direction—in full accordance with the hypothesis that Alcyone is the center, forty-nine showing practically no motion, while only one single individual that moves at all contrary to the computed motion. Thus was Madler's profound speculation justified. Furthermore, assuming Alcyone as the grand center of the millions of stars composing our astral system and the direction of the sun's motion to be as before mentioned, Madler investigated the consequent movements of all the stars in every quarter of the heavens.

Just where the swiftest motions should be found in accordance with this assumption there they actually exist, this either demonstrating the truth of the theory or else showing a well nigh impossible series of coincidences. Therefore the conclusion given out by Madler is that Alcyone, the principal star of the Pleiades, now occupies the center of gravity and is at present the great central sun about which the universe of stars and all created matter within our ken is revolving, each entity in its own special path.

SHOPPING IN MEXICO

Women Get Plenty of Excitement In Making a Purchase.

BARGAINING AS A FINE ART.

The Descent From the Asking Price to the Last Price and From That to the Final Selling Price Works Out Something Like a Farce Comedy.

When a woman goes shopping in the City of Mexico, especially if she speaks Spanish, she gets far more excitement for her money in the course of an afternoon than she could hope to compass in a year's time in America.

In the Spanish and French dry goods houses, where the trade is almost exclusively feminine, the goods are marked with the "asking price," which is a mere mathematical figure of speech, and the first question that the experienced shopper always asks of the salesman is, "What is your last price?"

This "ultimo precio" is generally about 25 per cent less than the selling price with which the goods are tagged. It forms, however, a certain basis from which to start the bargaining, which thereafter is carried on with all the skill and fury that characterize such transactions everywhere throughout Latin America. The woman customer may wish to purchase a few yards of silk, for example. The marked price is, say, $2 a yard, and the "last price" is given as $1.50. The woman will look at the piece she desires with the same unconcerned scorn with which she regards everything else that is shown her. She will disparage it from every point of view and finally ask for something that is not likely to be in stock. At last she will sigh and look about in despair.

"Caramba, but I'm weary with this vain task of endeavoring to find something that I wish in this second class establishment! The prices are far higher than anywhere else, but I try to patronize this place because the proprietors are friends of my husband. Now, that rose silk is not the shade I wish, but I might be able to use it some time if I could buy it at a reasonable price."

The salesman, who has been listening with an assumed air of sympathy, responds with all the flowery eloquence that he can command and with a constant play of rapid gestures, his lighted cigarette in one hand describing a little arc of fire somewhat dimmer than the diamonds he wears on his fingers.

"Senorita, we place at your feet this establishment and all that it contains. It is your house, and you may do with it as you will. But the very last price at which I can offer you this silk is $1.25 a yard. I do this with a fear of losing my position, but with the hope that the proprietors will pardon my audacity when they learn that your husband is one of their personal friends."

"I thank you, senor," responds the shopper. "I appreciate your consideration, but I could not possibly accept the silk as a gift. Nevertheless I would be willing under the circumstances, so that you might make a reasonable profit, to give you 50 cents a yard for two yards."

At this the salesman drops on the floor the stub of the cigarette he has been smoking. This leaves both hands free, and if he is a master of the selling art as known in that country tears come to his eyes and he wrings his hands apparently in the depths of despair and chagrin. The Mexicans dearly love acting and dissimulation of all sorts, and this byplay of the clerk is but a part of the price of the goods. After frenzied ejaculations he puts the price down to $1 a yard, saying that that figure is the "last of the last prices." The lady has been gazing about indifferently and gathers up her pocketbook and other impediments as she rises to depart. As an afterthought and with condescension that amounts almost to pity she remarks:

"Sixty cents—no more. It is my last word. Adios, senor."

"One little moment, senorita. Do not depart in anger. Rather than let you go thus you may have the silk at 90 cents a yard, and I will make up the difference from my own pocket."

The lady hesitates, turns back as if indifferent, yet undecided. Then she again starts toward the door, speaking the phrase of pious farewell which is the Spanish equivalent of a final goodby.

"May you go with God, senor."

She almost has reached the portal when the salesman catches up with her. He has had time to light another cigarette to fortify himself for the final struggle, and, waving this in one hand, he begs her, almost on bended knees, to return and take the silk at 80 cents a yard. She looks languidly upon him. She has concluded that 80 cents would be about the right price and probably the best she can do. Yet she returns undaunted and in the softest of voices breathes the Spanish words which are the equivalent in that tongue for 70 cents. After ten minutes more of firmness on the shopper's part and every aspect of poignant grief by the salesman two yards of silk finally change hands at 75 cents.

The same furious bargaining is the rule in the grocery stores and in the sidewalk markets.—New York Press.

TRYING TO WHITEWASH REPORT TO GOVERNOR?

Plain Statement of Facts as They Exist Is What Red Lake County People Want.

St. Paul, Minn., November 12, 1909.—The fine Italian hand of John E. King, Red Lake county's member of the "kitchen cabinet," is seen in the report of one of the deputies in the public examiner's office which was filed with Gov. Eberhardt regarding conditions in Red Lake county. The chances are that the manipulations of Mr. King will come to aught, however.

The tone of the report is one of condonation of the wrong doing instead of criticism, and while it states many facts, it is in the nature of a whitewash. Former Attorney General Young, who is looking after the interests of the Red Lake county taxpayers who are petitioning for the removal of the three county commissioners, the auditor and treasurer, after reading the report called upon Public Examiner Schaeffer, who is personally on the square, and asked that the report be withdrawn. Mr. Young stated that all that was wanted was a plain statement of facts without coloring for or against the officials involved. Mr. Schaeffer at once agreed to this and a new report is to be filed.

It seems that the deputy who made the examination was not informed that there was any complaint on file with the Gov. and his work was more in the nature of a general examination, than one undertaken for the purpose of finding whether specific facts existed or not. The report as made, claims that the money that was transferred from the ditch fund to the general revenue fund was transferred back to the general revenue fund when the complaint was filed with the auditor, and THAT NONE OF IT HAD BEEN PAID OUT FOR ANY PURPOSE. That of course is not true and that statement will be corrected in the amended report which the public examiner's office agrees to make. It is claimed in this report, also, that the land purchased for the court house site was paid for OUT OF THE INSURANCE MONEY that was received when the old court house burned. Of course it does not make any difference what fund that money was paid out of, because claims against any fund in the county treasury must be made in writing and verified and audited by the board and the 15 days allowed to appeal.

The whole thing is going to resolve itself into a question of whether or not the Governor is going to require the officers of the County to obey the law. Of course after this report is filed with the Governor, he will have to appoint a Referee to take testimony and give the officers complained of a chance to be heard.

The amended report of the deputy examiner who made the examination was filed with the governor this week and is quite a lengthy affair. It recites the illegal acts of three of the county commissioners—Pigeon, Demann and Lindquist—in the purchase of the court house site and transfer of the ditch money, and gives a sufficient cause for their removal. The report says that the county revenue fund is running behind at the rate of $8,000 each year and as a tax of 5 mills is levied for this fund it is the legal limit and the only way that this fund can be placed upon a cash basis is to issue bonds, or cut down the running expenses of the county.

A number of illegal bills which the county commissioners had allowed in the past are itemized and the county attorney instructed to see that the amounts are returned to the treasury. The bills are for the most part fees allowed to Sheriff Nelson and Former Sheriff Linnihan and their deputies. The county commissioners each received $6 more than they should have, and the auditor a small amount.

The "hottest shot" is fired at County Auditor Letandresse and Treasurer Ives, and suggests that the attorney general bring a criminal action against these gentlemen. It is not believed by the people of this county that they are wilfully guilty of any criminal act, but in endeavoring to carry the $4,000 paid for the court house site upon the books in a manner that would please the Red Lake Falls attorneys they have undoubtedly made a mistake. The report says, in regard to the treasurer and auditor, the following:

"There appears a difference of $4,000 in the revenue fund between the ledger and last month's trial balance sheet. The trial balance submitted to the department on Sept. 30, by the auditor and treasurer shows that the revenue fund was overdrawn $2,311.29, whereas the ledger shows $6,311.29 overdrawn, a discrepancy of $4,000. This is clearly a misrepresentation of actual conditions, and as these balances are certified to as true and correct by the auditor and treasurer, and the official seal of the latter affixed, the question might be submitted to the attorney general whether this comes within the provisions of Section 3864 of R. L. '05, with reference to false certificates."

WHO OWNS THE SITE?

Complicated Situation in the Court House Site at Red Lake Falls.

Proposed Site Was Illegally Purchased and It Is Going to Be No Easy Matter to Fix.

Who owns the lots in Red Lake Falls where Contractor Brady dug a hole, presumably for the basement of the court house? An abstract would show that Red Lake county is the owner, yet the money which was paid for those lots will have to be returned to the county.

As will be remembered, when the county commissioners purchased the proposed new site for a court house they were in a great rush to part with the county's money, and the day on which resolution was passed purchasing the property, the money was paid out by the auditor and treasurer, the taxpayers being given no opportunity to appeal from the allowance of these claims. The auditor, treasurer, and commissioners did not ask the advice of the county attorney regarding this transaction, but it is understood that they were given the best legal advise Red Lake Falls had—which now turns out to have been mighty poor.

The matter was taken into court by interested parties in Thief River Falls, and when the matter came up before Judge Watts last week, the Red Lake Falls attorneys admitted that the money was paid out illegally, but stated to the court that verified bills would be presented to the commissioners at their next meeting for the purchase price of the lots and audited and allowed in the usual manner.

The whole thing is such a mix-up that it is going to take a Philadelphia lawyer to straighten it out. The $4,000 which was paid out of the treasury illegally, for these lots will have to be returned by the auditor, treasurer or the three county commissioners who voted for the purchase of the property and the appropriation of the $4,000. The owners of the lots have their money, and having received payment once cannot file a verified account with the commissioners for a second payment. Then again an abstract shows that Red Lake county is the owner of the property, and the commissioners could hardly pay out money for something the county already owns. It is certainly a complicated affair.

A well posted attorney is of the opinion that the only way the matter can be straightened out now is for the person or persons who pay back the $4,000 into the treasury to commence an action against the county to acquire title to the lots, then they could be again sold to the county.

In the meantime we do not think that Contractor Brady will make many improvements upon the hole he has dug.

May Get Well.

Nels Johnson, whose wife and five children were burned to death as the result of an explosion in his store, owing to the use of gasoline instead of kerosene in lighting a fire, passed through the city last week, being taken to Crookston, where he is receiving medical treatment for his terrible burns. The attending physicians believe that he may recover, though his condition is very critical.

SHOT BY HIS BROTHER

Son of Former Thief River Falls Resident Killed Last Week Hunting Deer.

Shooting Was Purely Accidental and Death of Boy Was Almost Instantaneous.

The many Thief River Falls friends of Harvey A. Wilson, who was one of the old time residents of this city, will be pained to learn of the accidental shooting of his son, Shirley, which happened last week.

The accident happened in the town of Eland, Beltrami county, eleven miles northeast of Kelliher, where Mr. Wilson settled upon a homestead a few years ago. Shirley, who is nine years of age, and his brother, Harvey, who is twelve years of age, were out about two miles from the Wilson home hunting deer.

They have carried guns since they were able to lift firearms, and the older boy had a rifle, the younger carrying a shotgun.

They saw a deer, and in the excitement Shirley got in front of Harvey's rifle, just as the latter pulled the trigger, the bullet passing through his thumb and his body, causing almost instant death.

City Council.

A regular meeting of the city council was held Tuesday evening and the ordinance giving the Northwestern Telephone company a local franchise was given its second reading and passed. It is stated upon good authority that at the next regular meeting the ordinance will come up for final action and it will pass. The members of the council are unfriendly to the Tri-State company and this is the reason the Northwestern will get the franchise.

School Notes.

The high school sewing classes are now making simple garments for their own use. Some students, of course, excel others in this work, but it is hoped that by the close of the school year that they will have made, and made well, a variety of articles for their own use and for service in their homes. The pupils, after learning the simple stitches, furnish their own material for their sewing.

Warren, Red Lake Falls, East Grand Forks and Crookston are enforcing the compulsory school law. Red Lake Falls reports some 50 children not in school and Deputy Walz has been secured to care for these delinquents when he completes the work in this city.

The school registers for last year disclose the fact that 125 children of school age in Thief River Falls failed to attend school for at least 40 days, thus depriving the district of the state apportionment of about $5 per pupil, which is annually given to those complying with the attendance requirements. To these might be added about 50 more who never even enrolled for any time, causing the city and school district a total loss of about $875. And this, though a large sum, is a slight loss as compared with the loss of school advantages to so many bright young people. The past year has been no exception to former years, as an examination of the school records will show, and that someone took action to remedy this deplorable condition should receive encouragement rather than criticism.

State High School Inspector Aiton and Professor Rankin of the state university visited the local schools Wednesday. The latter gentleman was a frequent visitor to this city in the years past as state inspector of graded schools. He was not a little surprised at the growth and improvement of the city and the substantial nature of the business blocks erected since his last visit.

The Crookston convention was one of the finest meetings ever held in Northwestern Minnesota. The attendance of teachers was so large, that the private homes and hotels of that city could not care for the crowd. Cots were called into use in some of the hotels. The new ideas, and above all, the inspiration and uplift which comes from the associations of such a crowd of teachers, more than repay for the loss and inconvenience of attending the meeting. A paper by Dr. Gambell before the general assembly on Friday afternoon was pronounced one of the best of the days' session. It treated on the necessity of more formal and definite medical examination of schools and school children.

Samuel Pope, a high school student and whose home is six miles southwest of Thief River Falls, walked this distance to school through the drifts last Monday morning, arriving almost as the gong was ringing for 9 o'clock. This desire to make the most of his school opportunities is worthy of mention and speaks volumes for his future success. It is also in most striking contrast to the absence of 32 high school students whose homes are in the city and who failed to answer roll the same morning.

Inquiry among teachers at the Crookston meeting shows that some of the high schools in the Valley are in advance of the local school in the provision they make for instruction in drawing and music, agricultural studies and manual training. Four of these schools are Warren, East Grand Forks, Crookston and McIntosh. Thief River Falls cannot afford to rank second to any of these and it is believed that next year will supply the needed facilities for the presentation of the studies mentioned. It might also be added that the taxrate for school purposes in Thief River Falls is less than in any of the towns named. The Red Lake Falls rate is half again as large as the local school rate, while the rate at East Grand Forks is nearly three times what it is here. The chief reason for the apparent failure to have the studies mentioned taught in the local schools is a lack of room, every inch of space being now utilized for school purposes and still the buildings prove too inadequate.

THE APPLE HARVEST.

Next in importance to raising a good crop of apples which are relatively free from scab and worm at maturity is that of picking and packing the fruit and marketing it in such way that the best prices shall be realized for it. The demands of the markets to which one is tributary will largely determine whether the apples should be packed in boxes or barrels. Boxed fruit should be of good size and color and the bulk of it grade first class. More time is required in boxing than barreling, while as to cost of package it comes to about the same per bushel of fruit packed in either way. In the packing of the fruit hand work only should be allowed, while the best receptacle to pick in is the half bushel basket with wire bale. These can be rigged with wire hook for fastening to limbs so as to prevent spills. The most satisfactory plan when selling to a foreign house is to have their representative in the orchard so that all the fruit may be inspected and approved as packed, and not turned down because "not as represented" when it has been shipped and one is at the tender (?) mercy of the fellow at the other end of the line. If there is any doubt at all as to the straightforwardness of the firm with which one is dealing a full payment for every car shipped should be insisted on before it is billed out, and if there is doubt it would be well not to consign any fruit to them at all. It may seem best to sell the orchard at such and such a figure, apples on trees, the owner being relieved of the job of picking. In any event, however, he will do well to be in the orchard when the picking is done and see that the trees are given considerate treatment. In his own orchard the writer has found it advantageous in getting both color and size to make two pickings on trees that were heavily loaded, the ripest fruit being taken off near the top and on the sunny side of the tree, and the rest being cleaned up a few days later. Color means much in any established apple market, and as a rule buyers are willing to pay an extra price if fruit excels in this respect. For this reason it is well to allow the apples to remain on the trees and get the brightest color possible consistent with firmness and safe handling. The bane of the apple harvest is the rough and careless picker, and as soon as he is located he should be fired, as each day's pack may be injured four times what his wages amount to. In the cleanup after the salable fruit has been disposed of a lot of the culls may be peddled out, sold to evaporators or canning factories, and the remainder made into vinegar. The owner feels much better satisfied with the season's work if there is not a whole lot of fruit going to rot under the trees.

The chief drawback with this going to law over insignificant matters, aside from aggravating the already strained relations existing between the parties interested, is that it usually costs from ten to a hundred times more to get satisfaction by process of law than the sum in dispute amounts to. Thus in the vast majority of cases lawing is neither prudent nor profitable.

QUICK ACTION NEEDED.

In view of the introduction of eggs of the brown tail moth in importations of fruit trees and shrubbery from European countries this season, as well as the European and San Jose scale into localities not heretofore infested, there is suggested the wisdom—the imperative necessity—of a passage of such laws by congress as will provide for the closest inspection at port of entry of all imported nursery stock. This will work no hardship on foreign houses that are careful and whose stock is clean, while it will mean a thorough fumigation or burning of all shipments that are infested. The law might well apply also to all interstate nursery shipments. This much protection is due the horticultural interests of the country. Congressmen should divert their attention from political fences at home, the federal pork barrel and the tariff long enough to give this vital matter immediate attention.

Fruit growers and gardeners in all sections of the country might often largely prevent or decrease the injury which they sustain from insect and fungous pests if they would act at once on the appearance of a new and serious pest in their gardens and orchards. If no one of experience in the vicinity knows just what the pest is and how to combat it, a section of an affected plant or twig with specimens of the insect or slug should be inclosed in a tight covered box and sent to one's state experiment station, where careful investigation will be made and the case reported, with directions for best methods of treatment. Promptness in reporting pest appearances of this kind has often prevented heavy losses in fruit growing sections.

The cow census for Jan. 1, 1909, places the total number at 21,720,000 and worth $702,945,000. This means that the average cow has a value of $32.36.

There is altogether too much truth in the seemingly extravagant statement that if a fellow steals a ham he goes to prison for it, but if he steals a railroad or wrecks a bank he goes scot free.

The crabgrass, one of the worst of garden pests, is fortunately only an annual—lives but a year—and hence if it is kept from going to seed in August or September it will be knocked out for next year. Elbow grease and perseverance are the requisites in exterminating it.

A road treated with the road drag acquires character, so to speak, as time passes. One treatment keeps it from getting into as bad shape during the next wet spell, and so on with every subsequent treatment until it becomes well nigh impervious to surface water and much less susceptible to indentations from the traffic which passes over it.

A fruit grower who is the recipient of the very useful service which the birds render him in the destruction of a multitude of insect pests which but for their intervention would consume about everything he produced and then denies them a bite of his tempting fruit as sort of a reward, is absolutely too mean and stingy to live among civilized, fair minded folks. He should have a ring put in his nose and turned out with the porkers.

The child in the home who is made to think that the world—including everybody in the home—revolves around and must pay homage to him has some heartbreaking experiences ahead before he gets his ideas of the relation of the luminaries in his solar system properly adjusted. This early imbibed misconception often makes trouble for the youngster and a lot of grief and embarrassment for the folks who have to live and associate with him.

The horse census for the past two years, as compiled by the bureau of animal statistics, has some interesting figures. It shows that on Jan. 1, 1908, there were in the country 19,992,000 horses having a total value of $1,867,530,000, giving an average of $93.41 per head. A year later, Jan. 1, 1909, the number had increased to 20,640,000 and the total value to $1,974,052,000, which gives an average price of $95.64. This shows that there has been a gain of $2.23 per head. The average price of horses per head ten years ago was $60.25.

Farmers and gardeners in Massachusetts are suffering considerable damage from deer, the killing of which has been prohibited for a number of years past and are now asking the legislature for permission to kill marauding deer which appear on their premises. The deer seem to realize that they are privileged characters and presuming on this have become so bold that they invade farm fields and gardens and do much damage in a single night. This is an illustration of a protection which has been carried too far and is overdone. Permission to kill trespassing animals would doubtless put a stop to the nuisance and make them seek uncultivated fields and timber lots.

There ought to be an enthusiastic member of an Audubon society in every state legislature in the country, simply that some one posted on the subject of the economic importance of birds might be on hand to give legislators wholesome and hard headed advice to keep them from unwittingly passing laws permitting the destruction of useful birds. The need of this has been suggested by an act lately passed by the Minnesota legislature, giving towns and counties the right to a bounty for killing blackbirds and crows. Nothing much can be said for the crow, barring his utility as a scavenger, but it is different with the blackbird, which is classed as one of the useful birds. Had some one been on hand at the time this bill was passed to present the case for the blackbird it is doubtful if such a measure would have passed.

The legislature of North Dakota has this year passed a law preventing the sale of impure, adulterated and noxious seeds. The bill does not apply to seeds which were sold for this year's crop, as the supplies of seeds were in stock before the measure was enacted, but does include those offered for sale for sowing purposes after July 1. Steps are being taken to equip a seed laboratory where samples gathered by inspectors and sent in may be analyzed. The chief requirements of the new law are that persons selling or exposing seeds for sale shall attach a label showing the name of the person or firm responsible for the sale of the seeds; also the name of the kind of seed offered. It prohibits the sale of seeds containing the seeds of quack grass, sow thistle, Canada thistle and dodder, and demands that varieties of seeds shall be reasonably true to name. The new law does not interfere with seeds in transit or with seeds being sold for food, manufacture or cleaning. Uncleaned seeds offered for sowing purposes must be plainly labeled "uncleaned," so that the buyer will know just what he is getting.

MOORISH SOLDIERS.

Their Methods In Battle and Their System of Signals.

At fighting on horseback the Moors are adepts and extremely mobile. But they are incorrigibly lazy and seldom indulge in night attack. When they attack in force the horsemen usually give a lift to the foot soldiers who accompany them or allow them to run alongside and hold on to a stirrup iron. The mounted men then make a charge, wheel round and retire and make way for the footmen, who crawl along the ground, almost invisible, and who rise to the attack if they come within striking distance of the enemy. As a rule, the Riffians prefer to lure detached parties into an ambush or defile and thus inflict heavy loss upon them. The mounted men seldom dismount to fire, and their firing, being from the saddle, is very inaccurate. Should the advance of the white troops be slow or hesitating the Moors effect a bold combination between horsemen and footmen and generally succeed in inflicting heavy losses on their enemy.

The prime tactics of the Moors are to delay the advance of an enemy as much as possible by mounted rifle fire until they can discern its extent and direction and subsequently to try enveloping the advancing force. The tribes also indulge in sniping, but not to a very great extent, and they also fight individually. They do not neglect opportunities for stratagem and can effect some very clever ruses. They are also guilty of abusing the services of the white flag in action.

The Moorish intelligence system is an excellent one, and the tribes are seldom without information regarding the movements of an enemy. They have also an excellent system of signaling at night by means of small fires dotted about the hills and ravines, which are obscured and revealed in accordance with an ingenious code of signals known to themselves.—Chicago News.

DREAM INSPIRATION.

Intellectual Achievements Born of Visions In Sleep.

It is well known, says H. Addington Bruce in Success Magazine, that dreams have stimulated men to remarkable intellectual achievements and have even supplied the material for these achievements. Thus Coleridge composed "Kubla Khan" in a dream. Tartini got his "Devil's Sonata" from a dream in which the devil appeared and challenged him to a musical competition. It was a dream that gave Voltaire the first canto of his "Henriade," and Dante's "Divina Commedia" is likewise said to have been inspired by a dream.

Many novelists on their own admission have obtained the plots for some of their best works from materials provided in dreams. A particularly impressive instance is that of Robert Louis Stevenson, whose "Chapter on Dreams" in his book "Across the Plains" should be read by all who would learn what dreams can do for a man intellectually. The solution of baffling mathematical problems, the ideas necessary to complete some invention, have been supplied by dreams. Occasionally the dreamer has been known to rise in his sleep and jot down the information thus acquired.

In such cases he usually forgets all about the helpful dream and on awaking is greatly surprised at finding the record he has made of it, which shows that—as with the visions so potently influencing health—it is possible for dreams to aid a man in an intellectual way without his being consciously aware of them.

Bird's Milk.

"I fed him with bird's milk." This curious expression was used by the old sultan of Turkey, while a prisoner on his way to Saloniki, with reference to his brother Mohammed, his predecessor on the throne. Abdul Hamid was lamenting his own fate and telling his captors how little he deserved it and how kind he had been to his brother. "I fed him with bird's milk," he said, as if that were the greatest kindness he could show. What is bird's milk? Not the Turkish equivalent of the milk of human kindness, but a European brand of condensed milk bearing on the can a picture of a bird on a nest.

STUDY OF JAPANESE.

Difficulties of the Spoken and the Written Language.

Army officers who are thinking of taking up the study of Japanese should pause before they attempt the task and ask themselves whether they have a peculiarly strong linguistic aptitude. Even the Japanese find their language very difficult. The Anglo-Saxons who growl about the difficulties of our spelling and favor the simplified system would never live if they had to undergo what the subject of the mikado suffers in the matter of language.

It takes a Japanese child seven years to learn the essential parts of the alphabet. There are 214 signs which serve the same purpose as initial letters in English dictionaries. Then after you have tracked down in one of these 214 signs some part of the character for which you are about to make a search you still have a veritable darkest Africa ahead of you. The pompous first personal pronoun is avoided whenever it is possible in speaking Japanese. If it must be used it is introduced casually, but generally the abstract noun "selfishness" serves in its stead.

For example, a Japanese would not say, "I don't drink wine," but "Wine don't drink," or, if this is not clear enough, "Selfishness wine don't drink." Reference to your possessions must be deprecatory. Thus if a man wishes to point out his own residence he says, "That miserable house," which, of course, could refer to no other than his own.

On the other hand, "That beautiful house" would easily identify the house as belonging to some one else. Moreover, any one who wishes to learn Japanese must be prepared to learn two languages—the written and the spoken. The one differs so materially from the other that if a Japanese is reading a book or newspaper and wishes to do so aloud it becomes necessary for him to translate the written words into the colloquial. To be able to read any of the higher class Japanese newspapers it is necessary to master at least from 2,500 to 3,000 ideographs.—Army and Navy Journal.

PROMPT TO ACT.

A Man Who Seemed Always to Be Ready For Emergencies.

To be ready for emergencies was one of the gifts of Dr. Samuel Gridley Howe, the great teacher of the blind, writes his daughter, Mrs. Laura E. Richards, who has edited his "Letters and Journals." She gives several instances in which his quick action prevented serious accidents.

Once at Green Peace my father was going to drive with my mother and my sister Florence in a closed carriage with a large window in front.

As the driver was mounting the box he dropped his whip and got down to recover it. This startled the young horses, and they bolted down the driveway.

My father tried to open the big window, but it stuck fast. He flashed through the plate glass as if it had been paper and, catching up the reins, stopped the runaways in less time than it takes to tell it.

When Thomas came running up, white and breathless, he found "doctor" quietly shaking the bits of glass from his coat and hat and explaining to my terrified mother that he "went so quick there was no time to get cut."

Still another memory of my mother's shows his quickness in a different way. He was walking along Washington street one day when a furious dog rushed at him and bit his hand severely.

There was no Pasteur institute in the forties. My father instantly raised up the skin and flesh of the bitten part and, holding it firmly, entered the nearest apothecary's shop.

"Cut this piece off," he said briefly.

The apothecary exclaimed in horror. He could not, he would not, without a surgeon's order. It was out of the question.

"I am a surgeon," said my father, "and I command you to cut it off."

It was cut off. My father dressed the wound with his other hand and went about his business.

Made Him Sick.

A noted golfer one afternoon played rather badly. He turned to his caddie after he had foozled a drive and said in his genial way:

"This isn't a pleasant spectacle for you. I'm as bad as a Scotch laird at St. Andrews. The St. Andrews caddies are all old men, and one day when this laird was in especially bad form his caddie, after nine holes of missed shots and putts, shook his gray old head, surrendered the laird's bag of clubs to another caddie and said:

"'Ye'll no mind, laird? I made but a poor breakfast this mornin', and I'm no in a condition to stand any mair o't.'"

The Navel Orange.

The first we know of the navel orange, which is very valuable not only on account of its fine quality and taste, but also because of its being seedless, is of a single tree that was found growing on the northern shore of the Mediterranean sea. This was about the year 1565. Grafts of this tree were taken to Spain by the Moors several hundred years ago, and from Spain the trees were carried to South America by the Spaniards.—St. Nicholas.

FOOLED THE CITY.

One of the Hoaxes Perpetrated by Theodore Hook.

In the early part of the nineteenth century great preparations were made in England to receive a Spanish ambassador who was expected to arrive at Southampton. A mischievous idea came into the head of Theodore Hook (born 1788, died 1841), novelist and journalist and above all contriver of that diversion known as the hoax. The English fleet was lying off Southampton. Hook, then a young man, knew many of the younger officers. He formed his scheme, and one morning a launch set out from the fleet and drew up at the quay.

In this launch was he who purported to be the Spanish ambassador in almost royal robes, arrived two days before the expected time. The mayor of Southampton, who was to receive the Spanish envoy, was greatly flustered. It was all so sudden. He did the best he could. Several companies of soldiers, some on foot, some mounted, were called out. The bells were rung. The ambassador, accompanied by a number of young officers of the fleet, was escorted with much pomp to the mayor's palace. There was a banquet and speechmaking, one of the young officers acting as interpreter for the ambassador.

After it was over and the Spanish envoy was supposed to be on his way to London the true ambassador arrived. There was but a sorry reception for him. The other ambassador, who was Theodore Hook, having perpetrated the greatest hoax ever known on a mayor and a city, had exhausted the hospitality of the town. The scandal was so great, the mayor and the people of Southampton had been so outrageously cold, that to make any stir about the affair would only cause them to be laughed at all the more. With the exception of the dismissal of some of the naval officers who had taken part in it little was done, and the affair was allowed to blow over.—Indianapolis News.

MASTERING A LION.

Exciting Experience of a Famous Animal Trainer.

"Show a lion that you are his master and he will be submissive; once permit him to get the notion that you fear him and his antipathy will increase," said Frank C. Bostock, the famous animal trainer.

In illustration of the lengths to which owners of wild beasts will go in order to retain control of them Bostock told the following story:

"Some years ago when we were at the Hippodrome, in Paris, I decided as a special attraction to go into the arena with Wallace, a huge African lion that all our trainers had despaired of. The house was crowded. We placed the lion in a cage sixteen feet square, and this was put inside a twenty foot ring. Two assistants were stationed in the outer ring in case of accident. I had scarcely got inside when the beast leaped at me. It bit right through my left hand and with one blow ripped the flesh off my back. 'Clear out!' I shouted to the two men in the outer ring. 'I am going to open the doors and let him into the big arena.'

"I was as furious as the lion. My pride as a trainer was wounded deeper than my back. I flung open the doors, and the lion sprang out. The blood was pouring from my wounds, but in the excitement of the moment I felt no pain—only a mad desire to be master. I picked up a 'property' chair, and when the beast came again I struck it full across the muzzle; then, seizing my whip, I actually became the aggressor.

"The audience was in something like a panic, and loud cries of 'Enough, enough!' were raised. But I hadn't finished. In ten minutes I had subjugated Wallace to such an extent that he cowered like a dog. I got out of the cage and just fainted away. From that day no one attempted to teach Wallace."—Pearson's Weekly.

The Good Dinner.

The successful housekeeper was planning a dinner for a few of her husband's friends.

"I must have apple pie and cheese for dessert," she remarked without a flicker of indecision.

"But I should think you would want something more dainty this time of year," suggested the woman who always worried herself sick over a company dinner, "an ice or a frozen pudding."

"Oh, but apple pie is my husband's favorite dish! When he has company I always serve what he likes best; then he thinks his guests have had such a good dinner, and everybody is happy. At least my husband and I are happy, and if the guests aren't no one is the wiser."—New York Press.

Bible Eating.

I am told by a lady resident that in the Hampshire parish in which I am writing there is living at the present time a good woman who once ate a New Testament, day by day and leaf by leaf, between two slices of bread and butter, as a remedy for fits. This was treating the Bible as a fetich with a vengeance.—London Notes and Queries.

PLAYING THE STOCKS.

He Who Has Knowledge and He Who Gambles on Gossip.

Of the many popular delusions touching Wall street and its people none is more persistent or more dangerous to the outsider than the belief that from nothing great permanent fortunes have been made by shrewd and lucky speculation in prices. It isn't true. We differentiate here between speculation in prices only and the kind of legitimate speculation which seeks to anticipate great economic changes. Legitimate speculation has its translation into prices, too, but it takes, first, original capital in some reasonable proportion to the profits expected and, secondly, the treatment of exceptional opportunity with correct imagination. Its risks at best are very large. Among our Wall street acquaintances are several hard headed men who succeed in making $25,000 a year by speculation. Not one of them has a capital of less than $250,000. They make it earn about 10 per cent.

Take Blank, one of the ablest speculators we know. He has made half a million dollars during the past five years. Very handsome return, you say. Let us look at Blank. He was the chief accountant of one of the big railway systems when an uncle, dying, left him $20,000. Mind you, he was an expert railway statistician and an exceptionally able young man to boot. He knew his own road like a book, as well as some other things that only the directors were aware of. The stock of the system looked cheap to him, and he used his $20,000 to margin 4,000 shares. A bull market was beginning, and within a month or two Blank's capital had increased to $60,000. He was content with a ten point rise, though the stock advanced ten points more. That was the first of Blank's deals. Twelve months later he won again. He thought that the stock of a certain western system was selling below its value and set about an investigation to find the facts. He hired a first class engineer and a retired traffic manager to travel from one end of that railroad to the other, and he himself analyzed the accounts. When all the reports were in it seemed to him that the system was earning enough money to justify an increase of its dividend, and he plunged once more. He waited six months for his point this time, and his investigation had cost him $5,000. He made $50,000. Good interest, you say, but think of Blank's special equipment for the game and the trouble he took to be right. You, Mr. Thinmarginist, after reading the Wall street gossip in your daily paper, adventure your thousand or two thousand dollars and expect to double your money. Mark the difference.—John Parr in Everybody's Magazine.

Tennyson's First Poems.

The wind came sweeping through the garden of an old Lincolnshire rectory one morning in the beginning of last century and blew upon a child of five years old, who opened his arms to the blast and let it carry him along, crying as he traveled, "I hear a voice that's calling in the wind." That was Tennyson's first line of poetry. The first poem he ever composed was written upon a slate one Sunday morning at Louth. The subject, set him by his brother Charles, was "Flowers," and little Alfred covered his slate with blank verse after the model of Thomson's "Seasons." His next attempt was an elegy upon his grandmother, who had just died, written at the request of his grandfather. When it was written the old man put 10 shillings into the boy's hand and said, "There, that is the first money you have ever earned by your poetry, and, take my word for it, it will be the last."—Westminster Gazette.

Opening an Oyster.

"The Cook's Oracle," a book which was never far from the kitchens of our great-grandmothers, is very precise in its directions as to the proper manner of preserving and eating oysters, says an English journal. "The true lover of an oyster," writes the author, "will have some regard for the feelings of his little favorite and will never abandon it to the mercies of a bungling operator, but will open it himself and contrive to detach the fish from the shell so dexterously that the oyster is hardly conscious he has been ejected from his lodging till he feels the teeth of the piscivorous gourmand tickling him to death."

This Was In Denmark.

An Englishman having business in a certain Danish town arrived at the railway station. He inquired of a group of men standing near the way to the house he wanted, whereupon one of them offered to go with him and show him. With recollections of what such a service meant in England he said, "I don't want a guide." "But surely you asked us to show you the way," said one of them. "Yes, but I don't want a guide." "My dear sir, I am not a guide; I am the bishop."

Charles E. Vasaly, of Little Falls, is receiving much favorable mention as the proper man for the Democrats to nominate for governor. We hope he is not nominated, because we think it is time to elect a Republican governor and if Mr. Vasaly was nominated by the Democrats we would have to support him. There is not a better or squarer man in the state, and some day he will be elected governor of this state.

STATE AID FOR SCHOOLS

Money Is For Red Lake Falls, Thief River Falls and St. Hilaire Schools.

State Aid In Addition To Apportionment Has Been Received.

County Auditor A. A. Latendresse last week received the state aid money for the high schools at Red Lake Falls and Thief River Falls and the state graded school at St. Hilaire. The high schools receive $1900 each. This is $150 more than the regular amount of state aid for schools, but there was a deficiency of $50 in 1907 and $100 in 1908 and the deficiency is made up at this time. Thief River Falls gets an additional $750 because of the maintenance of a normal department. The amount of the state aid for the graded school at St. Hilaire is $655.

The state aid received at this time is in addition to the apportionment money received recently. A few weeks ago $11,400 was received. All of the schools of the county will be benefited by the apportionment money each school receiving $3 for each pupil attending school the required number of days.

The apportionment money is received semi-annually, the state aid for high schools and graded schools annually.

Mill Shut Down.

The big saw mill closed down for the season Saturday night. The season's run has been a very successful one, and there were but few days the mill did not run. There is a large supply of logs in the river and as soon as the ice goes out in the spring the mill will again be started up. Most of the men employed in the mill this summer will leave in a few days for the woods to work during the winter.

NO NEED OF A BRIDGE

That Is if All of the Residents East of Here Were Like Thresherman John Johnson.

Forded the Red Lake River With His Outfit Up Near Kratka Last Week.

John Johnson, a thresherman, did a stunt last Friday morning that will effectively stop W. G. Hunt and others keeping up the howl that a bridge across the Red Lake River east of here is a necessity. Mr. Johnson lives in the town of Clover Leaf and early this fall took his threshing rig across the Red Lake river in a ferry boat to do some threshing for farmers on the south side of the river. In going across the ferry boat was broken and could not take his rig back. The only thing for Mr. Johnson to do was to wait until the river froze over or until Hunt built his bridge, so all of the people up there thought. Not so with Mr. Johnson. There was a whole lot of good threshing jobs on the north side of the river that he wanted and he was determined to get across. He took his engine to the river, ran it out until the water got up as high as the boiler and then blew off the steam, and had teams on the other side of the river haul it across. The water was from seven to eight feet deep where he crossed and when the engine was in the middle of the river nothing but the smoke stack could be seen. In the same manner he took the separator and water wagon across and that afternoon started upon a job of threshing. About fifty people witnessed the fording of the river by Mr. Johnson and all were confident he could not make it. The river was crossed near Kratka postoffice.

To one who has traveled through the great corn belt and viewed the endless fields devoted to the culture of this great cereal it will be interesting to know what becomes of the enormous crop which is harvested annually. Of the 1908 crop, which totaled 2,630,000,000 bushels, 241,000,000 bushels were consumed in making flour and grist-mill products, 8,000,000 in the manufacture of starch, 9,000,000 for malt liquors, 17,000,000 in the production of distilled liquors, 40,000,000 for glucose, 190,000,000 for export and 13,000,000 for seed, making a total of 518,000,000 bushels, or a trifle less than 20 per cent of the total crop. The remaining 80 per cent, 2,118,000,000 bushels, was used almost entirely for feeding purposes.

The grass and alfalfa fed cattle and sheep of the plains of Argentina are coming to be serious competitors of those produced in America and finished for market on the more expensive grain ration. The past year Argentina sent more meat products to the English markets than did the United States, and it was in prime condition without a bit of corn. Added to a cheap ration is the fact that it costs no more to transport stock or meat products from Argentina than it does from Chicago.

A good many farm places here and there do not present as attractive an appearance as they might because in the laying out of the grounds for house and outbuildings a position of undue conspicuousness has been given the hog houses and yards. Thus placed they are not only unsightly to those who live on the place, but detract much from its appearance to passers-by. While hogs are an important factor in the farm economy in many sections, the place for their pens is out back of the barn.

Corn experts are coming to look upon the Silver King, a type originated in northern Iowa and developed by the Wisconsin experiment station, as a heavy yielding, early maturing variety, which can be grown safely in the northern part of the corn belt. The ears are large, kernels a trifle coarse, but of good depth, while the corn plant is rank, strong and vigorous. Where corn growers have not yet secured a type of corn with which they are satisfied it would be well to give this variety a trial. It can be secured from any reliable house, and the seed should be grown north rather than south of the latitude where it is to be planted. Like all other seed corn, it should be bought on the ear.

THE SKUNK CABBAGE.

Botanists seem agreed that a distinct purpose is served in nature's economy in the foul odor which characterizes the carrion fungus, or skunk cabbage. The stalk of this variety of fungus is hollow, and on its top is borne a wrinkled cap perforated in the middle by an opening. The surface of the cap is covered with a slimy greenish-black mass of spores and mucilage. Various flies and burying beetles, deceived by this odor, are attracted to it in the supposition that it is decaying animal matter. Alighting, their feet become smeared with spores and mucilage, which they carry away and distribute, getting nothing for their pains. A Brazilian relative of the stinkhorn, besides practicing the deceits mentioned, has a conspicuous white veil hanging down from the cap, which travelers say is slightly phosphorescent at night, which causes nocturnal insects to be drawn to it.

Examinations for teachers in the government employ in the Philippines are to be held in differenent parts of the state in the near future. The first question a woman teacher will be asked is, "Are you a wife or relative of or engaged to any man employed in the Philippines?" If she answers "No," it disqualifies her; if she answers "Yes," the rest of the examination is easy.

It will be surprising for many to learn that Minnesota corn beat Iowa on the average number of bushels per acre. The average per acre of corn in Minnesota was 35½ bushels per acre while the Iowa yield was less than 34 bushels. The corn belt in Minnesota is being gradually extended north and in a few years corn will be successfully raised in all sections of the state.

Life of Gov. Johnson.

Frank A. Day, private secretary of the late Governor Johnson, has undertaken to write and publish a biography of the lamented Governor. He does this at the request of Mrs. Johnson, and as the most intimate friend, perhaps, that the late Governor had, he is undoubtedly peculiarly qualified for the task. There are thousands of friends of the late Governor who would like to have some permanent record and memorial of his life and works. It would seem as if there sould be a great demand for such a biography as Mr. Day proposes to issue. The book will be about four hundred pages and will be well bound and typographically perfect. The book will be profusely and handsomely illustrated, and will be in every respect a publication worthy of a place in every Minnesota home. Governor Johnson's life was an inspiration to every ambitious boy and girl, and a record of that life on the library table will be a valuable contribution to the education of the children. We understand that Mr. Day will distribute the book through the medium of agents to be appointed in every county of the state.

THE LOVE PHILTER OF IKEY SCHOENSTEIN

Wedding Bells Rang, Though the Potion Went Astray.

By O. HENRY.

[Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.]

The Blue Light drug store is downtown, between the Bowery and First avenue, where the distance between the two streets is the shortest. The Blue Light does not consider that pharmacy is a thing of bric-a-brac, scent and ice cream soda. If you ask it for pain killer it will not give you a bonbon.

The Blue Light scorns the labor saving arts of modern pharmacy. It macerates its opium and percolates its own laudanum and paregoric. To this day pills are made behind its tall prescription desk—pills rolled out on its own pill tile, divided with a spatula, rolled with the finger and thumb, dusted with calcined magnesia and delivered in little round pasteboard pill boxes. The store is on a corner about which coveys of ragged-plumed, hilarious children play and become candidates for the cough drops and soothing sirups that wait for them inside.

Ikey Schoenstein was the night clerk of the Blue Light and the friend of his customers. Thus it is on the east side, where the heart of pharmacy is not glace. There, as it should be, the druggist is a counselor, a confessor, an adviser, an able and willing missionary and mentor whose learning is respected, whose occult wisdom is venerated and whose medicine is often poured, untasted, into the gutter. Therefore Ikey's corniform, bespectacled nose and narrow, knowledge bowed figure was well known in the vicinity of the Blue Light, and his advice and notice were much desired.

Ikey roomed and breakfasted at Mrs. Riddle's, two squares away. Mrs. Riddle had a daughter named Rosy. The circumlocution has been in vain—you must have guessed it—Ikey adored Rosy. She tinctured all his thoughts. She was the compound extract of all that was chemically pure and officinal. The dispensatory contained nothing equal to her. But Ikey was timid, and his hopes remained insoluble in the menstruum of his backwardness and fears. Behind his counter he was a superior being, calmly conscious of special knowledge and worth. Outside he was a weakkneed, purblind, motorman cursed rambler, with ill fitting clothes stained with chemicals and smelling of socotrine aloes and valerianate of ammonia.

The fly in Ikey's ointment (thrice welcome, pat trope!) was Chunk McGowan.

Mr. McGowan was also striving to catch the bright smiles tossed about by Rosy. But he was no outfielder, as Ikey was. He picked them off the bat. At the same time he was Ikey's friend and customer and often dropped in at the Blue Light drug store to have a bruise painted with iodine or get a cut rubber plastered after a pleasant evening spent along the Bowery.

One afternoon McGowan drifted in in his silent, easy way and sat, comely, smooth faced, hard, indomitable, good natured, upon a stool.

"Ikey," said he when his friend had fetched his mortar and sat opposite, grinding gum benzoin to a powder, "get busy with your ear. It's drugs for me if you've got the line I need."

Ikey scanned the countenance of Mr. McGowan for the usual evidences of conflict, but found none.

"Take your coat off," he ordered. "I guess already that you have been stuck in the ribs with a knife. I have many times told you those dagoes would do you up."

Mr. McGowan smiled. "Not them," he said, "not any dagoes. But you've located the diagnosis all right enough—it's under my coat, near the ribs. Say, Ikey, Rosy and me are goin' to run away and get married tonight."

Ikey's left forefinger was doubled over the edge of the mortar, holding it steady. He gave it a wild rap with the pestle, but felt it not. Meanwhile Mr. McGowan's smile faded to a look of perplexed gloom.

"That is," he continued, "if she keeps in the notion until the time comes. We've been layin' pipes for the getaway for two weeks. One day she says she will. The same evenin' she says nixy. We've agreed on tonight, and Rosy's stuck to the affirmative this time for two whole days. But it's five hours yet till the time, and I'm afraid she'll stand me up when it comes to the scratch."

"You said you wanted drugs," remarked Ikey.

Mr. McGowan looked ill at ease and harassed—a condition opposed to his usual line of demeanor. He made a patent medicine almanac into a roll and fitted it with unprofitable carefulness about his finger.

"I wouldn't have this double handicap make a false start tonight for a million," he said. "I've got a little flat up in Harlem all ready, with chrysanthemums on the table and a kettle ready to boil. And I've engaged a pulpit pounder to be ready at his house for us at 9:30. It's got to come off. And if Rosy don't change her mind again"— Mr. McGowan ceased, a prey to his doubts.

"I don't see then yet," said Ikey shortly, "what makes it that you talk of drugs or what I can be doing about it."

"Old man Riddle don't like me a little bit," went on the uneasy suitor, bent upon marshaling his arguments. "For a week he hasn't let Rosy step outside the door with me. If it wasn't for losin' a boarder they'd have bounced me long ago. I'm makin' $20 a week, an' she'll never regret flyin' the coop with Chunk McGowan."

"You will excuse me, Chunk," said Ikey. "I must make a prescription that is to be called for soon."

"Say," said McGowan, looking up suddenly—"say, Ikey, ain't there a drug of some kind—some kind of powders—that'll make a girl like you better if you give 'em to her?"

Ikey's lip beneath his nose curled with scorn of superior enlightenment, but before he could answer McGowan continued:

"Tim Lacy told me he got some once from a croaker uptown and fed 'em to his girl in soda water. From the very first dose he was ace high and everybody else looked like 30 cents to her. They was married in less than two weeks."

Strong and simple was Chunk McGowan. A better reader of men than Ikey was could have seen that his tough frame was strung upon fine wires. Like a good general who was about to invade the enemy's territory, he was seeking to guard every point against possible failure.

"I thought," went on Chunk hopefully, "that if I had one of them powders to give Rosy when I see her at supper tonight it might brace her up and keep her from reneging on the proposition to skip. I guess she don't need a mule team to drag her away, but women are better at coaching than they are at running bases. If the stuff 'll work just for a couple of hours it'll do the trick."

"When is this foolishness of running away to be happening?" asked Ikey.

"Nine o'clock," said Mr. McGowan. "Supper 's at 7. At 8 Rosy goes to bed with a headache. At 9 old Parvenzano lets me through to his back yard, where ther 's a board off Riddle's fence, next door. I go under her window and help her down the fire escape. We've got to make it early on the preacher's account. It's all dead easy if Rosy don't balk when the flag drops. Can you fix me one of them powders, Ikey?"

Ikey Schoenstein rubbed his nose slowly.

"Chunk," said he, "it is of drugs of that nature that pharmaceutists must have much carefulness. To you alone of my acquaintance would I intrust a powder like that. But for you I shall make it, and you shall see how it makes Rosy to think of you."

Ikey went behind the prescription desk. There he crushed to a powder two soluble tablets, each containing a quarter of a grain of morphia. To them he added a little sugar of milk to increase the bulk and folded the mixture neatly in a white paper. Taken by an adult this powder would insure several hours of heavy slumber without danger to the sleeper. This he handed to Chunk McGowan, telling him to administer it in a liquid if possible and received the hearty thanks of the back yard Lochinvar.

The subtlety of Ikey's action becomes apparent upon recital of his subsequent move. He sent a messenger for Mr. Riddle and disclosed the plans of Mr. McGowan for eloping with Rosy. Mr. Riddle was a stout man, brick dusty of complexion and sudden in action.

"Much obliged," he said briefly to Ikey. "The lazy Irish loafer! My own room's just above Rosy's. I'll just go up there myself after supper and load the shotgun and wait. If he comes in my back yard he'll go away in a ambulance instead of a bridal chaise."

With Rosy held in the clutches of Morpheus for many hours deep slumber and the bloodthirsty parent waiting, armed and forewarned, Ikey felt that his rival was close indeed upon discomfiture.

All night in the Blue Light drug store he waited at his duties for chance news of the tragedy, but none came.

At 8 o'clock in the morning the day clerk arrived, and Ikey started hurriedly for Mrs. Riddle's to learn the outcome. And, lo, as he stepped out of the store who but Chunk McGowan sprang from a passing street car and grasped his hand—Chunk McGowan, with a victor's smile and flushed with joy.

"Pulled it off," said Chunk, with elysium in his grin. "Rosy hit the fire escape on time to a second, and we was under the wire at the reverend's at 9.30½. She's up at the flat—she cooked eggs this mornin' in a blue kimono. Lord, how lucky I am! You must pace up some day, Ikey, and feed with us. I've got a job down near the bridge, and that's where I'm headin' for now."

"The—the—powder?" stammered Ikey.

"Oh, that stuff you gave me!" said Chunk, broadening his grin. "Well, it was this way. I sat down at the supper table last night at Riddle's, and I looked at Rosy, and I says to myself: 'Chunk, if you get the girl get her on the square. Don't try any hocus pocus with a thoroughbred like her.' And I keeps the paper you give me in my pocket. And then my lamps fall on another party present, who, I says to myself, is failin' in a proper affection toward his comin' son-in-law, so I watches my chance and dumps that powder in old man Riddle's coffee. See?"

CHUNK M'GOWAN SPRANG FROM A PASSING STREET CAR.

Women and Eating.

"Considerable fun has been poked at women for their choice of viands in public eating places," said a trained observer, "but I've noticed that even there they are more sensible than men in some respects. Three large, middle aged women were taking luncheon near my table the other noon. The largest woman, who was dressed in black, called for two portions of broiled fish and bread and butter. There was an abundance for the trio, and when the fish course had been finished the waiter asked them if they would have something else.

"'Nothing more,' said the largest woman, who was paying the check, and she said it in a determined sort of way that brought the repast to an abrupt close. You might have thought that they were never going to have anything more to eat as long as they lived.

"Now, if a man invites friends to take luncheon with him he orders twice as much as anybody wants and then keeps on ordering, through ice cream, coffee, crackers and cheese and cordials, for fear that he'll be set down as scrimpy. The guests of that largest woman couldn't have got another bite if they had sat up and begged for it."—Providence Tribune.

The Doctor's Gift.

Dr. Robert Glynn-Clobery, a delightful old character described in "Reminiscences of Cambridge," was a fellow of King's college, where he resided. During a long illness he attended a poor man, of whose family party a pert, talkative magpie made one, and as the patient observed that Dr. Glynn-Clobery always when paying a visit had some joke with the bird he thought that perhaps the doctor might like to possess it.

Accordingly, when the poor man was well again, with overflowing gratitude, but with no money to pay a bill, he thought he could do no better than make his kind friend a present of the magpie, and so the prisoner in its cage was conveyed to his rooms in King's college.

The bearer met with a kind reception, but was desired to carry the bird back with him.

"I cannot," said the doctor, "take so good care of it as can you, but I shall consider it mine, and I intrust it to you to keep for me, and as long as it lives I will pay you half a crown weekly for its maintenance."

A Hard Working River.

The hardest working river, the one most thoroughly harnessed to the mill wheels of labor in the United States, probably in the world, is the Blackstone. It is not a large river either. Its drainage area is only about 458 square miles, and in its power producing section it is only forty-three miles long, a very Tom Thumb of a river as rivers go in America. Yet the doughty little stream produces 23,000 horsepower, fifty for every square mile of its drainage area. If you will figure out this amount of horsepower in terms of coal you will find that the busy little stream represents a capitalization of about $25,000,000. This is twice the developed horsepower of any other important river.

Almost a hundred mills, catching with their whirling turbines its water almost from the very source in the city of Worcester, Mass., line its banks and grow in size and importance till in Woonsocket and Pawtucket, R. I., you have some of the largest of their kind in the country.—Technical World Magazine.

$8.50 HEDGETHORN PUNCTURE-PROOF SELF-HEALING TIRES A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. Sixty thousand pairs sold last year. Over two hundred thousand pairs now in use.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

BLOWING UP OF STREET CARS

Practice Continues in Stockholm and Vicinity in Spite of the Most Vigorous Alertness on the Part of the Police—No Great Damage Has Thus Far Resulted and No One Has Been Seriously Injured by the Explosions.

SWEDEN.

The attempts to blow up street cars in Stockholm continue and in spite of the most vigorous alertness on the part of the police, it seems impossible to check this nefarious practice. There have been at least five different attempts, which are of a similar nature to those reported in our last letter, viz., to place a bomb on the track, thus seeking to blow up or wreck cars. The other evening while a car on the so called red line was passing between Haga and Hagalund, a number of heavy rocks came crashing through the windows, but peculiarly enough none of the passengers were injured. One of the rocks grazed the head of a woman passenger and had it struck her it would have killed her instantly, judging from its size and from the force with which it came crashing through the window. A bomb was placed on the street car tracks on the Narva road near Linne street, but it only half exploded and one one was injured.

If one considers that there were 300,000 men out of employment from Aug. 4 to Sept. 5, that is twenty-eight working days, it is learned that Sweden's industries, at which at least 400,000 men are employed, sustained a loss aggregating at least 8,000,000 crowns. This means in addition that the strikers have lost during this period at least 30,000,000 crowns. The value of Sweden's industrial output for one year is approximately fifteen hundred million crowns. Thus it will be seen that the recent strike proved a most disastrous one for the country as a whole and has been productive of more harm than good. The condition of the laboring man today in Sweden is, if anything worse than ever. It is evident, too, that the power of the socialists have received a tremendous blow and still no one attempts to deny but what the condition of the poor laboring man is a most deplorable one in Sweden.

Finland's independence appears to be waning and Russia apparently will not rest until she has succeeded in wiping out the last vestige of it. An editorial in a Swedish daily makes the following warning: "What has happened to Finland and what is going to happen to her, may present many difficulties for our politicians, and maybe great danger to our country. May we, therefore, be attentive, understand and wait. Russia may be a good friend or a very dangerous enemy. Finland as such can be neither. It will be best for us to receive with open arms whatever Swedish elements will seek refuge on our shores from Finland, but keep out what is specifically Finnish.

There are a great many things that contribute to make the work of the anti-emigration society difficult. The recent election in Gothenburg, furnishes a striking example. It shows up a deplorable condition of affairs, and little wonder then that people feel like emigrating from the country. Out of a total of 29,925 voters in the district only 8,567 were allowed to vote, because of failure to pay taxes or other public duties during the year. Of those qualified only 63 per cent voted so that about one-fifth of the voters had a voice in the election.

Mrs. Nydia Sampson, a pianiste of wonderful attainments, has created much comment in Stockholm recently through playing any selection that is placed before her in spite of the fact that a handkerchief is tied very tightly over her eyes. The most difficult selections have been placed before her, but she comes through every one of them most brilliantly and executes with the greatest precision and feeling. No one has attempted to explain her phenomenal talent.

Latest statistics show that there are not less than 13,000 Andersons in the Swedish capital. Then follows the dynasties of Johaansson and Carlsson, with each a representation repectively of 9,000. Little wonder then that so many Andersons and Carlssons change their names when they come to America's northwest, where their numbers are equally numerous.

John Svanberg, the celebrated Swedish runner, was injured the other day while attempting a record breaking run of 10,000 meters. While running around a curve he stumbled and fell against a small spruce, sustaining such injuries that he had to abandon the track. About three thousand people witnessed the accident.

Sweden's ambassador to Berlin, Count Trolle, has now recovered from his throat ailment and is again able to attend to his duties. Mr. Trolle spent a part of the summer in Sweden, where he was under the care of able physicians.

The first new coins with King Gustaf's picture on them appeared in the market Oct. 25. The new coins are otherwise exactly the same size as during the reign of King Oscar.

The price on flour is rising in Sweden. The mills are now charging one crown and seventy-five "oro" per sack. This is the case all over the country.

The fruit crop in Sweden this year is estimated to be worth at least 10,000,000 crowns. This has been one of the best fruit seasons for many years.

NORWAY.

Christiania reports tell us that the old controversy over the deer grazing along the border between Sweden and Norway has broken out afresh and that there may be some trouble in store in the near future. The controversy arose in the first place from the fact that a number of deer belonging to Sweden were shot on the Norwegian side of the boundary. A rumor then spread to the effect that deer belonging to Swedish Lapps were shot down by Norwegian hunters when they crossed the border. That the animals were killed is an actual fact, but whether it was done intentionally or not, is a matter that has as yet not been settled. It is claimed that the tame deer were mistaken for wild elk. When they had been killed and the brand marking them had told the tale, the hunters paid the Swedish Lapps more than enough to compensate for the deer, but it is not certain that the Swedish officials will be satisfied with this. At any rate the guilty hunters claim that they made their mistake on account of the fact that the deer were among the elk. But it seldom or ever happens that the deer graze with the elk and that is just where the point comes in. It is a well established fact that the deer usually disappear from parts where the elk were numerous.

The Norwegian women won a decisive victory in last week's elections over the radicals in the country. They have won the ballot and the face of Norwegian politics may be very different as a result of it in times to come. Miss Gina Krog, the leading suffragist of Norway, is confident that if equal suffrage ever is won in America women will flock to the polls. "Our experience in Norway has been significant in one direction," says Miss Krog. "Many women who held back and refused us assistance, now that the ballot has been won, come forward and are among the most anxious to vote. It only took our victory to arouse them and transform them into brilliant suffragettes. I believe the same thing will happen in the United States."

In Nordlands "amt" there were 440,000 barrels of herring that had been packed up to Oct. 9. In the Nordland districts there have been packed over 850,000 barrels this season. The herring is of exceptionally fine and fat quality and fishermen this season have been making a little money. So far as the herring exporters are concerned, they are of course doing an immense business this season.

An iron wedding anniversary was celebrated some time ago by Farmer A. Lie and his wife, Karen-Westby, up in Norde Odalen. This happly old pair were married in Sand Church in 1844. The bridegroom is ninety-one years old and the bride is eighty-one. Both of them are still enjoying good health and much happiness.

Lieutenant Shackleton's lecture in Christiania was attended by nearly all the students of the university. They marched to the lecture hall in a body and gave a demonstration in honor of the British explorer. Roald Amundsen, the sturdy Norwegian who made the Northwest passage, delivered an address.

Christian Michelson is not so anxious to get mixed up in politics again as some people would suppose. He flatly refused the presidency of the storthing, although all manner of inducements were set forth to urge him to accept the office.

The Norwegian Dental association celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary Oct. 25. The celebration was held in Christiania and was attended by the leading dentists of the country.

Professor I. L. Helberg of Copenhagen delivered a lecture to the students of Christiania on the evening of Oct. 18 on "The Greeks, Their Religion and Morals."

In the Sundefiord there has been an immense quantity of the rarest kind of anchovis caught this season. Most of it has been shipped to England and America.

Hotel Phoenix in Narvik was completely destroyed by fire Oct. 15. The building was, however, insured for 75,000 crowns. It was the largest and most popular hostelry in that city.

Miss Ernestine Hansen, who died recently in Rome, has in her will provided for a donation of 60,000 crowns for unmarried women in Christiania.

DENMARK.

The feeling among the professors of the University of Copenhagen, who are directly concerned in the prospective examinations of the north pole records of Dr. Cook, is distinctly against agreeing to the proposal of the National Geographic society that a committee of Americans be present at the examination. Professor Stromgren, the astronomer, warmly resented the suggestion and declared that he was absolutely opposed to others than representatives of the university having any thing to do with the first examination. Rector Thorp, however, decided to submit the proposal of the National Geographic society to the consistory of the university, and that body has been summoned to meet and settle the matter.

Word has been received in Copenhagen that King George of Greece is negotiating for the purchase of the Stensbygaard estate, near Copenhagen, causing considerable excitement in diplomatic circles. The negotiations are generally accepted as proof of the forthcoming abdication of the Greek monarch.

CRIMINAL NEWS.

Two men, one a negro, the other a white man, were lynched on the streets of Cairo, Ill., by an infuriated mob. The first to be strung up was Will James, a negro, alleged to be implicated in the murder of a young white woman. His body was afterwards burned in a bonfire near the scene of his alleged crime. Drunk with the sight of blood the mob returned to the jail and secured Henry Salzner, a white man, under arrest for the murder of his wife. Salzner was taken to a nearby telegraph pole and strung up.

With a revolver in each hand a young man who has been identified as T. J. Hall of Louisville, son of a dealer in second hand furniture, entered the Merchants' National bank at New Albany, Ind., and, after commanding every one to throw up his hands and "get into the vault," began shooting. J. Hangary Fawcett, cashier, was shot through the chest and died almost instantly and John K. Woodward, president, was seriously wounded. In attempting to make his escape Hall also shot and seriously wounded a negro chauffeur.

C. L. Warriner, until recently local treasurer at Cincinnati of the Big Four railroad, one of the Vanderbilt lines, stole $643,000 from that company before he was even suspected of being a thief by his superiors in the railroad service. Announcement to this effect was made from the office of Albert H. Harris, vice president of the Big Four.

James F. Bendernagel, now identified as one of the men "higher up" in the sugar trust scandal and reputed to be the chief of the "big six," was arrested at New York following an indictment accusing him of conspiring to swindle the United States government in connection with the weighing of sugar.

Driven to bay by an armed mob Earl Bullock, the seventeen-year-old bandit of Lawrence, Kan., who twice within the past month has robbed the Eudora State bank, murdered a policeman and shot another man, probably fatally wounded himself in an attempt to commit suicide.

Arthur Everton, self-styled "professor" and traveling hypnotist, is in jail at Somerville, N. J., charged with manslaughter. Robert Simpson, aged thirty-five, whom Everton placed in a hypnotic trance, failed to revive and he has been declared officially dead.

An attempt to rob a New York Central train between Lyons and Syracuse, N. Y., was frustrated and two men were arrested at the point of guns. A third is believed to have fallen under the train and been killed.

MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

A jury at Chicago found Valentine B. Caugh not guilty in connection with the death of John A. Sjostadt, who died following a blow struck by Caugh in defense of several girls. The jury commended Caugh's gallantry in their verdict of acquittal.

On the ground that the conduct of the jurors and their guards in the last trial of Charles W. Morse at New York made that proceeding illegal and unconstitutional Martin W. Littleton is making an appeal for a new trial for his client.

The seal of secrecy has been put by the department heads at Washington on all government officials in New York connected with the investigation and prosecution of the gigantic sugar frauds.

James Curry, a fisherman, found 150 pounds of ambergris in the Straits of Juan de Fuca, near Port Townsend, Wash. Chemists examined the find and pronounced its value to be $160,000.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

The case against James A. Larson, assistant secretary of state, in which he is charged with failing to send his two younger sons, Edward and Frank, to school, was stricken from the police court calendar at St. Paul. When the case was called the representative of the board of education explained that since both boys are now in charge of the probation officer the board no longer has any desire to prosecute the charges against the father.

The state supreme court has decided against the state legal department in its suit to collect over $13,000 from H. C. Clark, a Minneapolis lumberman. The suit covered logs cut in 1901 in Itasca county after the expiration of the permit granted by the state, which, according to the defendant, was done with the sanction of the officials in charge. He paid the full contract price.

An extraordinary corn yield is reported from Wilkin county, according to an affidavit made to the bureau of immigration. While the average yield in Minnesota is thirty-five and one-half bushels to the acre it is reported that there was raised this year on the farm of H. B. Meis near Breckenridge 46.8 bushels on five-tenths of an acre, which is 81.21 bushels to the acre.

A body of citizens of Wheaton, headed by Mayor Houston, Village Attorney Murphy and Sheriff Hopkins, searched all the drinking places there to see if the liquor laws were being observed. The law enforcers organized into seven crews and searched seven soft drink places. Whisky and beer were found.

Judgment for $60,200 has been ordered by Judge George L. Bunn of the Ramsey county district court in favor of William H. Fisher against the Duluth, St. Cloud, Glencoe and Mankato railway. The amount represents the sum due Mr. Fisher for services performed under a contract with the railway company.

Governor A. O. Eberhart has announced the removal from office of John Wilmann, auditor of Beltrami county, for malfeasance in office. The governor said he believed the mistakes made in the office were due to incompetence rather than willful wrongdoing, but he could not permit it to go on.

Carrying on the work through the winter months the Duluth-Thief River Falls cutoff of the Soo line, which will mean a saving of nearly 100 miles in the haul of grain from the wheat fields to the big elevators at the Head of the Lakes, will be completed in time for handling the next crop.

October was the biggest month but one in the Minneapolis milling industry, the flour shipments going close to 2,000,000 barrels, actual figures being 1,970,728. In October of the active period of five years ago they were exceeded, but never before that time and at no time since.

Governor Eberhart got ahead of President Taft in proclaiming a day of thanksgiving this year. Usually the governors issue their proclamations after the president has issued his, but on account of the president's overland trip he was slow.

The Pillsbury Flour Mills company will build an addition to their already big plant at Minneapolis at an expenditure of $225,000. The plant will be completed in 1910. One hundred thousand dollars will be expended on the improvements this year.

The sixteenth annual convention of the Minnesota Buttermakers and Cheesemakers' association was held at Mankato, with a large attendance of buttermakers and representatives of manufacturing concerns.

Governor A. O. Eberhart has announced the appointment of J. A. O. Preus of Ada to succeed Harvey Grimmer as executive clerk.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Peter Oech, a farmer in the town of Wiscoy, Winona county, lost six cattle valued at $200 in a peculiar accident. The cattle were sleeping beside a large strawstack and in the night a heavy wind blew it over and smothered them.

John Botman of Duluth, a day laborer, twenty years old, was fatally injured by a dynamite explosion. The sight of both eyes was destroyed and his face was terribly burned.

John Bessel, a wealthy farmer living near Le Sueur, committed suicide by hanging. The causes were domestic troubles and a loss of $200 in a real estate deal.

Gus Goske, a Finnish miner living at Soudan, was killed by drinking alcohol. Goske was out hunting and he ran out of whisky and drank a quart of alcohol.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

Mrs. Eugenia Ward, sixty-eight years old, of Lake Minnetonka, died in the Illinois Central railway station at Chicago while on the way to visit relatives in the Windy City. Mrs. Ward was a victim of heart disease and died suddenly.

John P. Leitner, for fifty years a resident of St. Paul and at the time of his death superintendent of the West Side postal station, is dead, aged sixty-nine.

TO BE CONNECTED BY WATER

Twin Cities Will Use Mississippi for Transportation.

Passenger transportation by water between Minneapolis and St. Paul is mentioned as one of the results of Mississippi river improvements in the annual report of the chief engineer of the United States army, covering river and harbor matters.

Between the Twin Cities, $59,098 has been spent in dredging, bank protection and building wing dams, but these improvements have not extended navigation. There is still to be spent $59,543 of the sum set apart by congress for locks and dams. Lock and dam No. 2 were completed in 1907. Lock No. 1 is completed save the back filling, lock gates and maneuvering machinery. The whole project is 75 per cent finished.

Until the completion of lock and dam No. 1, there will be no beneficial effect on navigation. The report adds that the completion of the locks and dams will develop a passenger service between the Twin Cities and probably reduce the freight on flour and grain shipped from Minneapolis.

CANNOT ASSUME THE TASK

Governor Eberhart Asks Clubs to Take Up Big Congress.

Governor Eberhart has asked officers of the Federation of Commercial clubs to meet him Nov. 23 to make arrangements for assembling a state conservation conference or congress. The governor cannot assume the task of arranging the various details, and he hopes this work will be done by the Federation of Commercial clubs and others interested.

Governor Eberhart expects to take an active part in the movement and will especially interest himself in obtaining speakers of national importance, such as Gifford Pinchot and men of like standing in the conservation field.

The scope of the congress will be elastic, including the more intensive methods of farming, reforestation of the state, development of waterways and highways and greater returns from mineral wealth and waterpowers.

NECK BROKEN IN HORSE RACE

Olmsted County Farmer Dies When Thrown From Rig.

George Wolfe of Pleasant Grove township and one of the most prosperous farmers of Olmsted county, met a tragic death while driving to his home from the village of Stewartville.

Wolfe had been doing his trading in the village and on his way home met a neighbor. They stopped and began to discuss the relative merits of their horses. A wager was made as to their speed and a race followed.

Wolfe's horses became unmanageable and he was thrown from his rig. His neck was broken.

KEYHOLE STUFFED WITH RAGS

St. Paul Domestic Ends Life by Asphyxiation.

Groping about in the dark for twenty minutes, afraid to strike a light because of the gas in the house, Frank E. Draper of St. Paul, auditor of the Great Northern railroad, found the dead body of Hulda Storer, domestic at the Draper home, lying across the bed in her room.

She had been dead only a short time and the fact that she had stuffed the keyhole in the room full of rags and closed all the windows before turning on the gas made it evident that she had committed suicide.

MUCH LIQUOR DESTROYED

Federal Officials Dump $2,000 Worth of Wet Goods.

H. A. Larson, special deputy Indian agent, with four deputies went to Cass Lake and, making directly for the Endion hotel saloon basement, demanded admission. Within a few minutes the deputies were carrying barrels and boxes of liquor to the alley and destroying it.

The liquor had been the property of William Kirchoff, a former saloon keeper, who was forced out of business by the recent order. It was valued at about $2,000.

IN AVOIDING ONE TRAIN

Two Mankato Boys Are Killed by Another.

Leaping from the Omaha tracks at Mankato to avoid a train Leo Foley, fifteen years old, and Paul Huettl, thirteen years, got in front of the Chicago and Northwestern passenger train from the west, were run down and instantly killed.

Foley was terribly mangled, but Huettl's only injury seemed to be on his skull.

Miner Killed by Cavein.

Jack Hill, a miner at the Meadow mine at Aurora, was killed by having a cavein of ore fall on him. Hill was working with his partner when, without warning, the cavein took place. His partner escaped, but Hill was caught and, although rescued a moment later, was dead, a heavy piece of ore having struck him on the head.

Acquitted of Murder Charge.

Natale Purene, who has been on trial at St. Paul for two weeks charged with the murder of Vincenza Megna April 23, was acquitted by a jury after an hour and twenty minutes' deliberation.

DROWNS BABY AND HERSELF

Unknown Woman Jumps From Bridge at Minneapolis.

Hurling her baby into the Mississippi river at Minneapolis an unidentified woman, about thirty-five years old, followed her offspring to its watery grave by leaping off the steel arch bridge a moment later. The fatal jump was witnessed by a hundred persons, while a street car conductor reported to the police that he had witnessed the casting of the infant's body.

The nearest to her at the time of the fatal leap were C. E. Curtis and O. A. Johnson. They were too distant, however, to prevent the woman from committing suicide. She had coolly mounted the railing and jumped and the splash was heard by many. She had leaped thirty feet.

For fully 300 feet down the stream the witnesses saw the body before it sank. It had been kept afloat by clothing, but it finally disappeared.

SEVEN DEATHS DUE TO ERROR

Grocery Clerk Sells Gasoline for Kerosene Oil.

Nels Jensen, his wife and five children were burned to death three miles south of Warroad.

Jensen bought five gallons of kerosene, as he supposed, from the Warroad Mercantile company.

A clerk had previously emptied a barrel of gasoline into the kerosene tank and Jensen got gasoline instead of coal oil. He used a little of the contents of the can to start the kitchen fire and an explosion followed, the noise of which was heard a mile away.

Trevor Garry of Warroad, who was driving by the Jensen home, saved two children and took Jensen, badly burned, to town, where he died twenty-four hours later.

The mother and five children were cremated in the house, which burned to the ground.

DEPARTMENTS ARE A FARCE

Governor Eberhart Would Abolish Two State Offices.

Condemning unnecessary expense now carried on the shoulders of the state and urging development of Minnesota's resources according to the knowledge he had gained and decisions reached while he has been in office, Governor Eberhart advanced a number of startling opinions before a gathering of the Men's club of Wesleyan church at Minneapolis.

"The state of Minnesota is paying $60,000 every year for oil inspection and nearly that amount for boiler inspection, although these departments are a farce and do not give the state money expended upon them," the governor declared, handling the topics "without gloves." "I have no fault to find with the men in office, but I am strongly in favor of abolishing both of these departments as soon as possible."

POLICE WITHOUT A CLUE

Mystery Surrounds Murder of John Hutnyik in Minneapolis.

That John Hutnyik, whose body was found floating in the Mississippi river at Minneapolis, was murdered is the verdict of Coroner Gilbert Seashore of Hennepin county. The decision was reached following a postmortem which disclosed deep knife or axe wounds in the back of the head.

The police are absolutely without a clue. Since the skull was crushed in and splintered, all theories of suicide have been cast aside and work commenced in earnest on the murder theory.

OF FIRST DEGREE MURDER

Duluth Italian Convicted by Jury in Short Time.

Mike Rossi was found guilty of murder in the first degree at Duluth after the jury had been out less than an hour. The crime for which the guilty man is to suffer the extreme penalty was the deliberate murder of Anton Demeo last July.

Rossi, who had an altercation with Demeo earlier in the summer, procured a revolver and waylaid his victim, first shooting him through the heart and then stabbing him in the head.

Duck Hunter Killed.

Albert H. Miller, twenty-five years of age, clerk in a hardware store at Good Thunder, was instantly killed while hunting ducks on Laura lake, in the southern part of Blue Earth county with three other Good Thunder men. He was in a boat with John Pelchow when a gun discharged into the right side of his face and terribly mutilated it.

Mrs. Frank A. Day Dead.

Mrs. Lucia Howland Day, wife of Frank A. Day, formerly private secretary to the late Governor John A. Johnson, died at her home at St. Paul following a paralytic stroke about two weeks ago.

Life of the Happy-go-lucky West Indian Negroes.

LAZY JOY FOR LITTLE WORK.

Six Months' Labor Enables Them to Loll in Indolence For a Year and a Half—Combing the Islands For Men For the Sugar Plantations.

A happy-go-lucky, stand up and fall down, genial, inconsequential spirit animates the West Indian negroes in their labors and in their begging. From the sweating toilers on the dock at Macoris loading sugar into the steamers, with their warning cry, "Bee-low!" to the men in the hold, to the grinning boys hauling their fishing boats up on the beach at Dominica, they live from day to day and take no thought of the morrow. A West Indian negro with $50 will live for a year and never do a stroke of work.

And why not? His living costs him only 0 cents a day. He has his little cabin for the occupancy. A mango tree grows in his yard, and he can pick plantains by the road at will. If he is too lazy to bake 5 cents will buy bread for the family for the day, and a few cents more will buy a dozen small fish and one large one. A single garment does for the women, and $5 will clothe the man for a year, while the pickaninnies run as God made them.

The West Indies are the paradise of the happy loafer. Every year the islands are combed from end to end for hands to work the great sugar plantations in Santo Domingo, and at that the negroes must often be practically kidnaped to get them on the boats.

In November of each year the sugar boats, little sloops and schooners that spend the remainder of the year trading among the islands get into the Santo Domingo negro trade. Their captains and supercargoes, when they have them, and the owners go up and down the islands telling the negroes that on a certain day the vessel will sail for Santo Domingo and take all who want to go to work on the sugar plantations.

Take the little island of St. Martin's for illustration. For a week the island is combed, and on the appointed day a dozen sloops and schooners are crowded into Marigot bay. The night before the negroes have begun to stream into the little town that sleeps through the year, waiting for this one day to bring it to life. Boards are laid across boxes, and rum and whisky are set out to arouse the negroes to the pitch that will carry them out to the vessels bound for the plantations.

All day the men stream into the town, traveling barefooted along the sandy roads, swept in by the sailors, singing their song of riches to be had for the asking. Ahead of the men walk their women, toting heavy boxes on their heads, while the men are dressed in their best, with a cocky straw hat perched on one ear, swinging a dandy cane and carrying their shoes in their hands. At the outskirts of the town they put on their shoes and swing gayly up to the open air bars on the beach.

The women lug the big boxes down to the beach and wail at being left alone until they, too, become filled with the excitement of the scene and urge their men folks on. The men hang back and laugh and drink and deny that they are going.

"Is you goin', Big Tawm?"

"Naw, Ah ain' goin'. Ah jus' come tuh see."

"Yas, yo' is goin', Big Tawm. Git in dat boat."

"Come on heah, boy. Ya, ha!"

And all the time the rowboats, loaded to the gunwales, are plying back and forth between the shore and the sloops. By sundown the beach is swept clean and six little sloops and a schooner make sail and drift out of the harbor on a dying breeze, loaded down with a thousand black men and women, who will wake in the morning with a raging thirst. Then woe be to the captain who has not filled his water casks, for there is sure to be at least one body to be given to the sharks after the fight around the butts!

When the vessels drop anchor off Macoris the plantation foremen come off and look over the cargoes and pay the shipmasters $2.50 each for passage money for the negroes. Then the blacks are herded ashore and are credited with 30 cents a day for a month for working from sunrise to sunset in the cane fields. By that time the $2.50 passage money is paid back. Then they receive their 30 cents a day in cash for the next six months until the cutting and grinding season is over, when the sloops show up again and take them to their homes for $2.50 each, paid in advance.

The foremen collect from the plantation owners 63 cents a day each for pay for the black hands, but with their share of the money the negroes can live for a year and a half before they have to think of doing another day's work. And they do it. Year after year the trade is plied, and the islands are combed for men for the plantations, and year after year the negroes return home to eighteen months of lazy joy.—New York Tribune.

Groundhog.

Teacher was telling her class little stories in natural history, and she asked if any one could tell her what a groundhog was. Up went a little hand, waving frantically.

"Well, Carl, you may tell us what a groundhog is."

THE FARAWAY STARS

Their Color Serves as an Index to Their Age.

WHAT MAKES THEM TWINKLE?

Two Theories That Deal With This Astronomical Enigma—The Intervention of Fragments of Disrupted Worlds or the Effect of Air Currents.

This is a question that has exercised more than one gentleman of science. Of course it is known that only the stars twinkle, the planets giving out a steady light. That is the way we tell a star from a planet with the naked eye.

But why does the star twinkle at all? The answer to this seems to be on account of the greater distances of the stars, the nearest fixed star being several thousand times further from us than the farthest planet. So around this as a starting point have been built two theories. One is that as the visual angle, or angle subtended by the star from the eye, is so very small that very small bodies in space coming between the star and the eye would give the effect of twinkling.

Now, as regards those small bodies actually being in space as hypothecated there is no doubt, for there are millions of fragments of disrupted worlds flying around in orbits about our sun. The only question is whether there are enough to cause the eternal twinkling that is observed. Science cannot say that enough do not exist, for she cannot perceive the existence of the smallest fragments that actually could cause this effect, even with her finest instruments.

To illustrate, then, my meaning as regards this covering of the visual angle, suppose you take a dime between your thumb and finger and hold it between your eye and the moon until it just covers the moon. It will be found to be quite close to the eye. Now take a quarter and hold it so that it just covers the moon. Its distance is at once seen to be about four times the dime's from the eye. Thus it is seen that the farther outward the object is placed the larger the object necessary. This is in accord with what is known as the law of inverse squares.

But now take a dime or even a pin head, and no matter how far you hold it from the eye it will easily cover the largest star in the heavens. This is on account of the enormous distance of the star, the lines drawn from its sides to the eye inclosing an angle so minute that almost anything will fill it. So thus we see that this theory is not impossible, though perhaps somewhat improbable.

The other theory bases its argument on the air currents. Air currents are caused by light and heated air rising and cold and heavy air taking its place. Now, when light goes from a heavy to a light gas, or vice versa, it is bent one way or the other. So this would certainly happen to the light from all the heavenly bodies. The reason it is not noticed in the case of the planets or the sun is that they send us many more rays as compared to the stars.

Many reasons are put forward to show the truth of this theory. A star twinkles more on the horizon than it does in the zenith, for its light has to come through a greater thickness of atmosphere; also greater twinkling is observed in winter than in summer, and when rapid and brilliant twinkling is seen it is a very good prophecy of rain or snow, as it shows the upper regions of the air to be in a state of rapid motion of varying air currents, hot and cold currents meeting, commingling and rotating probably.

This also accounts for the changes in the brightness of a star, for at times a part and not all of its light is bent away from the eye. It has been noticed also that a star's color has something to do with its twinkling on account of the different refractivities of the different colors. A white or blue star, such as the Dog star, twinkles most; next comes the yellow and last the red. If one cares to look for a red star, Betelgeux is one and can be found in one corner of the constellation Orion.

A rather interesting thing has been ascertained in astronomy as regards the relation between the color of a star and its age. The white or blue stars are considered young or in the prime of life, with many more million years to their career, while a red star, as Betelgeux, is on the wane and will gradually go out in the next few million years. See if it doesn't! The yellow stars of course come between the blue and the red in point of age. It is encouraging to find that our own sun is classified as a white star.—A. I. Hodges in Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Weighing Diamonds and Gold.

The weight of diamonds and other precious stones is expressed in carats, grains and quarter grains. They are pearl grains, one of which is equal to four-fifths of a troy grain. Four quarter grains make one grain and four grains one carat. The fineness of gold is also expressed in carats. Pure gold is twenty-four carats fine. The carats, therefore, indicate the proportions of alloy. Most of the gold used by jewelers is about fourteen carats fine, having ten parts of alloy.

BIG THING SAYS CARR

Well Known Middle River Editor Tells of the Proposed Grygla Ditch.

Says It Will Increase the Population of Eastern Marshall County Many Times.

R. D. V. Carr, the well known Middle River editor, was in Thief River last week attending to some business matters. Mr. Carr believes that the proposed new Grygla ditch is going to do wonders for the country northeast of here. He informs us that the running of the lines for the two main ditches and the laterals in eastern Marshall county are well under way and that the work will be completed so that the contracts can be let by January 1st and actual dredging operations can be commenced in the early spring or summer next year if the county authorities and the contractors act with promptness and dispatch. Few people really grasp the magnitude of the drainage proposition now on foot in eastern Marshall county and Beltrami county. The project of the two east and west ditches with their many laterals alone embraces over four hundred miles of ditches and drains four hundred square miles of territory of which every quarter section will have a ditch on one side of it. The cost even for the lands thus thoroughly drained will only be $2.00 per acre and twenty years to pay it in, while other lands that do not abutt on the ditches will be called on to pay but one dollar per acre. Just consider for a moment what this immense project taken in connection with the state proposition now actively under way means to eastern Marshall county. It simply means that within the next five years the whole territory will be converted into the richest and most productive sections of the state, the population will thribble and quadruple and such a revival of business in all lines will take place as was never seen in all this section of the country. This is no idle dream, but a plain statement of fact.

Eclipse Novemder 27.

An eclipse of the moon is scheduled to take place in the early morning of Saturday, Nov. 27. The moon will enter penumbra—'the faint, encircling shadow—at 1:12 a. m. It will enter the darker shadow at 2:11 a. m. The total eclipse will last from 3:14 a. m. to 4:36 a. m. The moon will leave the shadow at 5:38 a. m. and will leave the penumbra at 6:38 a. m. In the first hour the moon will grow darker on the upper left hand edge. After it enters the shadow it will gradually lose its shape until the total phase begins at 3:15 a. m. At this time the bright crescent will disappear and the outline of the moon can be made out. It will have a coppery tint, will be unevenly lighted, and the upper part of the disk will be quite dark.

Father and Son Drowned.

Word was received in this city of the drowning of Frank Gordon, and his father, in Red Lake, last Friday.

The two Gordons, who live on the Tamarac river, were at Shotley buying winter provisions and had made their purchase and started home in a boat. While at the store they purchased considerable provisions, a stove and other articles, and when but a short distance from Shotley the boat capsized.

A storm which had been raging for several days made the trip a hazardous one and proved fatal to the two Gordons.

The boat has been found but no trace of the bodies of the two unfortunate men had been discovered late last night, although searching parties had been organized to drag the lake.

Taken to State School.

Annie Lomeland, the thirteen year old step daughter of Halvor Tweeten, who lives out near the Great Northern turntable, was last week sent to the state school at Owatonna. She did not like her home life and petioned the court to be sent to the state school. Sheriff Nelson took the girl there last week.

Work Suspended.

All of the big ditching machines of the Northwestern Drainage company, of which A. M. Arpin is the manager, stopped work last week and will not start up again until next spring. The big floating dredge on the Germantown ditch will keep at work all winter, providing that the ground freezes up hard enough so that teams can haul coal to the big machine.

Married Yesterday.

Two popular young people living on the East Side of the river in the town of North were united in marriage yesterday, when Ole Omundson Jr. and Miss Anna Thorison were made man and wife. The wedding took place at the home of Ole Amundson, Sr., and was attended by a number of friends. The News extends congratulations.

Good Yield of Corn.

A number of prominent Breckenridge business men, including bank presidents, secretary of the commercial club, and others, made affidavit to the fact that the average yield of corn on the farm of H. B. Meis, who lives near Breckenridge, was 84.24 bushels per acre. These gentlemen inspected the field thoroughly, following an announcement made by Mr. Meis to this effect, which was considered preposterous. This is by no means an isolated yield, and they stated that they could have picked patches that would have easily yielded 100 bushels per acre.

HAVE INDIANS BEEN ROBBED

Government Officials Forecast Upheaval on White Earth and Other Reservations.

Quite Likely That a Large Number of Suits Will Be Started Soon.

For some time there have been rumors of a big upheaval in connection with the transfer of the Indian lands on the White Earth and other reservations south of here, and it was expected there would be developments at the term of U. S. district court which has just closed at Fergus Falls. However, matters were not in shape for aggressive action. Testimony was taken last summer by government agents, and a few cases have been brought to set aside deeds given by the Indians to white men, but if current reports are at all well founded, these suits are only a beginning.

A large percentage of the Indians, on receiving title to their lands, have mortgaged them for small sums, and as they are generally improvident, it is only a matter of short time until a mortgage means a foreclosure.

Further than this, it is reported that matters have been misrepresented to the Indians; that they have signed away their lands without knowing what they were doing, and that in some cases deeds have actually been changed and additional description put in.

Common reports say there are likely to be about 300 suits to set aside deeds in the course of time, and possibly something more serious than civil action.

Life of Gov. Johnson.

Frank A. Day, private secretary of the late Governor Johnson, has undertaken to write and publish a biography of the lamented Governor. He does this at the request of Mrs. Johnson, and as the most intimate friend, perhaps, that the late Governor had, he is undoubtedly peculiarly qualified for the task. There are thousands of friends of the late Governor who would like to have some permanent record and memorial of his life and works. It would seem as if there could be a great demand for such a biography as Mr. Day proposes to issue. The book will be about four hundred pages and will be well bound and typographically perfect. The book will be profusely and handsomely illustrated, and will be in every respect a publication worthy of a place in every Minnesota home. Governor Johnson's life was an inspiration to every ambitious boy and girl, and a record of that life on the library table will be a valuable contribution to the education of the children. We understand that Mr. Day will distribute the book through the medium of agents to be appointed in every county of the state.

School Notes.

No school will be held on Friday of this week, as a number of the teachers and non-resident students desire to spend Thanksgiving at their homes. School having been held on Labor Day, a legal holiday, no time is lost to the district by this arrangement.

Short Thanksgiving programs will be presented in all the primary and intermediate rooms on Wednesday afternoon.

The normal students will be sent in pairs hereafter to all the lower grade rooms, which have heavy enrollments, for two hours each day. They will thus have better opportunities for practice teaching and will also be of not a little assistance to the teachers in the rooms designated.

A local truant officer will be appointed at the next regular meeting of the board of education to whom will be assigned the task of caring for the delinquents.

A teacher's meeting was held last Friday afternoon at the High school building at which it was decided to have monthly exhibits of school work, beginning about the 15th of December. These will consist of daily written exercises in the common subjects and high school work, and in sewing, drawing, cooking and primary industrial work.

Crookston led the state last year with 46 students in the number enrolled in the normal department, Thief River Falls coming next with 36. Hastings enrolled but 10 and Red Wing only 13.

Omitting the high schools in the three large cities, Thief River Falls ranked nineteenth last year in point of enrollment among the 206 high schools of the state. This year the local school will attain a still higher rank.

The tax rate for school purposes last year in Thief River Falls was a little below 22 mills. At Crookston the school rate was 23 mills; at Warren, 30; Argyle, 23; East Grand Forks, 54; Red Lake Falls, 33; Mc. Intosh, 30; Fosston, 34, Bagley 26; Bemidji, 17.

The Bemidji school is exactly the same size as the Thief River school but the district has an assessed valuation twice that of our community. It is subject to the same expense for maintenance as Thief River, or should be, and on the basis of the local valuation its rate would be in the neighborhood of 34 mills. Crookston also has a valuation nearly twice that of the local one, and has only about one half again as many children to care for, so its rate would also be higher were it based on the valuation of Thief River Falls. It might also be added that the local district is on a cash basis, having no floating indebtedness whatever, a condition which obtains in but few of the other towns mentioned.

Aristhiou.

In a small village in Switzerland is a comfortable old inn much frequented by English, and the menu generally includes one dish supposed to be specially British. Though the orthography is peculiar, the meaning is generally obvious—as, for example, "rost bif roti," "rumesteck;" but "aristhious de mouton a l'Anglais" was puzzling. The first word has a distinctly classical appearance, which suggested a Greek origin. But when the dish appeared the meaning flashed into the guests' minds. "Aristhiou" was the Swiss chef's attempt to render phonetically the words "Irish stew."—Manchester Guardian.

Sea Captain Locates Here.

Capt. A. Hoveland, who arrived in the city two weeks ago to visit his brother, Andrew Hoveland, a carpenter living in the northern part of the city, has decided to make this city his future home, and has purchased a considerable block of stock in the Langseth Mercantile company.

Ever since he was fourteen years of age, Capt. Hoveland has made his home upon the water, having been in nearly every part in the world, and he can talk very interestingly of his travels. For the past sixteen years he has been a captain on one of the large ocean steamers, and since coming to Thief River Falls received a cablegram from a large steamship company in England offering him command of a new boat they will soon put afloat, but he has decided to never again go on the water and will make his future home in this city.

Work upon the same will be commenced as soon as the frost goes out of the ground in the spring, and he hopes to have it completed early in the summer.

A Short Lived Club.

One of the most short lived clubs ever formed was the Club des Laideurs—club for ugly women—organized by the Princess Pauline Metternich, who was an elegant woman, but so ugly that she used to call herself "a white monkey." Perhaps she felt lonesome. Anyhow, she tried to gather some of the other women she knew who were not blessed with good looks into a club. But the club proved unpopular and died a natural death. The princess got back at her women acquaintances by remarking that if there were any candor in them her club would be overcrowded.

THE STORY OF THE WEALTHY.

The Wealthy apple, which is one of the finest of the fall varieties both in color, texture and flavor, has an interesting history. It is said that in the year 1853 Peter Gideon, at that time a resident of Clinton, Ill., moved to Minnesota, settling in the vicinity of Lake Minnetonka. He had been interested in horticulture and his first experiments along this line consisted in planting some thirty varieties of apple trees together with a few pear, plum and cherry trees, as well as a considerable quantity of apple seeds and peach pits. By 1863, in spite of good care, the severe winters had killed all of his fruit trees but one seedling crab. With the labor of years gone for nothing, Mr. Gideon found himself with a large family, a cow, a few chickens and only $8 with which to finance affairs, and that in the face of a hard winter. This money that by good right should have been spent to replace the tattered rags which covered his body he sent to Bangor, Me., for seeds and scions of apples. The old suit which he patched up to last over winter and the sacrifice he made at the time were not in vain, for it was from this purchase of Maine seeds that the Wealthy apple came, the growing of which in the intervening years has meant millions of dollars to horticulturists over the country. The apple was named from Mr. Gideon's wife, whose maiden name was Wealthy Hall. While it is believed by many that this splendid apple was a cross between some common apple and the cherry crab, it is thought by others to have been a chance seedling of unknown parentage. Mr. Gideon did no scientific work, yet he can only be viewed as a benefactor of mankind. The prize of $1,000 offered by the Minnesota Horticultural society for a winter apple which is as hardy, as beautiful in external appearance and as full of juice and fine of flavor as is the Wealthy for its season is still unclaimed. Horticulturists of a scientific turn of mind have here not only a chance to win a substantial financial reward but the everlasting gratitude of their own and succeeding generations.

A HAPPY SOLUTION.

One of the great problems which confronts those who are interested in the introduction of the highest and most profitable type of agriculture among American farmers has to do with making available for the tiller of the soil the results of the research work which is being carried on by state and federal agricultural stations and departments. This may be accomplished in part by the publication of bulletins, by the running of demonstration trains, by introducing the study of agriculture into the public schools, but with all of these only a partial use is made of the great fund of information referred to. The province of Ontario has evolved a plan which is doing much to accomplish this good work, one that should be adopted in other portions of America—namely, through the organization of what is known as the Ontario Agricultural Experimental union among the farmers of the territory. Last season this union had 4,120 members, on the farm of each one of which experimental work was carried on under the direction of the government station officials. The chief merit of this plan would seem to lie in the fact that under it farmers put into actual practice on their own farm the improved methods which have been worked out by the specialists, and by so doing are not only benefited personally, but by carrying on a miniature experiment station in their respective neighborhoods give an object lesson in a better type of farming the value of which can hardly be estimated. Such practical local demonstration is infinitely superior to the most illuminating exposition of the results of like experiments at the college. Such a plan would seem to be entirely feasible for any state agricultural college to carry out and should be looked into thoroughly.

The town boy will make a good deal more likely man if he takes a generous measure of lawn mower, hoe and cultivator work in with his fishing and baseball. The latter occupations are all right, but they don't constitute a "balanced ration."

GOOD ROAD WORK.

An enterprising road supervisor we read of the other day is using the telephone as an aid in securing good roads. After a heavy rain he calls up the farmers in his district who have the dragging of the roads in hand and specifies just what stretches of the highway they shall go over. They get on to the roads before there is much traffic, and the result is that the road district is acquiring a reputation which reflects a good deal of credit upon the intelligence of the supervisor and the energy and good sense of its residents.

The boy who doesn't have gumption and backbone enough to say "No!" when occasion requires never has a "Yes!" for any proposition which amounts to a hill of beans.

When a servant of the dear people will spend $105,000 in a primary nominating campaign to win an office that pays but $7,500 per annum there is some suspicion that his motives, political and otherwise, are not entirely altruistic.

At the present time Boston is the greatest wool market in the country, 75,000,000 pounds being the amount marketed there last year. Chicago is a close second, and if her wool sales increase at the rate of the past two or three years she will soon be at the head of the list.

In states where two cent fares have been given a fair trial the receipts in fares on most roads have shown an increase over those from the old rates, and that following a period of hard times. The railroads will hardly ask for a return to the old rates, as it can only result in a loss in passenger receipts.

In spite of the increase in the number of automobiles and the development of the flying machine the average prices of horses has increased $2.75 in the past year and about $35 in the past ten years. Horses are not on the run yet except to get out of the clutches of fellows who are anxious to get them.

Experiments which have been conducted by several experiment stations show that the value of fresh manure per ton as shown in increased crop yields is about $2.25. When it has leeched two or three months it loses one-third of its value, or .75 cents. These figures should contain a very direct suggestion to the thoughtful farmer as to the best way to handle his farm fertilizers.

Some of the most entertaining and illuminating reading which agricultural papers have contained of late has been the very spirited gabfest of charges and counter charges which has been going on between the cream separator fellows. Whatever the outcome of this mess of verbal pyrotechnics, the buyers are getting their eyes opened touching a good many points, and this is really an advantage.

It is expensive business—this feeding thirty-five cent butterfat to calves when some grain ration with the skim milk will answer the same purpose, and it is right here where the reputable hand separator comes in with its perfectly clean skimming. The use of it also means that less storage cans will be required and that the milk can be given to the calves warm and sweet instead of, so often, warm and sour.

Some one has found the following to be an excellent method for poisoning cutworms: Stir one pound of paris green thoroughly in ten gallons of water; soak bunches of clover or alfalfa in the solution during the day and in the evening scatter between rows of vegetables in the garden on clean cultivated places. The cutworms will swarm to these bunches and get fixed during the night. This method is especially effective if the grass and weeds on which they usually feed are not allowed to grow.

The controversy between Secretary Wilson of the department of agriculture and Speculator Patten as to who was responsible for the high prices of May wheat, an actual crop shortage as claimed by Patten, or an artificial and temporary cornering of the supply in sight by Patten, as claimed by Mr. Wilson, does not seem to have been settled to the satisfaction of the large body of consumers who are now paying excessive prices for their flour. If the crop reporting department overestimated the 1908 crop 50,000,000 bushels this should be looked into, and if Patten was able to boost prices and thus levy a tax on the poor man's loaf when there was not a wheat shortage speculators of his type should be suppressed. The eaters of bread would like to have the colored man located.

The cost of making good roads is a subject often discussed. One that needs just as much attention, the reverse of the same proposition, is the cost of poor roads, the policy of just letting things jingle. The office of public roads of the department of agriculture has been collecting some facts along this line, and they are not only interesting, but should be suggestive and profitable. Figures compiled show that the cost of hauling produce in this country is 25 cents a mile per ton, as compared with a cost of 12 cents a mile per ton in France. During the crop year 1905-6 the weight of the more important farm products which were hauled from the place of origin to shipping point was 85,487,000,000 pounds. The average length of haul of farm products in the United States is 9.4 miles. Had our hauling expense been as low as in France there would have been a saving of 13 cents a ton per mile or $1.22 per ton on the average haul. Multiplying the number of tons hauled by this figure gives $[illegible] as the tax which was unwittingly paid by American farmers for the privilege of hauling their stuff to market over poor roads. There ought to be something in these figures to set farmers to thinking.

Minnesota's bushel tax, which was criticised so much as a tax on the farmers some months ago, has now been proved to be a failure so far as being a just tax on the elevators. It has been discovered that the word "mill" was substituted for the word "cent" in the original bill, and that thus the proposed tax was reduced nine-tenths. All the elevators in the state will pay only $34,586, which is about what was paid in Hennepin county alone last year.—Morris Tribune.

Albert Kaiser, the Bagley banker is to be a candidate for state treasurer. A couple of years ago when Mr. Kaiser was defeated as a delegate to the National Republican convention he blamed the delegates from Thief River Falls because they supported a Roseau county man, and at that time threatened to take a hand in Red Lake county politics and see to it that Thief River Falls never secured the county seat. We have nothing against Mr. Kaiser, but we wish to remind that gentleman that the next delegation to the Republican state con. convention from Red Lake county will come from somewhere in the vicinity of Thief River Falls.

WORK IS TO BE PUSHED

Soo Will Have A Large Crew of Men at Work on Thief River Falls-Duluth Line.

All of the Grading to Be Completed by the First of July Next Year.

Thomas Green, chief engineer of the Soo line, was at Bemidji the first of the week and stated to the Bemidji Pioneer that the Soo line would have a large gang of men at work all winter grading along the right-of-way "at both ends of the line and in the middle" of the Plummer-Moose Lake extention, as he put it, and there would be a great activity all along the line in towns in the "Soo zone."

"There will be 4000 men, 1500 teams and fifteen steam shovels used on the Soo operations this winter," said Mr. Greene. "This indicates the determination of the Soo people to construct and equip the Plummer-Moose Lake line as rapidly as humans and beasts can perform the work. We expect that every foot of the grades will be completed on July 1, 1910, that being the date set for completion of all contracts. It is our determination to have cars running on the line in ample time to handle next fall's big crop of wheat from over west and moving the same to Duluth and other points.

"Make no mistake about this line being a 'branch line' of the Soo. It is the real main line of that system, and the connection with this line give a coast-to-coast service."

What Is A College?

Please notice that the Commercial Normal School does not call itself a college. "Business College" is a misnomer, very often used by uneducated, unscrupulous business school owners, who, by the way, have never spent a day inside a real college.

It sounds big, that word "college", and when these owners employ their own graduates to teach, they say their teachers are college graduates. Observe that they leave out the qualifying word business. The teachers of the Commercial Normal are REAL college graduates with a business education on top of the four-year course. The Commercial Normal is not posing as a college, but it does claim to be a first class commercial school. You will find that it is what it says it is, and that it does what it says it does. It is on the square.

It is a matter of encouragement in our everyday life that it is as easy to cultivate a good habit as a bad one and a good deal more satisfactory when it comes to results.

The cost of treating ordinary fence-posts with creosote runs from 4 to 12 cents each. The posts should be dry when treated. In the case of cedar posts the period of usefulness will usually be tripled by the application of the preservative.

In some sections where rich bottom land has been tiled and put to alfalfa trouble is being experienced through a clogging of the tile with the roots of the legume. It would be well to have this fact in mind when devoting such tiled tract to alfalfa.

Some folks have a prejudice against separator milk because of the residue left in the machine after the cream is taken out. The only difference between separator and ordinary skim-milk is that the filth is left in solution in the latter instead of being removed

One of the great drawbacks in raising poultry in warmer climates, where general conditions would seem to be especially favorable, is the presence and marvelous reproductive capacity of most types of insect pests which are a menace to the growing chicks. A warfare against them is made necessary that in many instances makes the game hardly worth the candle.

With a serious problem confronting them in the matter of securing satisfactory indoor help, a good many sensible women having a hand in houses to be constructed are seeing to it that they are of sufficiently modest size and design so that on a pinch they may be cared for without any outside help. This tendency toward simpler house building has much to commend it apart from the consideration of hired help.

A type of silo that has been given a thorough test at the Iowa experiment station is made of vitrified hollow blocks and cement, the structure being re-enforced with steel where necessary to give desired strength. Inclusive of cement foundation, a silo of this type, 18 by 30 feet, with a capacity of 200 tons, costs less than $500. It is strong without being massive, is warm and as near air tight as it is possible to make one.

The bookworm is said to be responsible for a malady which has lately appeared in some sections of the south, the students of two well known colleges especially being mentioned as afflicted with the disease, which takes the form of extreme listlessness and laziness, interfering with both studies and athletics. Numerous isolated instances of the symptoms of this malady have been noted for several generations past, but not until recently has it seemed to invade whole communities.

Among the many excellent provisions of the lately enacted North Dakota pure food law is one requiring merchants to screen fruits which are to be eaten whole from flies and street dust. The retailers have taken advantage of the law for their own advantage, as they have adopted the plan of displaying such fruit in a neat and inviting manner under glass showcases. Reports are to the effect that their fruit sales have largely increased under the new system. The law has panned out as a sort of blessing in disguise, which it surely is for the consumer.

In a very good natured discussion which the writer had not long since with the advertising manager of one of the two largest catalogue houses in the country the point was urged against patronizing catalogue concerns that in the measure in which it was indulged in it tended to knock out the business of the small towns and as a consequence to reduce the value of adjacent farm lands. Our friend did not offer to deny the truth of this statement—in fact, acquiesced in it when he later stated that he thought Mississippi valley lands were getting too high. There is something in this admission for regular catalogue house patrons to ponder over.

It seems to be quite the thing these days for the man who departs from the generally accepted policy of "each for himself and the devil take the hindmost" and essays to protest against the prostitution of municipal affairs or the ruthless gobbling of timber, mineral or water power properties by large corporate interests to be dubbed as "daft" or having a "brainstorm" and fit to be classed with the weakminded folk and milksops. This is the usual and about the only reply of offenders against the public weal, but it contains neither defense nor argument when sifted a bit, and the dear people are catching on to the fact in a very satisfactory manner.

Those who have followed President Taft's recent itinerary have been pleased to note that he has digressed from a discussion of political and economic topics long enough to say a decided word with reference to such improvement of the roads in the Yosemite national park as will do away with the unspeakable dust, which at times is so bad that a trail of it 200 yards long will obscure the landscape in the wake of a four horse coach. When folks pay the outrageous price they do to get into this scenic wonderland they ought not to have the iridescent beauty of Bridal Veil falls and Mirror lake or the majestic grandeur of El Capitan and Half Dome marred and obscured by dust in their eyes or grit in their teeth.

Notice of Foreclosure Sale

Whereas, default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by George O'Dell and Albertina O'Dell, his wife, of Peoria county, Illinois, as mortgagors, to Peter Kiene, of Dubuque, Iowa, as mortgagee, upon and covering the following described real estate situate in the county of Red Lake in the state of Minnesota, to-wit:

The south half of the southwest quarter of section thirty-three, township one hundred fifty-two, north range forty-two; the west half of the southwest quarter of section three; all of section four except the southwest quarter of the southwest quarter; the northeast quarter of the southeast quarter of section five; the north one half of the northeast quarter and the northeast quarter of the northwest quarter of section nine and the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of section ten, township one hundred fifty-one, north range forty-two, all west of the fifth principal meridian and containing nine hundred and sixty acres more or less according to government survey.

Which said mortgage bears date February 21, 1906, and was recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for said Red Lake county March 3, 1906, at 1:30 o'clock p. m., in Book 11, of Mortgages at page 25, and

Whereas the said Peter Kiene by an instrument in writing dated March 15, 1906, and recorded in the office of the said register of deeds on March 17, 1906 at 11:30 o'clock a. m., in Book 22 of mortgages at page 271 duly assigned said mortgage to Henry C. Felderman, and

Whereas the said Henry C. Felderman by an instrument in writing dated November 6, 1909 and recorded in the office of said register of deeds on November 17, 1909 at six o'clock p. m., in Book 7 of mortgages at page 541 duly reassigned said mortgage to said Peter Kiene, who is now the owner thereof, and

Whereas, there is due upon said mortgage at the date of this notice for principal and interest, the sum of ten thousand six hundred twenty six dollars and fifty cents, and no action has been instituted to recover the same or any part thereof.

Now therefore notice is hereby given that under and pursuant to the power of sale therein contained, and the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed and the real property therein described will be sold by the sheriff of the county of Red Lake in the state of Minnesota, at public auction for cash at the front door of the court house in the city of Red Lake Falls, in said county of Red Lake, and state of Minnesota on Friday, January 7, 1910, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to pay the amount which shall then be due upon said mortgage and the costs of foreclosure thereof, including an attorney's fee of two hundred dollars, therein provided for in case of foreclosure thereof.

Dated November 18, 1909.

HOWELL PLANER AND MATCHER

You no doubt find it a hard matter to sell your rough lumber to advantage because most of your customers want it finished. Furthermore you can get twice as much for your lumber by planing it, making it up into flooring, drop siding, window casing and mouldings, for which there is an unlimited demand at big prices. The Howell Planer and Matcher does all this work to perfection.

You can also make big money by working up all your slabs and waste material into Lath and Shingles. All you need for this purpose is our Lath Mill and Shingle Machine. We build the best and most up-to-date machines of this kind on the market which we can furnish you at manufacturers prices. Keep your plant running all the time. Remember we build complete Saw Mill Plants from top to bottom, all of our own manufacture. Our new Catalog B is just now out. If you have not received it, write to-day. Manufactured by Alfalfa, beef and corn may well be styled the A B C of an intelligent and profitable type of agriculture. Many sections have yet to learn them.

Trust in Providence, so far as farming operations are concerned, is a first rate doctrine if it is coupled up with a measure of hustle and good horse sense.

When hens lay soft shelled eggs it is usually due to the fact that they have insufficient supplies of lime from which to manufacture the shells. Oyster shells, slacked lime or old plaster will furnish them this element in needed quantities.

A beauty of solid cement floors for corncribs and granaries lies in the fact that they do not provide a convenient runway and means of access for rats and mice. When these rodents come to these cement foundations they are up against a stone wall.

A regulation lately adopted by the District of Columbia prevents the keeping of roosters within this precinct. This was doubtless out of consideration for the morning slumbers of the members of congress who worked overtime nights on tariff revision on behalf of the dear people.

Very rarely does tilled soil have an excess of humus or decayed vegetable matter which gives looseness and some fertility to the soil and makes it work nicely. It is for this reason that the small grain stubble should, as a rule, be plowed under and not burned, as some are in the habit of doing. This may save some work, but it is really a handicap to the soil.

Figures on the number of mules in the country Jan. 1, 1909, are placed at 4,053,000, with a value of $437,082,000, or an average of $107.85. This makes the average mule worth just about $12 more than the average horse, indicating that as a phase of animal husbandry it is a long way from being overdone and will give handsome returns to the fellow who will go into it.

Wisconsin fruit growers in the vicinity of Sturgeon Bay are much concerned over the appearance of the San Jose scale in that vicinity, and those about Milwaukee over the European scale on shrubs in the cemeteries and parks of that place, the infected stock being a portion of an importation from France. The state inspector has the cases under consideration and is doing all he can to prevent a spread of the pests.

During the year 1907 3,507,998 poles were required to meet the demands of steam and electric roads and electric lighting and power companies. These cost at the point of purchase $10,229,642, or an average of $2.92. Cedar poles constituted 63 per cent of the total number and chestnut 15 per cent, the remaining 22 per cent being divided among several varieties. The price paid for cypress was $5.17, while tamarack was the cheapest, costing 73 cents a pole.

A careful inspection should be given the orchard trees during the late summer months in order to locate any little borers which have hatched from eggs during the month of June, as the sooner they are put out of commission after they have started their dirty work the better. Then, too, there may be some of last year's hatch which were not discovered when the rounds were made the latter part of May and early June. Big or little, they should be exterminated.

The residents of Zoar, O., have decided on a novel method of supplying the people of the community with cider next fall. A 100 barrel cement cistern, built years ago by the Zoar Communistic society, is to be cleaned out and when apples are ripe will be filled with fresh cider. A pump is to be installed, and any one who has the will to work the handle may have a swig. If this fact is generally advertised it is safe to assume that the thirsty tourists from the four winds of heaven will light down on Zoar next October "when the frost is on the punkin'."

A German corporation which has been exploring Mesopotamia, the "mid-river" country between the Tigris and Euphrates rivers in southwestern Asia, believes that the country can be rejuvenated agriculturally by a restoration of the irrigation systems whose waters used to quench the thirsty and marvelously productive valley in the olden days when Nebuchadnezzar was humiliated and turned out to grass. While desert sands have drifted in and covered the fertile soil, it is thought this can be stripped off and the section in a large measure restored to its former productiveness. It is said that some of the canals will need but little repairing to make them usable.

The rat poison which is most highly recommended by the agricultural department after making a trial of several is barytes or barium sulphate. The poison may be mixed with corn meal in the proportion of one to four or it may be mixed with eight times its bulk of oatmeal, enough water being added to make a stiff dough, or a little of the powdered barytes may be sprinkled on buttered bread or moist toast. Small quantities of the bait should be placed in the runways under barn, granary or other outbuildings. An advantage in the use of barytes over other poisons is that it is more slow acting and the rats generally have time to leave the buildings and die in the open air and where they go for water, and not in cracks and crannies where they will make a bad smell.

$8.50 HEDGETHORN PUNCTURE-PROOF SELF-HEALING TIRES A SAMPLE PAIR TO INTRODUCE, ONLY $4.80

The regular retail price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but to introduce we will sell you a sample pair for $4.80 (cash with order $4.55).

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. Sixty thousand pairs sold last year. Over two hundred thousand pairs now in use.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

INCREASE IN PHONE SERVICE

Number of Conversations Held Over the Lines in Sweden During the Year Were 312,467,878, According to the Report of the National Telephone Company—Enormous Increase in the Exension of the Net of Wires Throughout the Country.

SWEDEN.

According to the annual report of the National Telephone company, the telephone net has been increased with 18,739 kilometers, and the number of kilometers along which telephone service is now supplied aggregates 228,109 kilometers. To show what an enormous increase there has been in the extension of the telephone nets over the country, the length of the lines ten years were only 97,692 kilometers. The number of telephone apparatus have increased since that time from 46,381 to 109,939. The number of conversations during the year, were 312,467,878, of which 14,730,878 were for extended periods of conversation and for which extra payment was charged. Stockholm naturally comes first on the list with fifty-one million conversations. The total income from telephone subscribers amounted, during the year of 1908, to not less than 5,695,671 crowns, with an additional 4,000,000 crowns for extra conversations, showing an increase of over 10 per cent. Since 1881, the National Telephone company has therefore netted the country the very respectable sum of 47,443,573 crowns.

The proclamation of the Finnish senate, issued Nov. 15, making Russian martial law applicable to Finland, threatens to precipitate the Russian-Finnish struggle which has been impending for more than a year. All Sweden is deeply interested in every move and the Swedish papers are following events in Finland very closely these days. The senate, stuffed with Russian representatives, juggled into office when the Finnish members resigned rather than turn their country's funds over to the czar, is of course purely pro-Russian. The martial law proclamation is considered the first step in the movement to wipe out Finnish independence. In Swedish minds there is no doubt that the Finns will make an attempt to stave off the swallowing up of their country by Russians but there is some doubt whether they succeed.

Edward S. Winslow, the American consul general in Stockholm, when on a visit to Berlin a short time ago, spoke some very flattering things regarding Sweden and the Swedes. He urges his countrymen to pay a visit to Sweden for that country is, he says, one of the most interesting countries in the world to visit. Among other things Mr. Winslow said: "Sweden is just as interesting in winter as in summer. We have there a real winter and a real summer. Winter brings clear weather and glorious white snow, and journeys through the country districts are especially interesting to the tourists owing to the great variety of scenery that meets the eye on every hand. The railroads are a point of comfort and their equipment is the most modern in the world."

A few women have begun protesting against keeping wild birds in captivity in the great open air zoological garden Skansen and on the evening of Nov. 1, they held a meeting at which appeared several women speakers among whom were Miss Lizzie Lind, one Miss Dawson from London, Miss Schartau and others. They protest against keeping wild birds and other animals in captivity on the grounds that it is cruel. It is not believed that their protests will have any effect on the Park authorities or on other classes in Stockholm, as Skansen is regarded an educational institution, being one of the completest botanical and zoological gardens in the world. The wild animals are receiving the very best of care and seem to thrive very well indeed.

The first sky scraper has now been erected in Stockholm and is only a small building of course in comparison to the Chicago and New York sky scrapers. The building, which has been erected by the Kattingen Real Estate company, is located near the King's island and is fourteen stories high. It has been erected at an expenditure of 500,000 crowns. The Stockholmians think the building is altogether too high and say that the architectural effect of such a building is not pleasing to the eye.

Nov. 6, which marked the death of King Gustavus Adolphus on the battle field of Lutzen, was commemorated in Stockholm in speech and song. The Stockholm singers gathered around the statute of the king in Stockholm and rendered a number of patriotic songs.

Sofia, widow queen of the late King Oscar, and her son, Prince Eugen, have departed for High Grove, England, where they will spend the winter. The aged queen had to be carried to her train prior to her leaving the Central depot in Stockholm.

Although always possessed of the right to a voice in the selection of a pastor, the Gustavus Adolphus church in Stockholm recently exercised its right for the first time in 130 years. There were 2,246 votes cast.

NORWAY.

Captain Roald Amundsen, Norwegian explorer and navigator of the northwest passage is at present in Chicago, Ill., where he expects to secure the greatest store of provisions that any expedition has ever carried into the frozen north polar basin. Captain Amundsen will sail next July on a seven years' "dash" for 90 degrees north, and the success of his invasion of a sevenfold arctic winter, is conceded to depend in largest measure on the best products of Chicago canneries. For seven years, if favoring currents do not hasten the progress of their northward journey, Captain Amundsen and his party aboard the "Fram" will be locked in the polar ices and and during that time the lives of the twelve men who make up the party will depend upon the condition of their stores and Captain Amundsen expects to secure the best in Chicago. Besides meat, the explorer will require 300 tons of gasoline to propel the motors of the "Fram" and at that he is counting upon the currents doing a good share of the propulsion. To Norwegian papers the explorer has stated that it is his intention to enter the Arctic ocean through Behring strait, pick up the northwestward drift, which figured so prominently in the accounts of Cook and Peary, then going as far north as he can in open water, ram the nose of his vessel fast into the ice pack, shut off power and await developments. Captain Amundsen is hopeful of being carried by ocean currents directly over the pole, or at least within walking distance. But the prime object of his journey, it is announced, is a scientific study of the north polar basin. Such voluminous observations will be taken that even seven years will not afford much time to complete them.

Herbert H. D. Peirce, United States minister to Norway, has returned to the United States to remain on leave of absence until the first of next year. He stated on his visit to Washington recently, that affairs are quiet in Norway, though business has recovered from the recent depression. When asked whether he had met Dr. Cook in Norway, he stated that the explorer had never been in Norway, but that Amundsen the Norwegian explorer had great faith in Cook's account of reaching the north pole.

It was a noticeable thing that during the recent elections at which time the Norwegian women voted for the first time that most of them who made use of the right of suffrage were from the cities. Comparatively a few number of women in the country districts voted and did not seem to take an interest much in what was going on. The city women therefore plan to set about interesting their sisters in the country and show them the value and blessings of the ballot.

The ethnographic museum in Christiania has set apart a room for the collection of relics from Lapland. Recent explorers and Lutheran mission workers among those hitherto obscure people have brought to light much interesting information which is to be preserved in this department of the museum.

The socialists of Norway are getting exceedingly radical. Now it appears that they have gone on record against the establishment of a colony of workingmen who were to be enabled to buy their homes. That is certainly beating the humanity record to a standstill.

DENMARK.

In the latter part of August a memorial service was held in one of the large Lutheran churches in Copenhagen, Denmark, in honor of the Danish-American visitors who were at the time sojourning in that city. Bishop Nordman made the principal address and commended the Danish Americans for their faithful adherence to their Christian principles and to the church of their fathers. They showed even greater faithfulness than many of their clergymen who remained in the fatherland. A number of other prominent clergymen were present and participated in the services.

The King of Denmark is a very wealthy man and it is said of him that he makes some pretty good investments from time to time. He is much interested too in business affairs and is not averse to a little speculation now and then. At present he is reputed worth all of $25,000,000. Be it said to his credit, he is a generous hearted monarch and hundreds are those who receive aid at his hands.

A robbery occurred in Berbstorffs palace in the apartments occupied by prince Waldemar. A sum of $1,500 was stolen from his secretary's room directly adjoining. The prince's sleeping apartment was not entered. A diligent search is being conducted, but thus far there is not the slightest clew as to who committed the robbery.

The Swedish Lutheran congregation in Copenhagen, Denmark, is planning to build a $70,000 church edifice in the Danish capital. The Danish government will contribute $20,000 towards its erection.

STATE NEWS BITS

Minor Happenings of the Week Throughout Minnesota.

Frank W. Walker, inspector of state lands in Northern Minnesota, filed with the state auditor a report in which he calls attention to numerous homestead frauds in northern counties. With special reference to Koochiching county Mr. Walker states that about eight out of ten homesteaders are not living on the land at all and the others are ready to dispose of their property as soon as they receive their certificates.

The month of October just passed marked a new record in the amount of business handled at the Minnesota Transfer and those in a position to know assert that this is one of the most accurate barometers of general trade conditions to be found. During the month just passed 1,000,000 tons of freight were handled, the greatest amount in one month since the yards were established.

A complaint with many signatures, filed with the Minnesota railroad and warehouse commission, alleges that farmers along the line of the Canadian Pacific are being discriminated against in favor of several big logging and lumber concerns and that nearly 500 cars of freight belonging to small shippers are piled up along the line because of lack of cars.

St. Joseph's Catholic Aid society of St. Cloud has adopted a resolution protesting against a caricature of St. Paul which is being displayed in the Capital City and which it is planned to exhibit in a celebration. The protest was forwarded to St. Paul and the management was asked to abandon the display of the caricature.

Owing to cold weather and snow all the mines on the Duluth and Iron Range railway except the Pioneer at Ely and the Bessemer at Virginia have stopped shipments until the surplus has been reduced to a minimum so as to prevent freezing and save the heavy expense of steaming it out of the cars.

The name of Walter H. Sanborn of St. Paul, senior judge in the Eighth judicial circuit, has been formally submitted to President Taft for consideration in filling the vacancy on the bench of the United States supreme court created by the death of Associate Justice Rufus W. Peckham.

Governor Eberhart appealed for uniformity of divorce and marriage laws in a speech before an audience assembled in the Fifth Presbyterian church in Minneapolis. The executive urged that some united and concerted effort should be made to harmonize existing laws on this subject.

Judge Axel Haller, at Red Wing, united in marriage Miss Mary Kaski of Chicago and Harry Yee of Billings, Mont. The bride is of Russian descent and was born in Canada. Harry Yee is a native of Tokio, Japan, and has been in this country eighteen years.

MINNESOTA MAN A VICTIM

Tonias P. Lien of Rushville Killed by Mrs. Belle Gunness.

Another victim of Mrs. Belle Gunness, arch murderess of Laporte, Ind., has been identified as Tonias Peter Lien of Rushford, this state. Samuel P. Lien, who recently returned from a sea cruise of three years in the Pacific ocean, identified a watch that had been found in the burned ruins of the Gunness house as one that belonged to his brother Tonias.

On his return home from sea last week Lien learned that his brother had gone to Laporte on April 2, 1907, following correspondence with Mrs. Gunness, whose advertisements for a husband he had read in a Norwegian paper, and had not been heard from by relatives since. Tonias had taken $1,000 with him, sewed in his clothes, to pay a mortgage on Mrs. Gunness' farm, it was learned. In return for this money Mrs. Gunness was to become his wife.

Lien's body was one of the ten horribly mutilated corpses found buried about the Gunness yard.

WHISKY IN STOVEPIPES

Indian Agent Makes Peculiar Discovery at Cass Lake.

Deputy Special Indian Agent Larsen, after thoroughly searching the place of Archie Siddon, former saloon man, at Cass Lake, found a half barrel of whisky. He also found several gallons neatly tucked away in a slot machine under a wood pile beneath rags. The liquor was confiscated and destroyed.

Larsen also raided Bena and found several gallons, belonging to an old saloonkeeper named Quinn, in teapot, water kettle, flour barrel and stovepipe. All were destroyed. Larsen says there is more in Cass Lake and he will get it before he is done.

ONE LIFE LOST WITH SHIP

Lake Boat Goes to Bottom and Sailor Goes With It.

One life was lost and nine sailors barely escaped when the Louis Pahlow went down near Duluth with a load of lumber. When only two miles from shore the steel cable parted, putting the vessel at the mercy of the seas. The government station at Sturgeon Bay went to the rescue of the storm-swept vessel after a perilous journey and took off nine men. Stephen Deuzer, Sturgeon Bay, lashed himself to a spar, refused to leave and went down with the boat.

WARROAD FIRE VICTIM DIES

Eighth Fatality Due to Explosion of Gasoline.

Nels Jensen, the Roseau county farmer who was terribly burned while trying to rescue his wife and children from the flames, after an explosion following the use of gasoline instead of kerosene in lighting a fire, died at Bethesda hospital at Crookston, in horrible agony, a week after the accident occurred.

Flesh from his fingers and limbs was hanging in shreds.

His wife and children all perished in the fire.

TWO PERISH IN RED LAKE

Father and Son Lose Lives When Their Boat Capsizes.

Word has reached Bemidji of the drowning of Frank Gordan and his father in Red lake.

The two Gordans, who lived on the Tamarac river, were at Shotley buying winter provisions and had made their purchases and started home in a boat. When but a short distance out the boat capsized.

The boat has been found, but no trace of the bodies has been discovered.

Killed by Snowplow.

Peter Johnson of Moorhead, an employe of the Northern Pacific, who had served on the section force for the past twelve years, was instantly killed by a Russell snowplow which struck him while he was at work in the Dilworth switch yards. Girl Killed by Her Brother.

Louise Gagnon, the nine-year-old daughter of Victal Gagnon, living near Quiring postoffice, in Itasca county, was shot and accidentally killed by her ten-year-old brother, who aimed a loaded rifle at her and pulled the trigger. The girl expired with scarcely a perceptible tremor.

Miner Guilty of Murder.

Frank Sadler of Ely, a miner, was found guilty of murder in the first degree in the district court at Virginia. It took the jury twenty-five hours to agree. Sadler killed Lawrence Kopre at Ely Aug. 9 last, mistaking him for Tony Jenko, a companion, with whom he had quarreled.

Whirled to Death by Shaft.

Ed Reinhardt, a grain dealer and one of Bird Island's leading business men, was instantly killed while he was working in the basement of his elevator. His clothing caught in the shafting. He was whirled around several times before the clothing tore and dropped him.

Mistaken for a Deer.

John East thought Otto Zebott was a deer as Zebott was walking along a country road about two miles from Duluth, and discharged a rifle at him. The bullet shattered Zebott's left arm and was imbedded in the skin of his body above his heart.

ABOUT THE STATE

News of Especial Interest to Minnesota Readers.

TRAGIC DEATHS IN MILL CITY

Five Persons Meet Their End Inside of Twenty-four Hours.

Five persons met tragic deaths in Minneapolis within twenty-four hours, one as the result of an accident, one by his own hand, one from an unknown cause and two from disease.

Albert Gentz was instantly killed and Henry C. Richter was painfully injured when struck by an incoming Northern Pacific freight train two miles north of Northtown Junction.

Charles J. Hall, sixty-eight years old, committed suicide. Suffering caused by a severe form of asthma is believed to have been the motive for his act. His dead body was found in the woodshed by his wife.

When Byron Dolphin returned home he found his wife, Edna Marie Dolphin, lying dead on the kitchen floor. He had been absent only an hour, when she had complained of feeling ill, but she did not at that time appear to be in a serious condition. Coroner Seashore is uncertain what caused death, although inclined to believe it was heart disease.

Edward Youngren, a transient, was taken violently insane at his lodgings some time ago. He was brought before Commissioner Bates, who ordered him taken to Mollan's hospital, whence he was removed to the city hospital. He died shortly afterward, the cause of death being due to an infection superinduced by pleurisy.

John Peters was found dead in his bed at the Union City mission. The coroner says death was due to hemorrhage of the lungs.

EBERHART WANTS ECONOMY

Does Not Desire Abolition of Oil and Boiler Inspection.

"I want the state oil and boiler inspection done in a businesslike manner and when I advocate the abolition of those departments I do not advocate the abolition of the inspection. I think we could have better inspection at less cost."

This statement was made by Governor A. O. Eberhart to supplement his recent speech at Minneapolis, in which he advocated a number of reforms which the state might bring about. The governor boarded a train for Chicago immediately after making his speech in Minneapolis and not until he returned did he know of the wide publicity that the speech had been given.

"If the law were made stricter and certain standards for oil established and then severe penalties provided for any company selling oil not up to standard, the state would not need to spend $60,000 a year for oil inspection," he explained.

HILL'S OLD PARTNER HURT

Aged Minnesota Man Probably Fatally Injured.

J. W. Gregg aged eighty-three, forty-five years ago in partnership with James J. Hill, chairman of the Great Northern board of directors, in the wood and coal business and once a prosperous contractor in St. Paul and Minneapolis, in both of which cities buildings yet are monuments to his activity, lies penniless, without relatives and wounded near to death, in the Cass Lake hospital following an accident in which he was run over by a boy driving a heavy sled.

TWO MEN ARE ASPHYXIATED

Killed by Gas in Their Room at St. Paul.

Ed Ikeson and Myles Nolan, teamsters employed in the Midway, were killed by gas and both were found dead in the same bed with the gas in the room partly turned on. The bodies were taken to the county morgue after an investigation by Dr. E. F. Murphy, acting coroner. It is supposed that the workmen met their deaths by accident.

Saleswoman Heir to Fortune.

Mrs. E. L. Reiplinger, a saleswoman employed in the toy department at Sahuneman & Evans at St. Paul and distantly connected with Hetty Green, has just received notice that she is one of four beneficiaries under the will of her uncle, Edward Brennan of New York. The estate is valued at $100,000 and Mrs Reiplinger's share will be $25,000.

Merchant Freezes to Death.

David Kanges, a well-to-do merchant of Ely, was found frozen to death sixteen miles south of that place. He had disappeared several days previous. Kanges shot a deer and after conveying it across Eagles' Nest lake on a raft lost his way in the woods when it became dark. He leaves a wife and child, who live abroad.

Building Collapse Fatal.

Joseph Curtin, laborer, was killed and Andrew Odre, an employe of the Washburn-Crosby company, was injured by the collapse of a roof of a warming house near a storage tank at Minneapolis.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of two thousand one hundred thirteen and 30-100 dollars ($2113.30), which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage duly executed and delivered by the Pioneer Sash & Door Company, a corporation, Mortgagor, to Henry Reinhardt, Mortgagee, bearing date the 15th day of February, 1909, and with a power of sale therein contained, which said mortgage was duly filed for record in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Red Lake county and state of Minnesota, on the 16th day of February, 1909 at 11:10 o'clock A. M., and duly recorded in Book 10 of Mortgages, on page 94, which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby was duly assigned by Henry Reinhardt, Mortgagee, to the Merchants National Bank of Detroit, Minnesota, a corporation, on the 20th day of February, 1909, and the said assignment was filed for record in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Red Lake county and state of Minnesota on the 25th day of October, 1909, at 9 o'clock A.M., and duly recorded in Book 2 of Mortgages on page 58; and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

Lots twenty-seven (27), twenty-eight (28), twenty-nine (29) and thirty (30) of Block sixty-four (64) of the original townsite of Thief River Falls, Minnesota, according to the certified plat thereof now on file and of record in the office of the Register of Deeds within and for Red Lake county, Minnesota, with all the hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging or in anywise appertaining, which said sale will be made by the sheriff of said Red Lake county at the front door of the court house, in the city of Red Lake Falls, in said county of Red Lake and state of Minnesota on the 18th day of December, 1909, at ten o'clock A. M., of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of two thousand one hundred thirteen and 30-100 dollars ($2113.30) and interest and the taxes if any on the said premises, and seventy-five dollars ($75.00) attorney's fees, as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of sale as provided by law.

The forestry problem will never be adequately considered or handled until the practice is followed of always planting a tree in place of that which is cut down. Thus only can we keep head above water horticulturally.

One Oklahoma farmer has figured it out that when a package of black pepper falls off his wagon sent going home from town, and his eyes do not smart when the wind blows the contents up in his face, something has been palmed off on him under an assumed name.

We seriously question if any boy who is normally constituted doesn't have some pretty strong hankerings to go to the circus, and the boy's father is certainly not normal if he doesn't appreciate this fact and arrange the work so the boy can get off and take in the sights.

Mississippi boasts of one county in which every white boy of school age is working a piece of ground with his own hands as a part of his education. If more boys were mixing some of this work in the soil with what they get from books they would develop into more wholesome and useful members of society.

A Wisconsin poultryman recommends placing chickens afflicted with gapes in a barrel in which a quantity of slacked lime has been scattered, his contention being that, in its efforts to fly out, the chicken will stir up and breathe in enough lime dust to kill the gape worms, which may then be sneezed out. Care should be used that the chickens treated do not get too much lime, and the remedy should not be used with chicks less than half grown.

Omaha has a students' organization that is known as the Alfalfa Hay club. It is their belief that beefsteak and alfalfa is a balanced ration and an excellent energy producer for mental as well as physical exercise. The alfalfa ration is given in the shape of gems, pancakes, mush and cake, the tender and nutritious portions of the plant being finely ground and bleached. If this ration does as much for these college boys as for hogs and beeves in the feed lot, they may be counted on to get there with both feet in the 440 dash and in wrestling with Greek and Latin roots.

A precious lot of the government's money is still being wasted every year through the printing and distribution of so many thirty to sixty page bulletins, which from the standpoint of value for the average farmer might as well be written in Hebrew and Sanskrit. Not only does the farmer not have time to wade through them, but the average country editor does not. A fair regard for the forest conservation policy, concerning which so much is just now being written, would seem to suggest the propriety of boiling down a good many of these treatises and thus sparing the trees from which the paper is made.

Once in a while there is an orchard which is too thrifty to bear fruit, the case being analogous to the farm animal which gets so fat that it will not breed satisfactorily. This difficulty with the orchard may be helped some by removing mulch if there is any, plowing the orchard and growing some crop which will remove surplus moisture and energy from the soil. Another way of toning the trees down is to prune heavily or to remove narrow strips of bark running parallel with the trunk. This last expedient should only be tried as a last resort and then only by one who understands the job and will not overdo it.

The number of mice which will be on hand to threaten orchard trees when the winter snows are deep may be materially reduced if piles of mulch, hay or other litter are removed by the first of September. Many of these piles of litter will be found to contain nests of from five to eight little naked, squirming mice which are very easily dispatched. The writer remembers removing some ten or more cocks of grass from the orchard about the time mentioned and in almost every pile there were just such a bunch of little mice, which would have been able to do a world of gnawing by midwinter had they been left undisturbed.

Very little has been done as yet along the line of testing silage as a ration for lambs. The Illinois experiment station has, however, been conducting some feeding experiments along this line and the results have been very satisfactory. Six lots of lambs of the same age and weighing an average of ninety-three pounds were in the feeding test. One lot was fed no silage at all, their ration being 1.42 pounds of corn and 1.12 pounds of hay per day. The other five lots were fed varying amounts of ensilage with lighter rations of hay and corn. At the end of the period it was found the lot fed hay and corn only had made a gain of thirty-three pounds each, the average cost per pound of gain being 4.6 cents. The lot fed the most silage had a ration of 1.15 pounds shelled corn, 1.98 pounds silage and .77 pounds hay, and during the period made a total gain in weight of 38.4 pounds, with an average cost per pound of gain of 3.7 cents. It will be observed that the lambs fed most silage made a greater gain than the others and at a cost of nearly a cent less per pound. The feeding of the silage was not attended by any injurious effects whatever. The series of experiments would seem to furnish definite and valuable information for a good many who have been considering silage as a possible ration for lambs and sheep

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS.

Minnesota Bankers Association Takes an Interest in Agricultural Colleges.

Wants to See a Good Man Elected Dean of the State Agricultural School.

The following is a letter addressed to Hon. John Lind, president of the board of regents of the State University and written by Joseph Chapman, chairman of the agricultural committee of the Minnesota Bankers association. The letter is self explanatory and it is the desire of the association to have it published in all of the papers of the state. It is as follows: At the twentieth annual convention of the Minnesota Banker's Association, representing about eight hundred and twenty-five banks, state and national, located principally within the farming district of Minnesota, the question of the agricultural development of Minnesota and also the question of agricultural education, were very seriously considered. A resolution was passed, unanimously, instructing the executive council to appoint a committee from among its members to look into these matters and take such steps as in their judgment might seem most expedient to improve conditions in connection therewith. Subsequently, the committee was appointed, and after considerable investigation and research, it has succeeded in obtaining a large amount of information from all sections of the state regarding agricultural conditions and the facilities for obtaining education in scientific agriculture.

The committee learned, among other things, that while in our sister state of Wisconsin, compu[illegible] [illegible]ral education in the rural schools has been in vogue for many years and is admittedly largely responsible for the intelligent interest taken by the people of Wisconsin in agricultural matters, in Minnesota we have no such law, with the result that practically nothing is being done in our rural schools along these lines.

The committee has visited the Agricultural College at Madison, and also our own Agricultural School at St. Anthony Park. We were particularly interested in learning, if possible, why the Wisconsin School is reputed to be the best agricultural school in the United States, if not in the world, and we believe that we have found at least three good reasons why it is accredited with such a reputation. The Wisconsin School has a thoroughly competent, intelligent and efficient administrative organization. We found, also, that its extension short course in agriculture for farmers given at Madison, had an attendance last year of something over eight hundred farmers, as against the attendance of a similar course at our own school of one hundred sixty-nine. We were also very much impressed with the intelligent and effective handling of many other features of the extension work. We also found in the Wisconsin School a thoroughly organized and efficient publicity department which not only enables the school to keep in close touch with the farmers of the state, but also to thoroughly advertise throughout the world the results, which the school is accomplishing in raising the corn yield per acre in Wisconsin from twenty-five to approximately forty-two bushels. It is also through the efforts of the publicity department of the Wisconsin School that the fact that the best cheese in the United States is made in Wisconsin, has been spread broadcast.

We are satisfied that the plant and equipment of the Minnesota School is superior to that of Wisconsin. We are also satisfied that our teachers in the various departments are competent men and of a caliber as broad, if not broader, than those of the Wisconsin School. In view of the fact, however, that it is conceded there is to be a change in the executive head of our Agricultural School, there is more or less disorganization and consequent lowering of the work. There is no incentive to introduce new methods and systems so long as the appointment of a new dean is postponed.

It is the opinion of our committee that the position of dean of the Agricultural School is one of the most important in this state for many reasons. While Minnesota is generally known as an agricultural state, we find that, as a matter of fact, its manufactured products exceed in value its agricultural products by many millions of dollars. We also find that less than one third of the tillable soil of Minnesota is under cultivation. The committee believes that by no other means can the agricultural development of our state be so well assured as by the appointment of the best and most competent man procurable in the United States, regardless to salary, to become executive head of the Agricultural School. We would, therefore, urge that at the next meeting of your honorable board to be held early in December, the matter of the appointment of such a man a to fill this most important position, be definitely disposed of without further postponement. The committee understands that your honorable board has under consideration two men for this position, -- namely, Prof. A. F. Woods, of Washington, and Prof. Andrew M. Soule, president of the Agricultural College of Georgia and a graduate of the Guelph School of Ontario. We are satisfied that both of these men are highly accomplished and efficient agriculturists. In addition however, to possessing all the qualifications of Prof. Woods, President Soule has the additional qualification of being a very successful educator.

If the members of our association can be of any assistance to you in any way, you have only to command us.

ALL AGAINST FRANCHISE.

Meeting Held in the Antlers Club Rooms Saturday Evening Largely attended.

Unanimous Sentiment That Northwestern Should Not Be Granted a Franchise.

The meeting held in the Antlers Club rooms Saturday evening to consider the matter of granting the Northwestern Telephone company a franchise was very well attended, most every business man in the city being in attendance. The sentiment of all those present was strongly against the granting of the franchise to the Northwestern or any other company. Many expressed themselves as being in favor of seeing the city either buy out the Tri-State system here on install a new one, as it appears that this is the only way the telephone question can be settled in Thief River Falls. Although some of the members of the council were favorable to the proposition of granting the franchise to the Northwestern company, it is not believed that there is now any chance for the ordinance to pass and if it does pass Mayor Hamre stated he would veto it.

It is quite probable that in the near future the council will again give the people an opportunity to vote upon the proposition of having the city own the telephone system here.

More Hogs Should Be Raised.

As an instance of what can be done in the hog raising line if gone at intelligently in this country we cite you to J. D. Abbott's experience in that line this season.

Last Friday he brought in twenty-two head of hogs, which he sold to John Nordlun. They were all of them less than a year old, the oldest being last December pigs, while some of them were born as late as in July. Their average weight was 217 pounds, which at six and three quarter cents per pound brought him $310.22. The hogs had a fine clover pasture to run in and Mr. Abbott says that all the grain they were ever fed was 240 bushels of barley and two tons of shorts. Thus it can easily be figured that there was a very handsome profit in them, and it is surprising that many more hogs are not raised in the country instead of so many farmers actually buying their own pork. Get out of the ruts and get into the game right.—Middle River Pioneer.

A Warning Issued.

To Oyster Dealers and Others Interested:

Your attention is particularly directed to the provisions of Section 4993, Revised Laws, 1905, which reads in part as follows:

"Section 4993.—Adulteration or immitation of Foods etc.—Every person who, with the intent that the same may be sold as unadulterated or undiluted, shall adulterate or dilute wine, milk, distilled spirits, or malt liquors, or any drug, medicine, food or drink for man or beast; or shall offer for sale or sell the same as unadulterated or undiluted, or without disclosing to or informing the purchaser that the same has been adulterated or diluted; * * * where special provision has not otherwise been made by statute for its punishment, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and punished by a fine of not less than $25.00, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than thirty days."

Jobbers and Dealers are hereby cautioned against receiving from packers or others, oysters which have been adulterated by the addition of water or ice, and retailers are hereby cautioned not to dilute oysters with water nor permit ice to come in direct contact therewith.

The trade will be given until January 1, 1910, to so adjust its business as to comply with this law.

Costs More than Pork.

Those who are using "tantalum" electric lights will be interested in the following from the Scientific American of last week:

"Tantalum is a 'rare metal' of slight importance, the only practical use to which it is now known to be put being in making filaments for incandescent electric lamps. The efficiency of the tantalum lamp is greater than that of the carbon lamp, but somewhat less than that of the lamp with tungsten filament. As more than 20,000 filaments of 20 candlepower can be made from a pound of tantalum, the market is not large. It is at present probably supplied by rich manganotantalates from western Australia. No tantalum minerals are known to have been produced in the United States in 1908, according to F. L. Hess, whose report on various rare metals forms an advance chapter of "Mineral resources of the United States, calendar year 1908," published by the Geological Survey. The tantalum used in the manufacture of lamps in this country is made in Germany and imported at a cost of $300 or more a pound".

Little Frost In The Ground.

Ground in this county will remain comparatively free from frost this winter in the opinion of those who are in a position to know. At the present time the ground is frozen only two or three inches deep in the fields and in the woods not at all. The fields are covered with over a foot of snow, which will ward off the cold during the frosty winter months.

Seldom if ever has there been such a heavy fall of snow at this season of the year. Usually the frost is down a good distance before a sufficient amount of snow falls to furnish any protection. The present condition will leave the ground in fine shape in the spring, being ready to be worked as soon as the snow has melted off.

Hexamethylenetetramine

The above is the name of a German chemical, which is one of the many valuable ingredients of Foley's Kidney Remedy. Hexamethylenetetramine is recognized by medical text books and authorities as a uric acid solvent and antiseptic for the urine. Take Foley's Kidney Remedy as soon as you notice any irregularities and avoid a serious malady. Sold by All Druggists.

Railroad Northeast of Here?

There is a well founded rumor afloat to the effect that a locating party in the employ of the Soo left this city last Friday for the country northeast of here. Of course no delinate information regarding the matter can be secured, but the story is to the effect that they are to look over the country and make a report at the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Soo line regarding the advisability building a line into this section. There is no doubt, but that the time is now ripe for a railroad to build out in this territory.

The Thief River Concert Band.

The local band, through the efforts of Prof. Maxwell, was reorganized last week and a number of members of the junior band installed in the regular band. The full quota are now twenty-eight members which shows quite an increase over the number when the band was first organized, and this number will be increased from time to time as the members of the junior band become efficient enough to take up their work in the regular band.

Prof. Maxwell has made arrangements with Eastern music houses for music to be used when the new Auditorium is completed. All of this is standard music of the same class that is played by the foremost bands of the country, and, although very difficult, do not prove superior to the abilities of the local band, and the music lovers may well look forward to the rare treats that are in store for them.

Lower Court Affirmed.

The supreme court has affirmed the decision of the lower court in the case of Mary Burnette against George W. Fargo and C. A. Baker, which involves the Baker building in this city. Some time ago Mr. Fargo sold the Baker building to the Burnette woman who is a quarter blood White Earth Indian. In exchange for the building, Miss Burnette gave a due bill from a lumber company, to whom she had sold her pine settlement for several thousand dollars. She became dissatisfied with the deal and claimed that it had been represented to her that the building was of brick, and one of the walls is of cement blocks. On this ground she claims that she was defrauded and the court sustains her. The following is the decision:

G. E. Fargo, et al, appellants, vs. Nichols-Chisholm Lumber Co., defendant. Mary Brunette, et al, intervener, respondents.

Syllabus: Evidence considered and held to be sufficient to sustain the trial court's findings and decision to the effect that the interveners are entitled to recover the amount of the due bill, which is the subject matter of this action, on the ground that an assignment thereof from them was secured by fraud.

Ordered affirmed. —Start, C. J.

A butter specialist gives the following suggestions for keeping the taint of silage from the milk of cows which have it as a ration: The silage should be fed only after milking, the floors should be kept clean and no silage allowed to accumulate in the alleys, no more silage should be fed than will be eaten up clean, corn should not be put into the silo too green, and none of it should be fed in a moldy condition, and, lastly, the stable should be kept well ventilated. In view of the well known susceptibility of milk to odors the above suggestions are timely.

A new idea has lately been hit upon by the proprietors of the Cafe Martin of New York city in the serving of their fancy fruits. An order was placed this season with a Hood river fruit grower for a number of boxes of bright red Spitzenburg apples which should have the word "Martin" appear on the red cheek in golden yellow letters. The grower secured this result by pasting the word cut in paper on the cheek of the apples just before the fruit began to turn red. At picking time these stencils or the obverse of stencils were removed and the fruit carefully packed. It is fair to assume that the process was a tedious one and that the grower got a fancy price for the fruit thus treated.

Some experiments which have been carried on at Murrysville, Pa., along the line of a manufacture of paper of different grades from fibers of the cornstalk seem to show quite conclusively that paper can be made therefrom at about one-half the cost of that manufactured from wood pulp. Provided this situation is as stated a large field would seem to be opened up for the utilizing of hundreds of thousands of tons of stalk that annually go to waste in the corn belt states, while one of the large factors in the destruction of our timber supplies would seem to be removed. The attention of a corn belt congressman has been called to these experiments, and he proposes to ask congress for an appropriation at the coming session which shall be used in the erection of a cornstalk paper plant that the matter may be given a thorough and official testing.

A DANGEROUS DOCTRINE.

It seems that the specialists in the agricultural department at Washington have lately conceived the notion that if the weeds are kept down in a field of corn by hoeing once a week the yield will be as much or more than if tended in the usual way with cultivator. A farmer not far from where the writer lives was asked to give this idea a test, and his report, made a short time ago, is in substance as follows: Six rows twelve rods long were planted in the open field, and during the growing season the only care given the plot was to cut off the weeds once a week with a hoe, while the corn on either side was given the customary treatment with drag and corn plow and also kept clean with hoe. At husking time the four middle rows in the uncultivated plot yielded 301 pounds of corn, while four rows of equal length beside it, cultivated as stated, yielded 261 pounds of corn. According to these figures, the uncultivated corn yielded at the rate of sixty bushels to the acre, while the other yielded but fifty-two bushels. It would seem in view of the enormous loss that is sustained by corn growers of the country annually through lack of proper cultivation of their fields that the above is a mighty risky doctrine for the department at Washington to promulgate. In the first place, so many of the conditions attending the experiment are unknown—namely, the character of the soil, which for the proper circulation of the air and moisture might need little or much cultivation, whether the cultivation given was of the proper kind, how thick the weeds were and how much cultivating the stirring of the soil with a hoe proved to be—that the value of the experiment in proving the idea entertained is largely vitiated. More than all this is the unavoidable fact that even if this hoeing method were preferable the labor situation is such as to make this way of handling any but very limited areas an absolute impossibility. Better would the department devote its energies to proving, as has repeatedly been done, that corn that is cultivated six and seven times during the growing season will yield from eight to twenty bushels more per acre than corn that is cultivated but twice. This is the kind of gospel that needs preaching to the indifferent and careless farmer, who if he were to adopt the hoe method could not be counted on to work the handle as vigorously as would be necessary to give ideal conditions and desired results.

A DEMAND FOR EXPERTS.

One of the boss grafters in a well known western fruit valley gets $5 per day for the time he puts in. This is cited merely to call attention to the fact that any man who will take the pains to equip himself as a practical horticulturist and fruit ranch superintendent can count on getting a generous salary, for there is a lot of money being invested in western orchards, and it is not likely that the wealthy owners will let a matter of $40 or $50 a month stand in the way of their getting the right kind of men to look after their properties. Land that will yield an annual net return of from $300 to $1,500 per acre is going to be well tended both as regards soil and trees, and he is a level headed fellow who fits himself to do this kind of work as it ought to be done.

Farmers living near St. Paul who have the past few months shipped eggs, poultry and other stuff to one commission firm under the inducement of high prices offered find themselves bunkoed, the mushroom commission man back of the swindle having made off with about $3,000 of their money and leaving no tracks behind. He hired a store for a month, bought a typewriter and desk on the installment plan and expended enough energy to write and direct a batch of circular letters, resell the stuff shipped him and cash the drafts paid him. This type of swindle is being perpetrated well nigh every month in the year by grafters in large cities who are able to work their game because gullible victims bite at their bait in the shape of an offer of unusually high produce prices.

SMALL TOWN MARKET DAYS.

There are many small towns over the country which have been holding successful market days of late. These have had a social as well as a commercial aspect. People bring stuff of all descriptions which they want to get rid off to town, while just as many are on hand who want some of the articles which are offered for sale. Merchants profit by increase in sales through special price offers. Quite often a sports and amusement program is arranged, which entertains the crowd during the day and ministers to their fun loving instincts. The market day idea is spreading, and it is well that it is so.

Secured a Big Verdict.

The case of Ole Landro, a traveling salesman, who makes Thief River Falls his home, against the Great Northern Railway company, was tried the first of the week at Warren and the jury awarded Mr. Landro a verdict of $6,500. While riding upon a Great Northern passenger train, Mr. Landro sustained an injury, which has since caused him to walk lame. G. Halvorson, of this city, was attorney for Landro.

HOWELL PLANER AND MATCHER

You no doubt find it a hard matter to sell your rough lumber to advantage because most of your customers want it finished. Furthermore you can get twice as much for your lumber by planing it, making it up into flooring, drop siding, window casing and mouldings, for which there is an unlimited demand at big prices. The Howell Planer and Matcher does all this work to perfection.

You can also make big money by working up all your slabs and waste material into Lath and Shingles. All you need for this purpose is our Lath Mill and Shingle Machine. We build the best and most up-to-date machines of this kind on the market which we can furnish you at manufacturers prices. Keep your plant running all the time. Remember we build complete Saw Mill Plants from top to bottom, all of our own manufacture. Our new Catalog B is just now out. If you have not received it, write to-day. Manufactured by Apple butter is licking good if the juice is removed to make jelly, but it's 150 per cent better if the juice is left in.

The colt may be taught to walk fast by being broken with older horses that are fast rather than poky walkers. The habit early formed will persist in later years.

Cats, like rats and guinea pigs, are said to contract tuberculosis readily, provided they drink milk which contains tuberculosis bacilli, and frequenting dwelling houses as they so often do they may become ready vehicles for spreading the disease.

Some experiments in the thinning of apples have been conducted at the Connecticut experiment station. In one of these the young fruit on two Baldwin trees was thinned, giving an increase in crop value of 77½ cents and $1.83 respectively. Just another instance of where intensive care paid.

In the building of the new big barn the specifications could call for an up to date and adequate system of ventilation, by means of which, even in coldest weather, when the barn is kept tightly closed, the animals may be supplied with an abundance of fresh air. This matter of ventilation is not some college professor's fad, but a question of animal health, profits and good horse sense.

Victoria (B. C.) fruit growers are suspecting contamination to their orchards through fungous and insect pests from the small gardens of householders in the suburban districts, and a house to house canvass is to be made with a view to cleaning things up. Were the conditions appreciated, just such a campaign as this might be started in a good many other fruit growing sections.

It's no use to talk "bein' president of the United States" to boys who are careless about their habits, shiftless, indifferent or lazy; for lads of this description never have been and never will be elevated to this important office. A boy should rustle and do the best for himself, whatever the object held before him. If he has in him and develops the presidential stuff he is so much the gainer.

In the new type of agriculture which is being made use of to regenerate rundown cotton farms in many of the southern states the growing of alfalfa, cowpeas and soy beans is the chief factor. If dairying or stock raising can be added, the work of rebuilding is the more quickly and completely effected. There are one or two farms north of Mason and Dixon's line that need this same kind of medicine.

It has been found as a result of experiments and tests which have been lately made with a view to utilizing the scrub or Jersey pine that grows on abandoned farm and cut over lands in eastern states that the pulp of this species of pine is valuable for the manufacture of bag, news and wrapping paper. This is good news and will help along the government's forest conservation policy by making possible the substitution of this for other more valuable conifers.

It may be viewed as a truism, yet it is worth remembering, that one is hardly justified in pulling up stakes and going to a new locality unless the prospects are good that one can do better financially and get more enjoyment out of life in the new than under the old conditions, and yet a lot of folks are doing this thing every day—selling acres whose output they know and can count on for rosy prospects, but untried returns in the new country to which their wanderlust carries them.

No young man of physical strength, intelligence and enterprise need view with alarm being left on the tender mercies of the cold world if he can rent or buy five acres of land near a good market and owns or can borrow enough money to secure equipment for raising fruits, vegetables and poultry. Some farseeing students of our national economics are looking ahead and contemplating the time when we shall not as a country be able to raise all the foodstuffs which we consume. The plan suggested would therefore seem to help not only the individual, but be a service to society.

When the matter is simmered down, there seems to be mighty little gain in a fellow's scrimping everlastingly and working like a slave from one year's end to another to accumulate a bank account and finally carrying it so far that he ruins his health and loses the power to enjoy the ease and competence which he has striven so hard to attain. It is very much better to let up a bit before the breakdown and avoid the expense as well as the annoyance and discomfort of broken health. A bunch of fellows we know and doubtless a host we don't are inviting just this condition of things by their present gait.

A friend who always takes much pride in his place has finally become disgusted with the cedar hedge, which for many years past has been performing the mission of a high board fence about his premises, and has taken it out. This is a very commendable move, for henceforth passersby will be able to see the stretch of blue grass lawn and the pretty beds of phlox, salvias and asters which always grace it. Incidentally the apples on the nearby trees will be less subject to scab and blight. More of these hedges ought to be rooted out unless, perchance, they serve as a screen for that which is ugly or uncomely.

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. Sixty thousand pairs sold last year. Over two hundred thousand pairs now in use.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

LENNON DOSN'T WANT TO BE A REPRESENTATIVE.

It is quite generally understood that Representative J. J. Opshal will not be a candidate for re-election to represent the Sixty-first Legislative district, and since that impression has gone abroad, there has been much speculation as to who would be candidates for the republican nomination for representative.

One name which was suggested, and which has met with general approval, was that William Lennon of Kelliher. Mr. Lennon is a hard-working republican of the dyed-in-the-wool variety, and has always labored industriouly for the success of the republican ticket. He is a good "mixer", and has friends in every part of the district. It is generally conceded that he would make an excellent representative.

But Mr. Lennon has literally "thrown cold water" on the proposition of running him as a candidate for legislative honors, by declaring emphatically to a representative of the Pioneer that he would not for a moment entertain any proposition, which had in view his candidacy for the legislature. He stated that he could not afford to be a candidate, and what was more had no desire to be a representative; and will not permit the use of his name.

Mr. Lennon stated that any good man from Bemidji, or any qualified candidate, which the people of Bemidji could agree upon, would receive his hearty support and co-operation for election as representative.—Bemidji Pioneer.

Germantown.

Germantown, Nov. 29, 1909—Since the coming of winter threshing has progressed very slowly and as there is a great amount of it still undone it is more than probable that a large number of farmers will not have their grain in the bins before another figure marks the number of the Anno Domini. The greatest trouble seems to be in moving the machines over soft places where the snow protects the ground and water from Jack Frost's bridge-building project that otherwise would now have been well under way.

Conrad Klappenbach recently sold his quarter section of land one half mile west of town to Frank Kainz, the consideration being $1,600, Mr. Klappenbach is favorably mentioned for the place as buttermaker at the Germantown creamery when it opens again next spring.

The Farmers' Club holds its next regular meeting at the home of Louis Hamre, Dec. 5th.

Friends of Henry Paulson, our former buttermaker, are pleased to learn that he has secured the position of buttermaker with the Highlanding creamery for the next year having entered upon his duties there some time ago.

Detlif Dau, Henry Dau, Henry Roller, Carl Klockmann, Ed Klappenbach and Carl Bettin, attended court at Warren last Friday, as principals and witnesses in the Dau vs. Klockman suit which is to be tried in the present term of court. The case was not called, however, and another trip will be necessary this week.

Theodore Evenby made a trip up to Carmel last week.

Climatic or other conditions have caused no small amount of sickness these last days. Among those reported on the sick list lately have been noted, Emil Hanson, Mrs. Skog, Mrs. Roller, M. Johnson and others.

Thanksgiving day found a number of happy dinner parties at different places throughout the country and to our mind comes the glad recollection of one philantrophic home where even your correspondent was remembered and invited to help stow away some excellent turkey. Speaking for him we can truthfully say that he feels he did his duty.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Lutheran church held their annual auction sale on Saturday, realizing some over forty dollars, to be used in repairs for the building.

Miss Wilson, who is teaching school in the district west of here spent Thanksgiving at her home in Thief River Falls.

Sam Dangerfield of Kratka spent a day here last week attending to business matters.

John Clausen some time ago relinquished his interest in Beltrami county and is now again a full fledged citizen of old Grand Plain.

Halvor Levos of Clover Leaf was a caller here on Sunday.

Owen Olson and Olander Johnson leave here this week to work during winter among the Blackduck-timbers.

Preparations are being made for an entertainment and basket sociable, to be given by the Germantown school some time before Christmas. This one is not to fall below the established standard of our school entertainments and a heavy turnout is confidently expected. Watch the Germantown column for a definite announcement as to time.

A new consignment of books has just been added to the public school library.

A party of O. L. Hamre's surveyors passed through last Friday bound for the Reiner country south east of here to make a survey of some 60 miles of ditches out that way.

Louis Hamre is at Warren during the term of District Court, serving on the petit jury.

The mail service between Germantown and Grygla, which was interrupted last summer by bad roads and discontinued temporarily will again be resumed in the near future, an application for the return to the old route having been made some time ago by the carrier. This is by far the most satisfactory arrangement for all concerned, and especially so to the population of the Grygla country who have by the other route not got their mail in anything near the time it takes for passage over this route.

A. D. Maes, State Evangelist of the American Sunday School Union, will be up here to conduct a series of meetings in the Union Chapel the first part of December. Mr. Maes spent a week at this place last summer.

LOTS OF DRY TOWNS NOW

Special Agent Johnson Making Dry Towns in Northern Minnesota at a Rapid Rate.

All the Saloons in Becker and Hubbard Counties Ordered to Quit Business.

Special Agent Johnson, of the Indian department, last Saturday issued orders that will close up a large number of saloons in Northern Minnesota in the Indian country. A few months ago orders were given to close the saloons in Mahnomen and Cass counties and the Indians went to adjoining towns to secure their liquor. It is expected now that the Indians will come to Thief River Falls to secure liquor and if they do and the saloons here sell to them the same order will be issued here. The following is the copy of the last order issued:

"To All Concerned:

"Attention is hereby called to treaty with the Chippewa Indians, act of congress of Feb. 22, 1855 (10 Stat., L. 1165), article 7, of which reads as follows:

"'The laws, which have been or may be enacted by congress, regulating trade and intercourse with the Indian tribes, continue to be in force within the several reservations provided for herein; and those portions of said laws, which prohibit the introduction, manufacture, use of and traffic in ardent spirits, wines or other liquors in the Indian country, shall continue and be in force within the entire boundaries of the country herein ceded to the United States until otherwise provided by congress'.

"Notice is hereby given that on and after Dec. 27, 1909, the above provision will be enforced throughout the following districts in the state of Minnesota:

"1. Throughout all of Becker county.

"2. Throughout all of Hubbard county.

"3. Throughout that portion of Itasca county lying west of range 26 and south of township 147.

"4. Throughout that portion of Norman county lying east of range 45.

"5. Throughout that portion of Polk county lying east of range 45 and south of town 148.

"6. Throughout that portion of Clearwater county lying south of township 148.

"Liquor dealers are hereby warned to have all of their liquors removed from the above-named districts on or before the date given".

Mr. Johnson is stopping at the West Hotel in Minneapolis; and the Minneapolis Journal says of the order:

"Every saloon in Becker and Hubbard counties and every saloon in sections of Itasca, Norman, Polk and Clearwater counties, must close its doors. The saloonmen have been warned to suspend business in the most sweeping order ever issued by the federal government in connection with the sale of liquor in Minnesota.

"The return of Mr. Johnson to Minnesota from California was most unexpected by the saloonkeepers, who have sold to Indians. When he left the state a few weeks ago after closing a few places the proprietors of other places fondly believed they would not be molested.

"But the departure of the government man in charge of the work was but a blind.

"He threw the saloon men off their guard by his announcement of suspension of activity and a trip to California. From California he directed the work. Half a dozen government men were at work in the vicinity of the Indian reservations while Mr. Johnson was gone. The result is this order, which liquor dealers must respect.

"'And I will enforce it'', said Mr. Johnson at the West hotel. 'The government means what it says and when this order goes out, I want it understood that there is no appeal from it. It is final'.

"Becker and Hubbard counties will lose all their saloons and Itasca, Norman and Polk counties all of the saloons in certain sections.

"In Clearwater county, Bagley is the principal town, and all its saloons must close.

"Becker county loses all its twenty-four saloons. There are twelve in Detroit, eight in Frazee, and four in Lake Park.

"Park Rapids is in Hubbard county and has about ten saloons. Laporte, Akeley and Nary are in the same county and they come under the ban.

"There are no saloons in Twin Valley and the order says blind pigs must close their doors. This is in Norman county.

"In Polk county there are Lengby and Fosston with about seven saloons between them.

"Deer River and Ballclub are in Itasca county and the dozen or more saloons in these towns must shut up shop";

Trouble for a Short Time.

There was considerable excitement among the young element of the city last week all because a couple of men, who had designs upon the loose change of the boys and girls fenced in a portion of the Red Lake river and attempted to charge ten cents for the privilege of skating upon the same. The mayor, city council and other were appealed to but they could offer no relief. The young people were advised, however, that no one had any exclusive rights upon the river and as a result they have not been paying anything for the privilege.

It is quite likely that the city council will take the matter of keeping the ice flooded in charge and will give the young element an opportunity to enjoy this healthful outdoor sport the remaining part of the winter free.

Trouble for a Short Time.

There was considerable excitement among the young element of the city last week all because a couple of men, who had designs upon the loose change of the boys and girls fenced in a portion of the Red Lake river and attempted to charge ten cents for the privilege of skating upon the same. The mayor, city council and other were appealed to but they could offer no relief. The young people were advised, however, that no one had any exclusive rights upon the river and as a result they have not been paying anything for the privilege.

It is quite likely that the city council will take the matter of keeping the ice flooded in charge and will give the young element an opportunity to enjoy this healthful outdoor sport the remaining part of the winter free.

A LIVING FROM TWENTY ACRES.

A reader of these notes, a young man living in Brooklyn, who evidently is engaged in some city work, writes inquiring if one having had no agricultural experience could make a living with potatoes, wheat, oats and apples as crops and with a cow and horse as live stock equipment from twenty acres, the tract lying along the Susquehanna river in Wyoming county, Pa., near Tunkhannock. The giving of helpful advice in a case of this kind is not a simple matter, for so much depends upon the land, of which no account is given, and even more upon the man, who frankly states that he has had no experience in farm work. But, assuming that the land is fertile and that the owner not only has the physical strength, but the determination and brains, to do the work which would be necessary in the management of such a tract, we would say that he could make a living on twenty acres, and a good living, besides being independent economically and engaged in a work that would promote his general health. Inasmuch as many other young men are casting about for a change of occupation which will give them independence and a competence in later years, a few suggestions along the lines indicated by this young man's query may be of interest to other readers. The making of a living from a small tract of land implies an intensive type of agriculture, the raising of crops which require more care and give larger returns than the usual field crops, such as corn and small grain. Such crops would include potatoes, onions, celery, raspberries, strawberries, etc., for which there is usually good demand in local as well as more distant markets.

Where possible the vegetable crops which will stand shipment should be raised in carload lots so as to give the advantage of carload rates in shipment. In approaching this new work we would advise our friend to visit and if possible work for a season on a farm of the type which he has in mind to develop his own into. If he cannot do this, he should take advantage of every occasion which offers to acquaint himself by reading agricultural literature and talking with those who have had experience with the problems which he will have before him. Perhaps conditions would suggest the wisdom of growing clover in rotation with wheat and potatoes and a manuring of the soil with commercial or barnyard fertilizers if the place is run down. We would advise our inquirer to look into the matter of keeping poultry in connection with growing vegetables and small fruits, but the price of poultry products and the cost of feed would determine whether this would be a wise move. A most encouraging feature of this movement toward the land is that some of the most conspicuous successes along horticultural as well as agricultural lines are being made by those who have had little or no experience in this field of endeavor, but who have had grit and determination, an open mind and a willingness to take advantage of and to adopt the latest and most approved methods in doing the work in hand. Of all hopeless types under the sun—and there are thousands in the class—the most so are those who have had so much experience that they are dead set in their ways and view with contempt anything that savors of the "new."

KEEPING UP SOIL FERTILITY.

Experiments which have been conducted by the Illinois station along the line of maintaining soil fertility show that the best results have been possible with a crop rotation consisting of wheat, corn, oats and clover, the legume being sowed with both the wheat and oats, one stand being plowed under as green manure for corn and the other mowed once or twice in the early summer of the fourth year and later plowed under for the wheat to be sowed the following spring. Under varying conditions of heat and moisture cowpeas, soy beans, alsike or alfalfa might be substituted for clover. It is the opinion of those having the experiments in hand that all straw and stalks should be returned to the land to keep up its supply of humus. With no stock 1,000 pounds of ground rock phosphate per acre should be applied to the land every four years, with ground limestone for soils that are inclined to be sour. In many of the newer sections of North and South Dakota the practice is followed of burning the straw when the grain has been thrashed out of it. This used to be done in the older settled portions of Nebraska, but after a number of years it was found that the humus in the soil was being seriously impoverished in the process. It is more than likely that this same change is taking place in the Dakota soils, only the situation is not fully appreciated. It is a practice that it is easy to fall into where little or no stock is raised.

In the vicinity of the Greeley (Colo.) beet sugar factories all the pulp which shall be produced this season has been contracted for by sheep feeders at a higher price than has ever before prevailed.

Salt and ashes should be where the hogs may have access to them when they like. Four quarts of the former should be mixed with a bushel of the latter and placed in a trough so that it will not be tramped into the ground.

A law lately passed in New York aims to reveal animals affected with tuberculosis by having them branded on the forehead or right side of the neck with a known mark at least two inches in length. This is in accordance with recently enacted pure food and health laws, enabling the purchaser of an animal to know just what he is getting.

According to figures which have been compiled by experts in the French department of agriculture, a toad during its life is worth $9 to the farm on which it lives, a lizard $9, a swallow $30, a titmouse $8, a robin $4, a bat $80, an owl $12, a screech owl $16 and a fern owl $30. If these figures are reliable the American farmer might well take up the study of ornithology.

There is no getting around the fact that the neat appearance of urban or rural premises, as shown in tastefully painted buildings, well kept lawn, shipshape outbuildings and clean fence corners, has much to do with determining the price at which a property will sell. Good looks appeal to the prospective buyer, and he is not necessarily a fool because he is influenced by these considerations.

A developing, thinking boy is always interested in finding out some new and better way to do things. For this reason he will naturally be interested in reading an up to date farm paper that he may find how progressive farmers are doing in other localities. If there is no journal of this kind in the house the lad's father should take one for him, and incidentally the old man may get some good out of it himself.

It is only fair to the dairymen who furnish the residents of towns and cities with a supply of pure milk from tuberculin tested cows that the latter—the consumers—should pay a price which will cover the added expense which the dairymen are put to in testing their herds and the extra care they have to exercise in producing a germ and filth free product. There are two sides to this matter of a pure milk supply, and this is the other one.

The rules adopted this season by the Hood River Fruit Growers' association having to do with the handling of the apple crop provide, among other things, that the fruit must be taken from the trees only in the early hours of the day on cool days. The purpose of this is that the fruit shall be cool when picked and kept so while being boxed and placed in storage. This precaution greatly enhances the shipping and keeping qualities of the apples.

The amount of wheat exported from Argentina during the interval from Jan. 1 to Aug. 6, 1909, was 89,672,000 bushels as compared with 121,570,000 bushels for the same period last year. These figures may have had something to do in way of accounting for the Patten wheat cleanup, which officials of the department of agriculture were at a loss to understand on the basis of wheat stores in the United States at the time it was pulled off.

If any reader of these notes would put down eggs for use during the coming months a very satisfactory way is to take the strictly fresh and clean product and immerse them in a solution made by adding to nine quarts of cold boiled water one quart of water glass, obtainable at the drug store. The receptacle in which the eggs are to be stored, preferably a stone jar, should be scalded out carefully and set in a cool place. Eggs treated in this manner should keep from seven to ten months.

The cold snap which swept over the country about the middle of October caused utmost concern to many fruit growers in Colorado, where apples are a primary crop. At Grand Junction, receiving warning of the impending freeze, the ranch owners appealed to the townspeople to come to their aid in the harvesting of the fruit and in tending night fires in the orchards to keep the fruit which there was not time to gather from freezing. The response was hearty, and as a result the bulk of the crop was saved.

One of the much debated subjects among dairymen in the past has been whether the butter fat content of milk is affected by the character of the ration given the cow. The majority of dairymen seem agreed that fat cannot be fed into milk, and this view seems still further confirmed by some tests which have recently been made at Wye, England. In the test oils were fed in varying quantity to several cows, which were given grass pasture twenty days at the close of the test period. It was found that there was no increase in the flow of milk and no increase in percentage of butter fat. It was noticed, however, that the quality and texture of the butter were affected by the character of the oils fed, but this was all.

MINNESOTA MAN A VICTIM

Tonias P. Lien of Rushville Killed by Mrs. Belle Gunness.

Another victim of Mrs. Belle Gunness, arch murderess of Laporte, Ind., has been identified as Tonias Peter Lien of Rushford, this state. Samuel P. Lien, who recently returned from a sea cruise of three years in the Pacific ocean, identified a watch that had been found in the burned ruins of the Gunness house as one that belonged to his brother Tonias.

On his return home from sea last week Lien learned that his brother had gone to Laporte on April 2, 1907, following correspondence with Mrs. Gunness, whose advertisements for a husband he had read in a Norwegian paper, and had not been heard from by relatives since. Tonias had taken $1,000 with him, sewed in his clothes, to pay a mortgage on Mrs. Gunness' farm, it was learned. In return for this money Mrs. Gunness was to become his wife.

Lien's body was one of the ten horribly mutilated corpses found buried about the Gunness yard.

WHISKY IN STOVEPIPES

Indian Agent Makes Peculiar Discovery at Cass Lake.

Deputy Special Indian Agent Larsen, after thoroughly searching the place of Archie Siddon, former saloon man, at Cass Lake, found a half barrel of whisky. He also found several gallons neatly tucked away in a slot machine under a wood pile beneath rags. The liquor was confiscated and destroyed.

Larson also raided Bena and found several gallons, belonging to an old saloonkeeper named Quinn, in teapot, water kettle, flour barrel and stovepipe. All were destroyed. Larsen says there is more in Cass Lake and he will get it before he is done.

ONE LIFE LOST WITH SHIP

Lake Boat Goes to Bottom and Sailor Goes With It.

One life was lost and nine sailors barely escaped when the Louis Pahlow went down near Duluth with a load of lumber. When only two miles from shore the steel cable parted, putting the vessel at the mercy of the seas. The government station at Sturgeon Bay went to the rescue of the storm-swept vessel after a perilous journey and took off nine men. Stephen Deuzer, Sturgeon Bay, lashed himself to a spar, refused to leave and went down with the boat.

WARROAD FIRE VICTIM DIES

Eighth Fatality Due to Explosion of Gasoline.

Nels Jensen, the Roseau county farmer who was terribly burned while trying to rescue his wife and children from the flames, after an explosion following the use of gasoline instead of kerosene in lighting a fire, died at Bethesda hospital at Crookston, in horrible agony, a week after the accident occurred.

Flesh from his fingers and limbs was hanging in shreds.

His wife and children all perished in the fire.

TWO PERISH IN RED LAKE

Father and Son Lose Lives When Their Boat Capsizes.

Word has reached Bemidji of the drowning of Frank Gordan and his father in Red lake.

The two Gordans, who lived on the Tamarac river, were at Shotley buying winter provisions and had made their purchases and started home in a boat. When but a short distance out the boat capsized.

The boat has been found, but no trace of the bodies has been discovered.

Killed by Snowplow.

Peter Johnson of Moorhead, an employe of the Northern Pacific, who had served on the section force for the past twelve years, was instantly killed by a Russell snowplow which struck him while he was at work in the Dilworth switch yards. The blade of the plow cut off one of his legs and sliced up his body.

Girl Killed by Her Brother.

Louise Gagnon, the nine-year-old daughter of Victal Gagnon, living near Quiring postoffice, in Itasca county, was shot and accidentally killed by her ten-year-old brother, who aimed a loaded rifle at her and pulled the trigger. The girl expired with scarcely a perceptible tremor.

Miner Guilty of Murder.

Frank Sadler of Ely, a miner, was found guilty of murder in the first degree in the district court at Virginia. It took the jury twenty-five hours to agree. Sadler killed Lawrence Kopro at Ely Aug. 9 last, mistaking him for Tony Jenko, a companion, with whom he had quarreled.

Whirled to Death by Shaft.

Ed Reinhardt, a grain dealer and one of Bird Island's leading business men, was instantly killed while he was working in the basement of his elevator. His clothing caught in the shafting. He was whirled around several times before the clothing tore and dropped him.

Mistaken for a Deer.

John East thought Otto Zebott was a deer as Zebott was walking along a country road about two miles from Duluth, and discharged a rifle at him. The bullet shattered Zebott's left arm and was imbedded in the skin of his body above his heart.

THE BISHOP STAYED.

He Risked a Row, but Didn't Have to Leave His Bed.

The bishop of a southern diocese was once making a missionary journey through Arkansas and the Indian Territory, and on his arrival at Natchez he said to the landlord of a hotel, "I have been traveling for a week, day and night, in a mail wagon, and I want a comfortable room."

"Sorry," said the landlord, "but I don't believe there's a vacant room in Natchez. There's a horse race, a Methodist conference and a political convention in the city, and every house is full up. The only thing I can give you is a shakedown." Then, observing the bishop's tired face, he added: "The best room in my house is rented to a noted gambler, who usually remains out all night and seldom gets in before breakfast. If you will take the risk you shall have his room, but if he should come in there'll be a row, I'll promise you that."

The bishop decided to take the risk. About 4 o'clock in the morning the gambler returned and promptly shook the bishop by the arm.

"Get out of here or I'll put you out!" he shouted.

The bishop, the gentlest of men, raised himself on one elbow so that it brought the muscles of his arm into full relief.

"My friend," he began quietly, "before you put me out will you have the kindness to feel of my arm?"

The gambler put his hand on the bishop's arm.

"Stranger," he then said respectfully, "you can stay."—Youth's Companion.

KEENLY INTERESTED.

Lincoln's Question After the Committeeman Had Finished.

Just after the second battle of Bull Run the Boston chamber of commerce decided that President Lincoln was not prosecuting the war with enough celerity to conserve the interests of business, and so it appointed a committee to go to Washington and remonstrate with him upon his dilatory tactics. The committee was headed by a Mr. Pierce.

"We found," he said, "a man who looked as if he had lost all the friends he ever had in the world, who invited us to take seats and inquired our business. As I was the spokesman, I opened our case, and as I proceeded the president's face relaxed. By and by he smiled and betrayed actual interest, and by the time I concluded he was almost in a broad grin. After I had finished he inquired if that was all I had to say, and on my saying that I thought it was he asked if some of the other gentlemen wouldn't like to say something. They replied that they thought I had fully covered the ground. And then," continued Mr. Pierce, "what do you suppose this solemn man did? Well, he just moved his chair over to mine, smoothed his trousers over his knee, then reached over and smoothed mine down, too, and then, with a queer look, which none of us will ever forget, he said, 'Mr. Pierce, did you ever notice what a difference there is in legs?'

"What did we do? We grabbed our hats and took the first train for Boston, and we never dared to report!"—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Carbuncle.

Carbuncles, to which the ancients attributed fantastic properties, were in reality rubies. They served, it was said, to give light to large serpents or dragons whose sight had been enfeebled by age. They bore them constantly between their teeth and laid them down only for eating and drinking. It was even claimed that the carbuncle emitted light in darkness and that the thickest clothing could not stop its rays. Without all the exaggeration of such legends it was believed for a long time that rubies contained luminous rays. The truth is that they have double refraction and send out the red rays with unequaled brilliancy. Traversed in a vacuum by an electric current, they are illuminated with a red fire of extreme intensity. The greatest heat does not change their form or their color.

Old Days on the Stage.

I have known a dress coat handed from one to another in the wings several times during a performance. It was a current idea that white cotton stockings assumed the appearance of silk from the front by making a heavy line of white chalk on the shin bone. A white tie was easily made from a strip of note paper, and even a shirt front could be managed from highly glazed note paper. White cotton gloves were de rigueur in place of the more expensive kid ones. A comedian, having no black stockings, once blacked his legs. After the show he asked the stage manager, "Do we play this piece again?" "Yes; next week." "Oh, then I need not wash my legs!" —From "Ramblings of an Old Mummer," by Russell Craufurd.

Might Have Been Worse.

LITERARY FORGERIES

Versatility and Cleverness of a Shrewd Scotch Lad.

FOOLED THE CONNOISSEURS.

He Poured Forth His Extraordinary Documents In Profusion to Supply the Demand and Was Finally Exposed by a Simple Little Slip.

From the days of Isidor Mercater, who forged letters of the bishops of Rome with such skill and success that they were treasured for centuries in the Roman archives, to the days of Ireland, the notorious forger of Shakespearean plays and letters, and Chatterton, the clever and ill fated boy who died miserably in his attic, there have never been wanting unprincipled men who could forge ancient manuscripts so cleverly that leading experts have been deceived.

But for versatility and cleverness none of these forgers of past centuries could approach the cleverness of a young Scotchman who years ago produced a long succession of forged manuscripts which completely baffled the connoisseurs of the world. The true and full story of these remarkable forgeries is almost unknown and is so extraordinary that it may well be told.

It was in Edinburgh that this incomparable forger practiced his arts, and it was by an accident that he was tempted to embark on a career which, after a spell of great success, involved him in disaster. One day the principal of an Edinburgh firm of lawyers told one of his clerks to clear out several boxes full of old documents, the accumulation of many years. Among them were several documents and autographs the value of which the clerk was quick to recognize, and he had no difficulty in finding purchasers for them. As the supply was limited and the demand constantly increasing it occurred to him to supplement the genuine documents with others of his own manufacture, and as he developed a remarkable skill in forging and had already won the confidence of a large number of collectors he found it easy to dispose of as many forgeries as he could produce at very profitable prices.

Many of them were sold to collectors in different parts of the world, others were disposed of by auction, and the remainder were pawned and sold as unredeemed pledges. These forgeries covered a very wide range and included autographs and letters by Cromwell, Mary, queen of Scots; James VI., Prince Charlie, John Knox, Rob Roy, Burns, Scott, Thackeray, Carlyle, Salisbury, Gladstone, Lord Nelson and many other men of note as well as vast quantities of Jacobite correspondence.

So cleverly were the forgeries executed that the largest purchaser of Scott's letters was a gentleman who as a boy had carried most of the great author's manuscripts from Abbotsford to his Edinburgh publishers and was as familiar with Scott's handwriting as his own, and the head of the firm that published Lord Byron's works purchased forty-seven letters purporting to be Lord Byron's for the sum of £125 7s. 6d. A very large collection of these manuscripts was purchased for a sum of over £4,000 and presented to the Lenox library, New York, where they were for some time regarded with reverence as the chief treasure of the library, and another collection was presented to the city of Edinburgh.

Although these forgeries were poured on the market in such profusion, no suspicion seems to have been aroused. They were accepted without question by the experts and found ready purchasers at large prices. Whether the forger's success made him careless or whether it was due to one of those remarkable oversights to which the most skillful criminals seem liable and which bring their career to a close, the forger was at last exposed through a mistake of which such a clever man should scarcely have been capable.

Among the many forgeries he produced a poem signed by Robert Burns. It was called "The Poor Man's Prayer" and opened with this stanza:

> Amidst the more important toils of state,
> The counsels laboring in the patriotic soil;
> Though Europe from thy voice expect her fate,
> And thy keen glance extend from pole to pole.

This poem, which consisted of nineteen verses, might well have escaped detection with the rest but for the fact that a gentleman to whom the poem was shown discovered the identical verses in the London Magazine of 1766 in a poem addressed to the Earl of Chatham by one Simon Hodge, laborer.

Thus it appeared that if the verses were actually written by Burns the poet must have opened them under the pseudonym of Simon Hodge at the very immature age of a poet of seven years. Suspicion once aroused, doubt was at once cast on the hundreds of other documents which had emanated from the same source. The Lenox collection was submitted to the experts of the British museum and pronounced "a worthless lot of forgeries," and collectors all the world over awoke to the painful discovery that their treasures of old manuscripts were scarcely worth the paper they were written on. The forger's career was brought to a sudden termination. He was brought up for trial and sentenced to a term of imprisonment, thus closing a career of forgery which for daring, cleverness and success has perhaps never been equaled.—New York Press.

WHAT IS A WHITE MAN?

A Puzzling Problem For the Racial Investigator.

The chief of the naturalization bureau at Washington is of the opinion that the "average man in the street" understands distinctly what a "white" man is. Apparently some persons can master a subject without studying it at all, while others who have looked into it deeply are not so dogmatically certain as the "average man in the street."

For example, the encyclopedias tell us that mankind was divided by Blumenbach into five races—namely, Caucasian, Mongolian, Ethiopian, American (Indian) and Malay. The words "Caucasian" and "white" are used synonymously. This classification was first published in 1781 and must have been known to our national legislators when in 1802 they passed the first naturalization law.

The Caucasian race includes Arabs, who are certainly no "whiter" than the Turks, yet Turks, the official says, cannot be naturalized because they are not "white."

We are also told by the naturalization bureau that the Hindoo is not "white" within the meaning of the statute. But the encyclopedia says that it is a great error to separate the Hindoo from the Caucasian race. The Hindoo, it thinks, is much nearer the "white" race than the Arab.

To puzzle the racial investigator still further, while everything is so clear to the "average man in the street," we are told by the encyclopedias that the original Caucasians—that is, the inhabitants of the Caucasus—are no longer regarded as Caucasians. They have been thrown out of the "white" camp and forced to go over to the Mongol.

Nor is the enigma any nearer solution when we are told by the naturalization bureau that Asiatics cannot be naturalized, but that Siberians can, although Siberians may be anything from Russians to Mongolians or Mongol-Turco-Tartars.—Boston Globe.

AN ARCTIC TRAGEDY.

The Body That Was Seen Floating In the Icy Water.

On Aug. 30 we arrived at Rudolf island, the most northern of the Franz Josef group and simply a mass of ice and high glaciers, where we had planned to spend the winter. While cruising near Northbrooke island I saw one day from the "crow's nest" a singular dark body just awash on the surface of the water. As we came nearer and nearer I was possessed by a rather unusual desire to know what this dark mass was. Putting up my glasses, I gave the order for "dead slow," and we passed the object closely on the starboard side. I saw clearly that it was the body of a man clothed in a great skin coat, with the usual hood, and with mittens on the hands. The face was not discernible, but it dawned on me suddenly that this might be the remains of the Swedish balloonist Andree, who had been lost in the arctic about two years before, or perhaps one of the men who had been lost in the Abruzzi expedition.

I was about to stop the steamship and procure the body when it occurred to me that to take a corpse on board would destroy the good spirit and courage of the members of the polar party, for there is a general superstition among sailors that a ship is doomed when a dead body is on board. The first officer and myself were the only ones who witnessed this ghastly spectacle, and neither mentioned the fact, fearing that the discovery would cast a shadow over the entire party. We have both always believed that this was the body of Andree, and I have often regretted that it had not been in my power to give him decent burial.—Captain Edwin Coffin of the Ziegler Polar Expedition in National Magazine.

The Family Tree Grew Backward.

A Kansas City man married, and his mother-in-law came to live with him. About a year later a friend met him and asked:

"Has there been any increase in your family since we last met?"

"Well, yes. There's one more of us."

"Well! Glad to hear it. Boy or girl?"

"Neither. It's my wife's mother's mother, who has come to live with us."

The first man was silent a moment; then he said, "It looks to me, old man, as if your posterity had got headed in the wrong direction."—Kansas City Times.

The Rhyming Speller.

A correspondent mentions the difficulty experienced by budding authors in spelling words in which diphthongs "ei" and "ie" appear. An easy manner to recall the order of precedence of the vowels is contained in an ancient rhyme:

> "I" before "e"
> Except after "c"
> Or when sounded like "a"
> In "neighbor" and "weigh."

MANY FARMS ARE ABANDONED

For Some Reason or Other Agriculture Seems To Be On the Decline in Sweden—Twelve Thousand Idle Farms in Norrland and Dalarne—Government Authorities Alarmed Over the Situation—Things Are Different in Skane.

SWEDEN.

It is a noticeable fact that agricultural pursuits seem to be on the decline in Sweden. Just where the trouble lies, is difficult to say, but certain it is, that there is something radically wrong somewhere. During the past few decades not less than 12,000 farms have been abandoned up in Norrland and Dalarne. It seems, too, that the same thing has taken place in other parts of the country, in fact abandoned farms are a common sight all over the country. In 1870 more than 72 per cent of the entire Swedish population were engaged in agriculture, such as stock raising and general farming. Meanwhile the percentage of those engaged in industrial pursuits increased from 15 to 29 per cent and those engaged in commercial pursuits from 5 to 11 per cent. During the years 1871-1875 Sweden exported grain to foreign countries for about $7,000,000 a year, and during the years of 1886-1890, she imported grain for about $800,000 worth a year and she is at the present time importing more grain than ever. This fact is alarming the government authorities in no small degree, and as emigration is receiving a fresh impetus from labor troubles, etc., they are now becoming doubly apprehensive. It seems that the section in Sweden which takes care of itself best so far as agricultural pursuits are concerned is Skane. About three thousand cars are engaged every hour of the day and night in carrying beets from the country to the sugar factories. The average weight of a load of beets is from seven to eight tons. All cars that can be spared in Sweden have been sent to Skane for the "beet campaign," as it is popularly called down there.

There is no country in the world which has a better set of roads than Sweden. At the end of the year 1895 Sweden had 59,550 kilometers of country roads, all in very good shape. In the northern section of the kingdom the mileage was only about 4.3-10 kilometers a hundred square kilometers, while in the southern part the corresponding figure amounted to thirty-two kilometers a square kilometer. Since 1840 the state has, to an ever increasing extent, contributed towards keeping the roads in good condition. In that year a state appropriation of $20,000 was made for new roads and for general road repairs. These appropriations have been continually increased until in the year 1900 an amount of $267,000 was granted for that purpose. By these means a length of road of about 8,000 miles has been constructed or improved since 1840. The construction of new roads has of late chiefly been carried on in the north of Sweden. During the years 1841 and 1900 state appropriations of about 21,000,000 crowns were granted for the construction of new highways and the improvement of the old ones, amounting to more than $8,540,000. The condition of the roads has been greatly improved of late years and are in splendid condition, especially in the northern section of the country.

An exchange says: "Evidently emigration from Sweden and Norway has not ceased. From Jan. 8 to Sept. 8 not less than 12,911 Swedes have left their homes for America. From port of Bergen, Norway, no less than 2,636 emigrated to the United States and Canada, from January to October of the present year. Nearly all of these came from that city or that vicinity. During the same time of the year 1908, the number was only 1,652.

Swedish-Americans are sending large amounts of money to friends and relatives in the homeland. Last year there were sent from the United States 159,722 money orders, representing a sum amounting in Swedish money to not less than 12,680,841 crowns. Thus it is that the hand of friendship is extended over the Atlantic and little Sweden has more friends in America than on any other place on earth.

There is an appalling numbpeer of consumptives in Stockholm. Last year there were not less than 344 persons who died from consumption and this number it appears is a great increase over that of former years. From inflammation o fthe lungs there were 506 victims and from cancer 432. The death rate of illegitimate children is also increasing very rapidly.

A London paper states that it believes that the French author Anatole France will this year be awarded the Nobel Literary prize and expresses its satisfaction over the choice. Thomas Alva Edison has been prominently mentioned for prizes in physics and chemistry.

A treaty has been made by Sweden and Russia, which grants the members of the consular system of each country more liberties and privileges. It is believed that this will tend to further strengthen the friendly relations between the two countries.

The Esais Tegner Fund has now reached the respectable sum of 14,500 crowns. Just how soon the statue will be erected is not known. About 20,000 crowns will be needed.

NORWAY.

The general election in Norway, says an exchange editorially, which has been in progress for a month, is over at last, and it appears that the new Storthing will be antagonistic to the present radical ministry. This means that Prime Minister Knudsen and his associates, who have held office by grace of a coalition that had a narrow majority of three in the Storthing, will have to turn their portfolios over next January to a new ministry made up of conservatives and moderate liberals. This latter party has elected 64 members of the Storthing, a clear majority of five, while the consolidated Left and the Socialists who, by combining, managed to turn out the Lovland and install the Knudsen ministry. The balloting has gone against them decidedly, although it was expected that the granting of full suffrage rights to the women of Norway would help the Socialists. It is not yet known upon whom the Conservatives will unite for prime minister, but four names are heard: Professor Stang of the University of Christiania, whose father and grandfather before him were premier; General Bratlie of Christiania, who is the real Conservative leader; Christian Michelson of Bergen, who won fame as premier at the time of the dissolution of the union with Sweden, and who is a moderate Liberal, and his protege, Mr. Konow, also of Bergen. The real choice, it is said, lies between Bratlie and Konow, as Professor Stang is out of sympathy with his party, and Mr. Michelson is disinclined to re-enter active political life. The political overturn in Norway will, according to many, mean an end to the policy of "exaggerated government control over private business." The campaign turned largely around the Knudsen ministry's policy of protecting the water powers and claiming them for the state at the expiration of the franchise grants. A law was passed by the Storthing limiting such grants to eighty years, at the expiration of which the powers, except those under 1,000 horse power, revert to the state, with all the works by which they are controlled. The Conservatives would like to repeal this law, but will scarcely do so, unless they offer an acceptable substitute. The Norwegian protectorate is thought to be strongly for conservation of water power, despite the results of the election, and the Conservatives will have to proceed with great caution in striving to undo the radical legislation. When the Strothing meets next January, there will be lively times in the political affairs of Norway. Meanwhile the Socialists and their allies of the extreme left, seem to have suffered a decided setback.

Norwegian papers state that about 5,000 Norwegian-Americans are going to spend the winter in Norway. About 10 per cent of them are expected to settle for good in Norway. Nearly all of them have saved money in America, and most of them have spent from six to ten years there. A few of them have spent as much as forty years there. Quite a few of them come to Norway every fall and return to America in the spring, to resume work as seamen on the Great Lakes, where 2,000 Norwegians are occupied every summer. Most of the Norwegian birds of passage of this kind own small farms in the vicinity of Larvik and Tonsberg. About one hundred Norwegian-Americans bought real estate in Norway last year. It is estimated that the winter visitors will spend about $500,000 during the winter.

Emigration from Norway will be very much larger during the year 1909 than it was during the year previous, though hardly as large as it was the year 1907. In that year the number who left Norway was 22,135, but last year the number was reduced to 8,497. During the first six months of the present year 9,986 left the fatherland for other parts. The United States received the bulk of these sturdy Norsemen.
